DESCRIPTION:
The boundaries of Blackness are constantly in flux, and pinning down an accurate definition of Blackness in the U.S., to be specific, is becoming an increasing complicated task due to changing social norms, immigration, emigration, the increasing number of immigrants from Africa and the Caribbean, the growing number of multi-racial persons and even increasing socioeconomic bifurcation among those traditionally categorized as Black. Who is included in the definition of Black is not only a matter of color and history but also of politics, culture and self-identification. Over the course of the semester, we will engage in the debates around Blackness. We will examine scholarly texts and government documents as well as film, novels and memoirs. Our goal is to attempt to define Blackness as well as to understand the mechanisms that influence the boundaries and definition of Blackness.

DESCRIPTION:
This seminar is designed to investigate how the concept of race has been represented in cinema historically, with a particular focus on representations of race when blackness is masqueraded. Its intent is to launch an investigative inquiry into how African Americans are represented on screen in various time periods, how we as spectators are manipulated by these cinematic constructions of race, and how race is marked or coded other than through visual representation. Students will view films that deal with "passing" from the various historical periods and will utilize theoretical concepts introduced in class to read these visual representations. Films selected for viewing include the pre-World War II Era, the Civil Rights Era, and the "Post-Racial" era. Students will be required to write three papers that reflect their ability to apply theoretical concepts to reading racialized representations on screen in

DESCRIPTION:
Boundary making, migration, and population displacement have been significant dimensions of the contemporary African experience. How has boundary making, broadly defined (inclusive of national borders, rural-urban distinctions, and ethnic and racial groupings, for example), shaped contemporary Africa? What types of and through what processes were boundaries were created? How did the African people respond to these processes? What population displacements unfolded in the context of this boundary making? And how did the people of Africa make sense of and understand boundary making, migration, and displacement? These are some of the questions we will be examining in this interactive and discussion oriented class. We will build our examination of these issues around six novels written by African authors. These novels will provide insight into the ways by which boundaries, migration, and displacement impacted the...

How do we define 'blackness'? Is it a physical trait, genetics, an African past, hair texture? Is it a common history of and resistance to slavery, racialized discrimination, and colonization? Is it the drum rhythm, the call-and-response poetry, the culture of improvisation? How has ‘blackness’ been constructed and globally circulated through popular performance, literature, and artistic creativity? What connections are there between Senegalese rappers in France and the Gullah in Low-country regions of the U.S.? Or what connects the South African khoikhoi woman Sarah Baartmann (a.k.a. The Hottentot Venus) to the Harlem Renaissance and the King Kong musical of South Africa’s Sophiatown, to filmmakers Ousmane Sembene and Marlon Riggs, to Mardi Gras Indians and Nigerian pop star Fela Kuti, to the World Festival of Negro Arts and Bob Marley’s ‘Africa Unite’?

Through profound analysis of key aspects of black popular cultures in their global diversity, this course tackles fundamental questions about the meanings of black identity, identification, and belonging. First, it looks into how scholars have theorized race, blackness, Diaspora, and globalization. Then, using an interdisciplinary method, it explores how these concepts have been articulated in black popular cultures in different parts of the world.

AMST 54.001 | The Family and Social Change in America

TR, 3:30 PM - 4:45 PM. Instructor(s): Robert Allen. Enrollment = 24.

Inspired by successful television program, ¿Who Do You Think You Are?¿ and the popularity of such online genealogical resources as Ancestry.com and Family Search, millions of people are taking advantage of billions of digitized public records and publications (census enumerations, city directories, newspapers, military records, etc.) to become online historical detectives. Some are also becoming 21st century family ¿kinkeepers¿: combining digital resources with local archival resources (including the Southern Historical Collection and North Carolina Collection at UNC and State Archives in Raleigh), family memorabilia from the bottom drawer of grandma¿s dresser, and recordings of family stories to create multimedia family archives, which can be shared with far-flung extended family members and passed down to future generations. This course unfolds the process and materials of genealogical research to larger historical issues and contexts; explores how family history can personalize and localize social, cultural, political, and economic history; and asks how the question ¿Who do you think you are?¿ can become the basis for examining ¿Who do we think we are?¿ as a diverse national culture. Participants will research...

Not only do paperbacks like Gone Girl and television mega-franchises like Law & Order invite their audiences to perform extraordinary feats of detection, they also employ the avatar of the detective to communicate information about the cognitive processes that make mystery-solving possible. Both literary critics and behavioral neuroscientists have developed sophisticated theories about the ways detection - the accumulation and logical assembly of clues and...

This course provides an overview of the interdisciplinary methods of American Studies and contemporary approaches to the study of American society and culture, with an emphasis on literary works. In addition to a variety of short stories and essays and one or two novels that cover the span of the twentieth century, our examination of American life will center on four historical moments. In past semesters, we have covered such diverse subjects as the Spanish-American War and the U.S. occupation of the Philippines; representations of marriage and consensual governance in Hollywood zombie movies of the 1930s and 40s; the cultural impact of the Beat Generation and the commodification of "beatnik" culture; the AIDS epidemic and gay and lesbian political activism in the 1980s; and representations of globalization and new religious movements in late 20th century science fiction.

This course is reserved for First-Year and Transfer students.

Why does history matter? It is not an easy question to answer, and to be honest, it probably does not matter to most people. But one important reason history is useful, at least, is because it helps us understand, if not avoid repeating, the present. Studying history reveals how small decisions become major forces, how humans and governments have wrestled with personal and political needs, how power ebbs and flows. In this course we will explore histories of the present, unpacking the historical context behind present-day issues, controversies, and events so as to understand them more deeply and impress our grandparents. You, the students, will choose which subjects we explore. For each of five units, I will assemble a group of readings that includes some basic contextual and historic matter; some original sources, such as manuscripts or newspaper coverage; some interpretive material created by historians; and some cultural material, such as art or television. These sources will help us explore core questions and concepts we will refine over the course of each unit.

AMST 203 introduces students to the fundamentals of American Indian and Indigenous Studies; from theoretical orientations and source materials to research methodologies and means of reporting. The course begins with an exploration of the field’s origins and evolution. Then, throughout the semester, we will learn about the approaches adopted by archaeologists, historians, anthropologists, literary scholars, and specialists in law. You will gain a critical introduction to the questions asked by individuals working in these fields and to the raw materials of their various ways of knowing, including ethnographic interviews, oral histories, archival materials, artifacts, maps, language, place, forms of expressive culture, and material objects. Still more exciting, you will be learning directly from the outstanding American Indian and Indigenous Studies faculty at the University of North Carolina and a few special guests. Rather than merely listening to others talk, however, you will also apply the insights and techniques about which you are learning in the context of a research project. This class is cross-listed with ANTH 203.

The American South resides where southern cultures are; it exists beyond geography or stereotype; it contains diverse cultures, ethnicities, and global influences. In this gateway course to the study of the American South, students examine southern cultural identity, recognizing the contributions of all its people, including people of American Indian, African, Latinx, Asian, and European descent. Students consider the region in all its complexity through a multi-disciplinary conversation about the American South that considers art, archