Chatham Park: Following the Creation of the Best Master Planned Community Yet? In this capstone, students will explore the birth of Chatham Park, the triangle's newest "city," which is currently in the process of being developed in Chatham County on the banks of both the Haw River and Jordan Lake. Students will identify the main stakeholders and organizational units involved in creating a new "city" within an existing critical watershed, and will create a case study that showcases the participating organizations, planning documents, environmental regulatory permitting processes, and internal and external community concerns and needs. Students will also look for examples of other planned developments in North Carolina or nationwide that have been successful, and will be encouraged to draw conclusions about successes or missed opportunities in the Chatham Park development process. Class will meet in 2321 Knapp-Sanders.

DESCRIPTION:

This seminar focuses on understanding the physical geography of mountain environments and the processes that have created them, shaped them, and sustained them. There are several reasons for studying the environments of mountains: (a) they reveal integrative earth systems processes that can be readily observed and understood; (b) the processes are not oversimplified, but have spatial complexity at scales that can be methodically analyzed; and (c) mountains often reveal the intricate dynamics of coupled human-natural systems. We will explore mountain environments by concentrating on processes that shape the landscape, patterns that are apparent because of those active processes, and how the concept of scale (both through space and time) define the patterns that we observe when go on a hike or when we drive across the country. We will draw examples from different environments, including the Appalachian Mountains, the Rocky Mountains, and the Andes.

DESCRIPTION:

Globalization is a word we hear every day, but what does it mean for us in local places? Specifically, what can an understanding of globalization tell us about Carolina and nearby places? This seminar weaves together perspectives on globalization with hands-on exploration of Carolina and its place in today’s global knowledge economy, and the University’s founding in relation to the globalizing forces of that day. Our focus will shift back and forth between the global and the local, even to the microscale of our campus. We will learn through a variety of experiences and approaches, including fieldwork, old documents, and some introductory GIS (geographic information systems) exercises in addition to readings, class discussion, and group work. By the end of the seminar, students will not only have an understanding of globalization and the very real connections between the global and the local, but also a unique perspective on our university.

DESCRIPTION:
The seminar first describes today's fundamental sources of energy: oil, natural gas and coal, how and where to find them, and the latest statistics on how long the present reserves will last. We will then explore alternative energy resources and why it is so important for society to understand that fossil fuel reserves are finite, and will be depleted in 40 years (cheap oil) or in 200 years (coal). The course stimulates student participation through class debates (e.g., Can nuclear energy become a viable and safe substitute for coal?, Is the current US energy policy a threat to national security?).

REGISTRATION PROCEDURES:
*First-year students who are not enrolled in a fall 2018 FYS will register online when their registration appointment begins.
*First-year students who enrolled in a fall 2018 FYS will be able to enroll in a spring 2019 FYS beginning Monday, November 19th (12:01am).

GLBL 481H.001 | NGO Politics
TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Erica Johnson. Enrollment = 24.
GLBL 481H.001: NGO Politics is an interdisciplinary exploration of what NGOs do, how do they do it, and how can societies and policymakers evaluate their activities. No prerequisites are required.

Dr. Erica Johnson is a Teaching Associate Professor and Director of Graduate Studies in the Curriculum in Global Studies. Her research and teaching interests are in comparative politics and political economy, with particular focus on post-Soviet state-society relations. Her research explores how authoritarian governments in post-Soviet Central Asia manipulate health care provision in order to gain legitimacy and regime survival. In addition, she has ...

DESCRIPTION:
This course deals with critical issues, in the broadest possible context, that dominated the twentieth century: the rise of fascism out of the carnage of World War One and the Bolshevik revolution to which the war and Czarist Russia’s involvement in it helped contribute. As the semester unfolds, drawing on a variety of historical and documentary films, and literature (memoirs, novels), we will take a comparative look at singular personalities like Lenin, Stalin and Hitler and examine the role played by such key figures in historical events of this magnitude. More towards the end of the semester, we glance briefly at the situation created in Western and Eastern Europe by the defeat of fascism and contemplate the origins and evolution of the cold war. We conclude with a consideration of the dissolution and democratization of Eastern European countries, the collapse of the Soviet Union, and, against the tragic background of the past, the recent reemergence of conflict between Russia and the West.

REGISTRATION PROCEDURES:
*First-year students who are not enrolled in a fall 2018 FYS will register online when their registration appointment begins.
*First-year students who enrolled in a fall 2018 FYS will be able to enroll in a spring 2019 FYS beginning Monday, November 19th (12:01am).

DESCRIPTION:
This seminar examines two key themes in modern cultural and intellectual history: the importance of travel in the lives and cultural identities of American writers and the important role of European cities in the evolution of modern American cultural identities. We shall focus on a historical era in which American writers were especially drawn to Europe as an alternative to the social and cultural life in the United States; and we'll discuss how the encounter with Europe influenced these writers as they defined their national identities as well as their views of politics, social relations, gender identities, literature, art and Western cultural traditions. The seminar is based on the assumption that travel has become one of the most influential personal experiences in modern times. In short, we shall explore the connection between travel, writing and personal identities. This is a class for people who like to read about personal experiences and are intrigued by foreign travel. The assigned texts include works by women and men such as Margaret Fuller, Mark Twain, Henry James, Edith Wharton, Gertrude Stein and Ernest Hemingway; and the cities we'll discuss include Paris, London, Rome, Venice and Athens.

HIST 072H.001 | Women's Voices: Twentieth Century European History in Female Memory
M, 3:35 pm - 6:05 pm. Instructor(s): Karen Hagemann. Enrollment = 24.
The seminar examines twentieth century European history through the lens of women's autobiographical writings. It explores women's voices from different generational, social and national backgrounds. We will read and discuss autobiographical texts by five women, who grew up in middle class families in Austria, Britain, France and Germany and wrote about their lives in the first half of the twentieth century. They all tried to make a difference in society and politics: Alice Salomon (1872-1948), a liberal Jewish-German social reformer and activist of the German middle class women's movement; Vera Brittain (1893-1970), a British volunteer nurse during World War I, who became after the war a peace activist and writer; Toni Sender (1888-1964), a German-Jewish socialist and one of the first female parliamentarians in Weimar Germany, who, like Salomon, after the Nazi's takeover in 1933 had to flee Germany; Genevieve De Gaulle-Anthonoz (1920-2002), a French resistance fighter during World War II and a survivor of the women's concentration camp Ravensbrück; and Ruth Klüger (1931-), an Austrian-Jewish student who survived Auschwitz and became a professor in the U.S. The overarching theme of the seminar is the struggle of

Description:
This seminar addresses one of the most challenging topics in American and Latin American history: how to understand what is often called simply "the conquest," la conquista. For nineteenth-century historians writing in English and Spanish, it was a relatively clear-cut matter of epic battles and conquistadores. Spaniards won in a walkover; the "bronze race" suffered tragic defeat. Today, the conquest (or encounter, or invasion) no longer looks this way to historians. New sources, methods, and approaches have taken the field. Yet as our perspectives shift, our histories of la conquista still elicit strong feelings. Why? What's at stake in the narration of this charged history? Whose versions of events tend to dominate? In this seminar, we will pay close attention to the sources for understanding the past, and to ways of narrating it. Students will explore the Wilson Library's remarkable Flatow Collection of sixteenth- and seventeenth-century chronicles, and handle documents from the Manuscript Division's holdings from colonial Popayán. Students will be expected to write frequent responses to our sources, participate in class discussions, and craft a final essay on a topic of particular interest.

Second Example:

Twentieth-Century Native America

The idea that American Indian communities would continue to exist in the year 2000 would have confounded late nineteenth-century federal policymakers. By that time, the Native population had collapsed, the tribal land base had been all but destroyed, and the allotment and assimilation juggernaut pledged to "Kill the Indian to Save the Man." At the dawn of the new millennium, however, it was the system of colonial administration - not the indigenous peoples subjected to it - that appeared anachronistic. Against terrible odds and in defiance of dominant expectations, Native communities endured.

"Twentieth-Century Native America" explores this complex and fascinating story. Readings, lectures, and recitation sections will carry students across Native America from the late nineteenth to the early twenty-first centuries. Along the way, we will engage critically important issues, such as identity construction and contestation, the shifting meanings of sovereignty and citizenship, and the problems of blood and belonging.
This course is cross-listed with American Studies 235.

TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Louise McReynolds. Enrollment = 24.

History teachers often assign novels that capture the essence of the era. When they show movies, however, they tend to prefer filmic recreations on an historical event. These movies illustrate the age in which they were produced better than they do the event in question, so class discussion centers around accuracy and objectivity. This course takes a different approach, and treats films as primary sources for studying the historical context in which they were made. Beginning with the development of narrative film in 1908, it will trace change by looking sequentially at those nationally specific genres that had repercussions beyond national borders. The primary historical themes will be the repercussions of two world wars in the United States and its European allies and enemies. Both wars played a pivotal role in the rise of communism as an alternative to the liberal democracies that consistently proved unable to fulfill their utopian aspirations. But nor could communism meet its ideological expectations, and this course ends in 1991, when Frances Fukuyama’s ballyhooed end of history with the collapse of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Prerequisite: HIST 398 / Undergraduate Seminar in History
HIST 395-001/Research Related Skills: Taking Your Research Public
In this course, students who have previously taken HIST 398, the capstone research class, will take their research to the next level. Now that they have worked with primary sources and written an article-length paper, students will have the opportunity to prepare their research project for multiple public audiences. Students will learn how to improve their discussion of their contribution to the field (the ¿so what¿ question), edit and prepare their papers for submission to undergraduate journals, and learn to distill their arguments for public presentation through panels, conference papers, and poster sessions.

This Research-Related Skills course will ask UNC modern university students to carry out historical research centering on the world of higher education in the European Middle Ages. What was the nature of medieval education in monasteries, cathedral schools, and especially universities? What subjects did students study and why? What role did Christian beliefs play in their education? What careers did students hope to pursue after their formal education ended? To answer questions like these, students will develop a research project of their own design centered on the close analysis of original evidence, i.e. a primary source in translation (a theological tract, scientific manual, biblical commentary, textbook, and/or other texts relating to theology, law, medicine, astronomy, rhetoric, history and more). They will engage and critique existing scholarship on the subject and connect their work to the bigger picture of medieval education. As part of this one-credit course, students will present their findings during University Research Week in April (either at the poster session or in a conference presentation).

HIST 398-001: My Hometown
My Hometown will complete historical research projects based on topics related to their hometowns. Hometown here is loosely defined, and can range from a choice of childhood home, ancestral or adopted hometown, or current residence. This course will use the theme of the Hometown to introduce students to historical research methodologies by encouraging them to deeply investigate a site with which they are already deeply familiar and presumably interested.

HIST 398 sections are restricted to History majors until two weeks into the enrollment period.
At that time the restrictions will be removed and all students, regardless of major, will be able to enroll if there are seats available.

HIST 398-002: Cold War Summits
At key moments of the Cold War, world leaders met face-to-face to try to solve international crises and lay the foundations for peace. In some cases they succeeded, in others they failed. Regardless of the outcome, each of these meetings—from the end of the Second World War to the end of the Cold War—had profound consequences for the course of international politics. This seminar examines the most consequential summit meetings of the postwar era and considers the potential—and the limits—of diplomacy at the highest level.

HIST 398 sections are restricted to History majors until two weeks into the enrollment period.
At that time the restrictions will be removed and all students, regardless of major, will be able to enroll if there are seats available.

Hist 398:003 Nazi Germany: A View From the Sources

This is a seminar on Nazi Germany, based on the documents and images available on the website of the German Historical Institute in Washington, DC. Topics covered are the Nazi seizure of power, the establishment of the dictatorship, Hitler's Blitzkrieg, the Holocaust and the ultimate German defeat. There will also be time for discussion of social trends, economic patterns and cultural life. Students have to do one oral presentation of a key document and write a seminar paper, based on actual research as well as secondary literature.

HIST 398 sections are restricted to History majors until two weeks into the enrollment period.

At that time the restrictions will be removed and all students, regardless of major, will be able to enroll if there are seats available.

HIST 398-004: Leisure-Time in the Making of Modern America

Leisure-time blossomed with the rise of an industrial economy and later became a source of profit as consumption expanded over the course of the twentieth century. We will use the array of activities and entertainments Americans pursued beyond the workplace to gain insight about these developments. The growth of leisure as commercial activity did generate reliable, even lucrative, employment for some. With these issues in mind, we will consider how leisure-time fostered modern outlooks and habits. Our inquiry will focus roughly on the period between 1880 and 1945.

The required texts for the course will provide us with rich resources for exploring the role leisure-time played in the making of modern America. Some of your most valuable learning, however, will take place outside the classroom as you undertake original historical research and analysis. Each of you will write a 20-25-page research paper on some aspect of leisure. You will have an opportunity to choose your topic and conduct original research using primary and secondary sources. We will spend a good deal of time throughout the semester learning how to research, write and re-write a paper of this length.

HIST 398-005: Environmental History in Global Perspective

This seminar in history is designed to provide students with the experience of planning and carrying out their own research projects and to open discussions on a variety of topics that are central to environmental history. Its main geographic focus begins in Latin America and extends to other world regions, including North America and South Asia. Environmental history is an emerging field with strong linkages to geography, ecology, and anthropology as well as to the interdisciplinary field of environmental studies. Environmental history helps us understand changes in the land as well as issues of survival, sustainability, conflict, and cooperation among different peoples, power brokers, and economic sectors in society. We shall explore the ecological and social consequences of drought, the problem of communal resource use and management in different historical settings, and the roots of environmental movements in the U.S. and other world regions.

HIST 398 sections are restricted to History majors until two weeks into the enrollment period.

HIST 398-006 Martin Luther and the German Reformation

The central figure of the German Reformation, Martin Luther (1483–1546) contributed profoundly to the forces that transformed the medieval Western world into the modern. Thus more than five centuries after his birth, Luther's remarkable religious insights, his exceptionally complex personality, and the tumultuous political and social developments during his lifetime continue to fascinate historians, theologians, and men and women outside the academy. Through the close reading and discussion of several of Luther's major writings and a variety of documents concerning the German Reformation, the seminar will give students a rich understanding of the man and his age. In addition to the principal theological issues, Luther's thought on women, family, sexuality, rebellion, and political authority will receive particular attention.

HIST 398 sections are restricted to History majors until two weeks into the enrollment period.

At that time the restrictions will be removed and all students, regardless of major, will be able to enroll if there are seats available.

HIST 398-007: Boxing and American History

This seminar will explore the relationship between boxing and American history. We will go beyond inside-the-ring performances and use boxing to explore issues of race, class, gender, political protest, international relations, and economic development and justice in American society.

At that time the restrictions will be removed and all students, regardless of major, will be able to enroll if there are seats available.

HIST 398-009: Recent America: The History of Now

This class is dedicated to the idea that there is a "History of Now" that is directly being shaped by us, our past and present decisions, and the choices and options that we discern in our contemporary societal environment. As a historical methods course, the class will focus on issues relevant to the production of historical knowledge and scholarly literature. Along with producing an original research paper, students in the course;through selecting paper topics and participating in-class discussions;will be exposed to a broad range of issues pertinent to understanding recent United States history.

At that time the restrictions will be removed and all students, regardless of major, will be able to enroll if there are seats available.
HIST 398-010: Ancient Slavery

This course surveys ancient slavery in the mid-first millennium BCE, when slavery and the slave trade were widespread in Babylonia, Israel, and Greece. For each of these societies, there are three main topics: the role of slaves in the economy, the position of slaves in society, and attitudes towards slaves and slavery. Throughout the course, we shall seek for parallels among the three societies, while also noticing differences between ancient slavery and slavery in the US and the Caribbean in the 17th through 19th centuries. The aim of the course is to trace the roots of slavery to their known origins in the distant past, the better to understand why the effects of slavery still linger.

HIST 398 sections are restricted to History majors until two weeks into the enrollment period. At that time the restrictions will be removed and all students, regardless of major, will be able to enroll if there are seats available.

HNRS 325.001 | Monumental Art (Dunlevie Honors Colloquium)
W, 6:30 PM - 9:00 PM. Instructor(s): Ritchie Kendall. Enrollment = 75.
This semester's Dunlevie Honors Colloquium will explore monumental art. How have cultures past and present chosen to memorialize and commemorate their history through both privately and publically commissioned works of art. What events and what people have traditionally been so remembered? What happens when old monuments clash with modern concerns and understanding? How has the defacing and toppling of monuments overwritten history (consider the statuary of the Soviet era and its eventual fate at the end of the cold war or the erasure of the identifying cartouches of past Egyptian pharaohs by their successors)? We will approach this issue through the perspectives of art theory, geography, politics and history. We will go back to the ancient worlds of Egypt, Greece and Rome and forward to the new memorials of our own time including the National Memorial for Peace and Justice sometimes known as the national lynching memorial in Montgomery, Alabama. Included among our eight presenters will be a panel of undergraduate students currently conducting research on memorialization in the American South, Northern Ireland and South Africa.

HNRS 353.001 | The Cultural History of Food in China
TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Michelle King. Enrollment = 24.
Whether your memories are comforting or exotic tasting dumplings while held in your grandmother's lap, or trying egg drop soup for the first time in your neighborhood restaurant; it can be difficult to think about Chinese food as anything other than an experience to be savored. A historical approach, however, allows us to get a sense of how human relationships to food in China have changed dramatically over time, even as certain ideas about food continue to resonate. People the world over encounter Chinese culture for the first time through its food, but what exactly is it? How do we define its parameters, or explain its cultural, historical and social significance? In this course we will interrogate different ways in which to imagine, understand and define Chinese food. What ingredients or cooking methods constitute Chinese food? Which regions or geographical areas must be, should be, or could be included? What has been the role of food in traditional Chinese medicine? What are the agricultural roots of Chinese food; how has it been cultivated, grown and cooked? How have people celebrated food and drink, through poetry or nostalgic imagination? What about its excess and its lack, at imperial banquets or...

This course surveys twentieth- and early twenty-first-century Korean literature through the lens of representations of the body. Bringing together works of fiction, poetry, drama, and secondary scholarship, we will explore how modern Korean literature has imagined the body: the multiple shapes and identities that it has given to it; the shifting boundaries that it has drawn for it; and the many functions and powers that it has located in it as a social, material, and conceptual entity.

We will also consider the centrality of such representations of the body to a broader set of topics in the history of modern Korean literature and culture: coloniality; gender and sexuality; labor and class; changing urban and rural landscapes; technology, media, and fantasy; state and nonstate violence; and national division. In so doing, we will learn to see the body as a multidimensional site with plural meanings and we will likewise learn to see Korean history, culture, and identity in terms of its diversities and complexities. Finally, by highlighting the relationship between representations of the body

Course Description:
How did a few leaves from a subtropical garden in southeast China end up in your cup? Why did the British Empire start wars in order to protect their interests in a seemingly simple plant? Why did this plant become the center piece of a Japanese cult? Tea is the most widely consumed beverage after water. According to legend, tea’s stimulating properties were first discovered by the Chinese Emperor Shennong almost five thousand years ago. The tea bush, a native of southeastern China, has been cultivated and used for medicinal purposes for even longer and continues to be used for such purposes today. To the modern tea drinker, much is unknown about this plant which has started wars and inspired cults. This course will offer an introduction into the world of Chinese tea culture. Myths and philosophies which have developed in relation to tea will be analyzed to offer students a

Course Description:
During the late 20th century, cities were the flashpoints for revolutions around the world. The political struggles that produced what Francis Fukuyama called the end of history, were overwhelmingly contested in an urban setting and produced memorable images of the city in revolt: celebrations surrounding Nelson Mandela’s release from prison in Cape Town, one million protesters gathered in Prague’s Wenceslas Square, and the Los Angeles Riots of 1992, to name just three. From Santiago to Moscow to Johannesburg and beyond, cities and their citizens negotiated the political and cultural formations that would come to define the new millennium.
Course Description: How can landscapes produce conflict and peace? And how can peace and conflict alter landscapes? Such questions are central to this course, which considers the spatial components of conflict and peace through close study of the Northern Irish Troubles.

Twenty years after the Good Friday Agreement, Northern Irish landscapes remain charged with fear, with hope, and with memory. As the peace movement progresses and regresses, communities who call such landscapes home face difficult questions about how to reckon with so visible a past. By examining contested spaces like peace walls and memorials, as well as newer sites of conflict, including peace bridges and cross-community housing projects, this course provides a critical perspective on the enduring legacies of conflict and the potential for peace in Northern Ireland.

Student Instructors: Kiyonaga & McDonald
Course Description: "There's no way to be a perfect mother and a million ways to be a good one." - J. Churchill
What constitutes a good or bad mother? Why is our culture saturated with traditions of the wicked stepmother? Why does the maternal body hold such undying fascination for the public eye?

SPCL 400.305 | Gödel, Escher, Bach: a Multidisciplinary Investigation Into Truth and Logic
T, 4:30PM - 6:30PM. Instructor(s): Idris Assani. Enrollment = 15.
Student Instructors: Lukas Lyon
Course Description: Questioning the human experience has always been a fundamental part of that experience. Douglas Hofstadter's seminal, Pulitzer Prize-winning work Goedel, Escher, Bach: An Eternal Golden Braid engages the reader in a dialogue that carefully intertwines J.S. Bach's fugues, M.C. Escher's intoxicating artistic works, and the ideas of the Austrian mathematician, Kurt Gödel in an attempt to answer, or at least think critically about those questions. Perhaps most strikingly, Hofstadter's goal is not to explore the relationships between visual art, music, and mathematics, but to employ them in seeking a common goal: how formal, mechanical systems give rise to creativity and cognition.

W, 4:00PM - 6:00PM. Instructor(s): Marsha Penner. Enrollment = 15.

Student Instructors: Matt Mattoni

Course Description: Neuroscience can impact numerous aspects of our lives due to its ability to explore the natural basis of human function and behavior. This course will focus on the field's potential by first covering its common research methods and then delving into resulting controversies. What does neuroscience tell us and how valid are these results? How can we use this information? Should we use this information? Class discussions will therefore ask students to consider what sort of societal issues neuroscience is currently suitable to address.

Students will also gain first-hand experiences in various aspects of neuroscience, including exposure to preserved brains and prominent historical works.

SPCL 400.308 | Mass Incarceration: In Theory and Practice

M, 4:00PM - 6:00PM. Instructor(s): Seth Kotch. Enrollment = 15.

Student Instructors: Elina Rodriguez

Course Description: This course will give students the theoretical underpinnings to understand academic discussions of mass incarceration and the carceral space, but, perhaps more importantly, it offers exposure to the effect of mass incarceration on people's lives, and families. The class will be grounded in the lived experiences of people most harmed by the criminal justice system, and will give students analytical frameworks to understand mass incarceration's impact on health, wealth, and society. The class will include a trip to Central Prison in Raleigh, NC.

THIS COURSE IS TENTATIVE, PENDING C-START COMMITTEE APPROVAL.
SPCL 400.309 | Making Holes
W, 5:00PM - 7:00PM. Instructor(s): Tyler Curtain. Enrollment = 15.
Student Instructors: Hampton Smith
Course Description: This interdisciplinary seminar seeks to understand, theorize, and make holes. Holes are seemingly simple things, immaterial spaces in stuff, but have created history, new art forms, technical machines, as well as ways to complicate sites of meaning and identity. In our exploration of holes, perforations, and punches, students will explore a variety of material — visual, bodily, literary, historical, tactile, and sometimes invisible — from 1800 to the contemporary moment. As such, we will cover a divergent group of hole-making and hole-filling practices — from embroidery to tattooing to punch-card coding. Each week students will engage in discussions of short readings by artists, media theorists, or literary scholars in conversations with visual or tactile materials. To facilitate an active relationship between making and thinking, students will use the makerspace to constructing their own

SPCL 400.310 | Introduction to Complexity Theory and Its Applications
R, 5:00PM - 7:00PM. Instructor(s): Ted Zoller. Enrollment = 15.
Student Instructors: Viswanathan
Course Description: Curious about how the butterfly effect could hold the key for climate change? Or how the study of bird migration could lead to more efficient governments?

Some might say we're in a bit of tough spot as a civilization, whether it be climate change, war, inequality, poverty, religious divide, corruption, or famine to name just a few big, intractable, and complex problems.
This course is designed to engage with these problems, but through a new lens: complexity theory. Taking inspiration from sociology, psychology, biology,

TITLE: PHILOSOPHY, POLITICS AND ECONOMICS (PPE)
COURSE DESCRIPTION: This interdisciplinary course provides an overview of some core conceptual tools used to analyze issues at the intersection of philosophy, politics, and economics (PPE). It introduces students to the tools of economic analysis, including markets, prices, economic efficiency, welfare measures, and market failures. It discusses the philosophical dimensions of economics and public policy, including discussion of the nature of utility or well-being, the value of individual liberty, and the nature of socio-economic justice. It also introduces students to the tools of political or institutional analysis, including game theory and public choice. This collection of tools, which are often employed in isolation, gain considerable power when they are brought together. Students will read widely on PPE tools, and they will explore applications to contemporary social problems. Lectures and recitations will feature a mix of traditional lectures, group work and discussions, simulations, and strategy games.

TITLE: DEATH AND DYING
COURSE DESCRIPTION: Death and dying are universal human experiences. Yet there is immense cultural variation and historical fluidity to the ways we define, understand and treat death, dying and relations between the living and the dead. This course explores concepts, experiences and practices of death and dying, drawing from methodologies and approaches from Anthropology, American Studies and Psychology & Neuroscience. This course will not only consider the similarities and differences between the three discipline methodologies but will also introduce students to data literacy and principles of evidence.

TITLE: THE IDEA OF RACE
COURSE DESCRIPTION: This course, taught by a biologist, a linguist, and an ethnomusicologist, focuses on the idea of "race." Historically, the idea that humans can be divided into distinct races has been a singularly pernicious one, having been used to justify the persecution, enslavement, and extermination of groups based on their presumed biological inferiority. Today, scientists agree that race is a false and distorting concept for understanding biological diversity among humans: what we describe as races are in fact social constructs, not genetic realities. Nonetheless, the idea of biological race persists in the popular imagination. In this course, students learn why race is not a viable human biological concept, how the idea of race arose historically (and continues to be maintained), and what alternative concepts exist for understanding human diversity and change over time.

TITLE: THE ENVIRONMENT, INTERSECTIONALITY, AND SCIENCE FICTION
COURSE DESCRIPTION: This course focuses on the question of how the genre of science fiction (film and literature) has been used to address the world's environmental concerns and how these concerns affect characters differently depending on their gender, race, and class. Using this lens, the course investigates longstanding global environmental challenges including water resources, overpopulation, consumption, climate change, etc. This course provides students with a complex toolkit to understand environmental issues. We pay special attention to texts with characters or created by artists who are women. and/or ethnic minorities. Our focus throughout the course is support comparative, global, intersectional and interdisciplinary thinking.

TITLE: HAPPINESS AND WELL-BEING
COURSE DESCRIPTION: This course will expose students to diverse approaches to studying topics related to happiness and subjective and physical well-being. The three professors will approach this topic from three disciplines: physiology; positive psychology; and sociology. An important aspect of the course is teaching students a variety of life skills, such as teamwork, developing social connections including "belongingness" at UNC, being physically active, and becoming confident that they can obtain the skills to increase their happiness and health.

TITLE: The United States and Cuba

GEN EDs:
HS, GL

DESCRIPTION:
LTAM 89 will examine the multiple-faceted and often conflict-ridden relationship between the United States and Cuba. Each country entered the imagination of the other at decisive moments during nineteenth-century national formation. Cuba developed into an object of U.S. obsession, as the United States expanded onto the Gulf of Mexico during the early decades of the 19th century, whereupon American political leaders contemplated the incorporation of Cuba into the U.S. national system a matter of national interest. Cuba, on the other hand, contemplated a different destiny, one based on national sovereignty.

DESCRIPTION:
In this course we will approach the life and journey of Central American migrants who travel to the United States. Through the cinema and journalistic chronicles, we will discuss the Central American migratory phenomenon: motives, causes and consequences. We will also analyze the way in which cinema and journalism construct these stories, and we will review the advantages and controversies that arise when migratory stories are told from different perspectives. The class is designed to learn about film, and about chronicles. However, the main emphasis is on understanding Central American migrants, especially those from the northern triangle: Guatemala, Honduras and El Salvador. For this reason, our work in this class will be like the itinerary of the migrants: we will discuss about the recent history of Central America and then we will travel the path of the migrant.

This course will be taught entirely in Spanish.

Students will examine evidence that human activity has caused global warming, investigate scientists' ability to predict climate change, and discuss the political and social dimensions of global climate change.

REGISTRATION PROCEDURES:
*First-year students who are not enrolled in a fall 2018 FYS will register online when their registration appointment begins.
*First-year students who enrolled in a fall 2018 FYS will be able to enroll in a spring 2019 FYS beginning Monday, November 19th (12:01am).

FYS ENDS OF THE EARTH

Description:
What explains the 'pull of the Poles'? What motivated early explorers to undergo great hardships to investigate the Arctic and Antarctic, and what did they discover about these regions? What have we discovered in the intervening decades, and what do we still not understand about polar regions? Why do the Arctic and Antarctic play such a critical role in global climate? This seminar will combine scientific and historical perspectives to investigate the 'ends of the earth', the Arctic and Antarctica. We will begin by surveying the geography and oceanography of these regions, and then step back into the past and follow in the footsteps of some of the early polar explorers by reading their own accounts of their explorations. Modern accounts will help us compare and contrast these early explorations. The seminar will also include readings and discussions about current questions and problems of the polar regions, in particular human impacts and potential effects of global warming. Class discussions, short writing assignments, a term paper, and group presentations will be used to hone critical thinking and communication skills, and to help develop both scientific and historical understanding of these unique regions of the earth.

Please register for 3 credit hours. Class participants will improve their scientific writing skills by working with and discussing (among other resources) J. Schimel's "Writing Science: how to write papers that get cited and proposals that get funded", and through lots of practical writing practice. In accordance with class wishes, other types of scientific writing (e.g., job applications; reviews) will also be included.

Description:
The focus of this semester’s Simulated Life seminar will be on organisms living within moving fluids. The natural world is replete with examples of animals and plants whose shape influences flow to their benefit. For example, the shape of a maple seed generates lift to allow for farther dispersal. The structure of a pinecone helps it to filter pollen from the air. A falcon’s form during a dive reduces drag and allows it to reach greater speeds.

We will mathematically describe the shape of organisms using 3D computer aided design (CAD). We will use the 3D objects in numerical simulations of flow around an organism. We will also 3D print these objects and place them inside flow tanks for comparison to simulation.

By the end of this course, students should be able to: create 3D models of organs and organisms, run numerical simulations on a remote cluster, explain how the flow around an organism can be important to feeding, nutrient exchange, dispersal, and survivability, visualize flows experimentally and using

Description:
Introduction to Research in Network Data Science (IRNDS) is a research-intensive experience rapidly engaging students in hands-on data science through direct interaction with real-world network data. While networks are familiar, such as hyperlinked web pages or online social networks, they can be analyzed in many different applications, including epidemiology, infectious diseases, materials, neuroscience, and political science, just to name a few. IRNDS will follow a textbook with extensive example computations, introduced through the course. Students will develop a public data science portfolio in GitHub to demonstrate their data science experience.

MATH 233H.001 | Calculus of Functions of Several Variables
MWF, 10:10 am - 11:00 am; Recitation: T, 9:30 am - 10:20 am. Instructor(s): Yaiza Canzani Garcia. Enrollment = 24.
Level: This is the Honors section of MATH 233. It offers a more demanding and deeper treatment than the regular sections. For example, there will be more emphasis on understanding theory than in other sections. Topics: Vectors in three dimensional space. Dot products and cross products and their applications. Functions of two and three variables. Polar and spherical coordinates. Graphs and contours. Multivariable calculus: partial derivatives, gradient. Curves in space. Surfaces: normal vector, tangent plane. Maxima and minima. Lagrange multipliers. Double and triple definite integrals, line integrals, Green's theorem.

PREREQUISITE: AT LEAST A B+ IN MATH 232 AT UNC OR A 5 ON THE BC CALCULUS EXAM.
We are recruiting ULAs (Undergraduate Learning Assistants) for a variety of classes, including Math 110, 130, 231, 232, 233, and possibly 547. You will be able to take it as one-credit course or as a volunteer. It will involve helping out in the classroom as students work problems in groups and outside class mentoring or review sessions. If you take it for credit, there will be a reflective essay at the end required. In either case, there will be some training at the beginning of the semester and midway through (just a few hours). If interested, please reach out to Linda Green, greenl@email.unc.edu.

A practical, case-based introduction to recent developments within several branches of mathematics to identify patterns within data. Concepts from topology, differential geometry, information theory, stochastic calculus and numerical analysis are introduced through seven two-week long modules to solve practical data analysis problems from the physical, life, and social sciences. Coursework introduces software tools used in data analysis, and is suitable for students from a wide variety of backgrounds. Basic familiarity with calculus, linear algebra and computer programming is recommended.

Global existence for the energy critical wave equation - topics include an introduction to the wave equation and Fourier analysis, scaling, Strichartz estimates, Morawetz estimates, and global existence for the defocusing energy critical wave equation.
The objectives of this course are to:
- Gain an understanding of the genomic data types being collected on human tumors
- Learn about the basics of RNA and DNA NGS sequence analysis
- Learn about pattern discovery tools including hierarchical clustering and biclustering
- Understand the challenges of integrating heterogeneous data types
- Learn real world examples of complex data integration for class discovery

Course expectations:

Computational and experimental models of prosthetic heart valves.

Class meets in Phillips 365.
The objectives of this course are to: Develop mathematical models of an entire eukaryotic genome in a living cell; Extract quantitative data from the models and experimental systems to tune model parameters; Discuss the power of mathematical modeling in guiding intuition at the nano to micron scales; Discuss future avenues such as network analysis and fluid dynamics to explore pathways of information flow in a living cell.

Class meets in Phillips 365.

Topics covered include: transport properties of biological fluids, particle tracking experiments, fluorescence microscopy, particle tracking analysis, inferences from tracking data. There will be "hands on" modeling and analysis of experimental data.

Class meets in Phillips 365.

Course topics:
1. Introduction to Networks.
This course is being offered in conjunction with the SAMSI year-long research Program on Statistical, Mathematical, and Computational Methods for Precision Medicine (PMED).

This course will provide a comprehensive introduction to methodology for data-based development and evaluation of dynamic treatment regimes. A dynamic treatment regime is a set of sequential decision rules, each corresponding to a key point in a disease or disorder process at which a decision on the next treatment action must be made. Each rule takes patient information to that point as input and returns the treatment s/he should receive from among the available options, thus tailoring treatment decisions to a patient's individual characteristics. Methods will be motivated and developed through a formal time-dependent causal inference framework. Examples will be drawn from cancer and other chronic disease research and research in the behavioral,

This course earns 3 credit hours for Spring 2019. When enrolling for this course, please select 3 credit hours.

Instructor approval is NOT required for this course. Please disregard the ConnectCarolina description that says it is.

Take-home and in-class activities, group discussion and problem-solving coaching will enhance student understanding of how chemistry, physics, materials science and biology are applied to engineering. There will be special focus on BioEngineering, Chemical, Mechanical and Environmental Engineering. Discussions of relevant scientific literature introduce each topic. Guest lecturers and faculty will provide perspectives in fields like mathematical modeling, mechanical engineering or circuit design so students gain a true interdisciplinary view of topics.

Attributes: VP - Visual or Performing Arts

Class Equivalents: MUSC 286/286H

An exploration of UNC Chapel Hill's wonderful historical keyboard instrument collection through the study of music written for these very instruments between 1820 and 1860. Investigation of the historical and cultural context of music written during this era, as well as performance practice issues surrounding these instruments. Musical examples will include selected keyboard, vocal, and chamber works of Beethoven, Schubert, Chopin, Schumann, and others. No prior musical experience required. For keyboard players, string players, singers, and wind players, the class will involve a performance component.
Broadway and Hollywood musicals were a major source of popular entertainment in the inter-war period and in post-war reconstruction. They were also important arenas for articulating contemporary social and political issues, and in the formation of national identity. We shall start with Jerome Kern’s Show Boat (1927; filmed in 1936) and end with Singin’ in the Rain (1952), taking in Cole Porter, George Gershwin, Rodgers and Hart, and Rodgers and Hammerstein, with several side-steps towards Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers. We shall also pay significant attention to Bertolt Brecht and Kurt Weill’s Der Jasager (Berlin, 1930) which will be staged at UNC-CH in the spring 2019 semester and its American offshoots.

This course has no prerequisites and is open to all students (there is no need to be able to read musical notation). This also includes music majors, who may take it for elective credit. It meets the VP requirement within UNC’s General Education Curriculum.

MUSC 390H.001 | Music and Politics
TR, 3:30 pm - 4:45 pm. Instructor(s): Stefan Litwin. Enrollment - 24.
The principle of "l'art pour l'art" (art for art's sake) has dominated much of the way we hear and understand music. Since its emancipation from the church and courts, western music has been viewed mostly as an aesthetic island immune to the influences of political reality. This seminar will examine the interrelatedness between music and society, focusing mainly though not exclusively on composers who sought to address political issues through their music. Some of Ludwig van Beethoven's most popular works, for example, among them the 5th symphony, were inspired by the French Revolution; Franz Liszt championed an early form of Christian socialism; and composers throughout the 20th century reacted to political turmoil, war and revolution by inventing a variety of new musical styles and compositional methods. During the course of the semester, through readings and research projects, we will trace these developments and examine how politics helped define music. No prior musical knowledge or abilities are required.

TITLE:
Contemporary Social Problems in Short Stories, the Social Sciences and the Press

GEN EDS:
LA, CI

DESCRIPTION:
We will read works of short fiction from around the globe that address a range of social and political problems. The course addresses these issues from three angles. We will touch on topics that are prominent in the news today such as opiate addiction, arranged marriage, trafficking, bullying, social exclusion, charitable giving, implicit bias, and basic income. First, we read a short story that addresses the social or political issue. Second, we choose

PHIL 143H.001 | AI and the Future of Humanity: Philosophical Issues about Technology and Human Survival

TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Thomas Hofweber. Enrollment = 24.

This course focuses on philosophical questions tied to advances in technology, in particular artificial intelligence (AI) and virtual reality (VR), and how they affect, positively or negatively, the long-term future of human beings. We will discuss whether such technology is an extinction threat for humanity or... a new horizon for a novel way of survival. We will discuss the moral challenges faced by the rise of advanced forms of AI: what do we owe them, how will they relate to us, and how could we influence that things will go well? And we will discuss more metaphysical problems related to virtual reality and artificial intelligence: is a virtual reality an illusion or just a different kind of reality? Can minds and consciousness be realized by machines or computers?

Thomas Hofweber specializes in metaphysics, the philosophy of language, and the philosophy of mathematics. He is currently working on a book on idealism,

PHIL 165H.001 | Bioethics

TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Christopher Howard. Enrollment = 24.

Bioethics is a species of practical ethics that investigates the various ethical issues that emerge in the arenas of clinical medicine, biomedical research, and public health. This course explores a small sampling of traditional and contemporary bioethical questions central to the field's focus. We'll begin with some ethical questions that arise in the context of a doctor-patient relationship: questions involving autonomy, paternalism, and consent. Next, we'll cover some specific issues in bioethics: abortion and disability. Finally, we'll consider some political and economic issues of bioethical relevance, with a particular focus on issues surrounding health care (in)equality, privatization, and biomedical markets at the margins.

PHIL 275H.001 | Philosophical Issues in Gender and Society
TR, 3:30 pm - 4:45 pm. Instructor(s): Susan Wolf. Enrollment = 14.
This course will examine some basic concepts central to feminist theory, such as oppression, sexism, gender, and equality, and explore the ways in which a feminist perspective casts a variety of philosophical and ethical issues in a different light. Questions that will be discussed include: To what extent do men and women have different natures, and what implications does this have for the idea of equal treatment? Should differences between men and women be celebrated or minimized? Can an act or a practice be objectionably sexist if it is totally voluntary? What counts as rape? Is pornography harmful to women? CROSSLISTED WITH WGST 275H.

Susan Wolf's research interests range broadly over topics in ethics and other issues about values and valuing. She teaches courses in moral philosophy and

PHIL 280H.001 | The Rule of Law: National and Global Perspectives
TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Gerald Postema. Enrollment = 24.
In this course, we will explore the connections between law and justice. The course will be organized around two main concepts and topics (1) "the rule of law" and (2) human rights. The notion of the rule of law has played a very large role in Western political thinking since the middle ages and especially in modern constitutional thought. Over the last century it has had a strong presence in thinking about the international legal order. The world-wide respect for the ideal is (in part) the legacy of the Nuremberg Trials in which Nazi war criminals were tried by an international tribunal. Yet, those trials themselves seemed to compromise the ideal. The trials and the notion of the rule of law have remained controversial. Some believe that the ideal of the rule of law can be derived from a sound understanding of law itself, others argue that it has its roots in fundamental notions of liberty, others attack it as a piece of Western (or American) ideology. Some theorists treat protection of rights as central to the idea of the rule of law, others reject this claim. But all agree there is a close relationship between the two notions. This course will explore the philosophical foundations and practical applications of

DESCRIPTION:
The nanoworld is a strange and captivating place. It is a world of molecules vibrating trillions of times a second, quantum dots emitting rainbow colors, DNA encoding information in molecular bonds, and protein motors driving the complex machinery of the cell. At this scale, nature has unique rules and behaviors, some of which are amazing and unexpected. We are still uncovering these rules, and are only beginning to apply this new knowledge to technology. Can we build molecular machines that cure disease or clean up the environment? Can we make computers using single molecule transistors? How do viruses and other bio systems assemble themselves? In this seminar, we dive into the basic physics, chemistry and biology that describe the nanometer scale world. We will also try to distinguish the true promise of nanoscience from the hype. Students will engage in class discussions informed by their weekly reading of selected scientific literature. They will also participate in small group projects building physical models of nanoscale objects and phenomena, and perform calculations to gain a quantitative understanding of the physics underlying the nanoworld. No prerequisite is required for this course, but a spirit of adventure is.

DESCRIPTION:
This seminar provides an introduction to entrepreneurship and innovation with a focus on their geographic concentration in specific places. Using the Research Triangle region as our laboratory, this course will consider how regional economies are transformed through innovation and entrepreneurship. The course emphasizes entrepreneurs as part of a larger societal system that both determines what is possible and also changes in response to entrepreneurial actions. The role of public policy in providing incentives for entrepreneurship and innovation and setting social priorities is discussed. Students will use data analytics to examine trends in innovation, entrepreneurship and places.

PLCY 340H.001 | Justice in Public Policy
TR, 3:30 pm - 4:45 pm. Instructor(s): Benjamin Meier. Enrollment = 24.
PLCY 340H examines arguments about justice in public policy. Students examine the ethical foundations of both the means and ends of policy choices. We first focus on the means used to implement policies. In the pursuit of important public goals, is it legitimate for officials to use means that would otherwise be wrong? We then explore the ends of policies. Upon what normative foundations can our policies be just?

Professor Meier’s interdisciplinary research at the intersection of international law, public policy, and global health examines the human rights norms that underlie global health policy. In teaching UNC courses in Justice in Public Policy, Health & Human Rights, and Global Health Policy, Professor Meier has

Class meets Jan. 25, Feb. 22, Mar. 22, Apr. 5, Apr. 26
With Stephen Friedman, former President of MTV and Emmy and Peabody award-winning creator of social impact campaigns, this class will explore all aspects of social impact campaigns that harnessed the power of effective stories to engage audiences and prompt action. Additionally, we will investigate how corporations and brands develop campaigns and how they partner with the government, foundations and NGOs. Students will work in small groups to create their own social impact campaign.

Stephen Friedman is Visiting Professor of the Practice of UNC Public Policy and Visiting Social Entrepreneur-in-Residence in the Shuford Program in Entrepreneurship. He helps lead the Societal Impact practice at SYPartners. Using the power of storytelling and SYP’s experience in large-scale events, we will design social impact campaigns that engage audiences and prompt action.

DESCRIPTION:
This course explores basic issues in the politics and political conflict in the European Union and the United States. In part one we inquire into some basic features of political development. Why did Britain and Germany follow different paths to democracy? How do democratic institutions work differently across liberal democracies? What does Left/Right mean, and how has this changed over time? Why did socialism fail in the United States?

In part two we focus on the European Union and the United States. Why was the European Union created, how does it work, and how can one make sense of its evolution? Both the EU and the US are highly decentralized polities. Both have a strong separation of powers in the center. How is lawmaking in the EU and the US similar? How is it different?

In recent years, both the US and the EU have been riven by cultural issues, including immigration and trade. How has this affected domestic politics and
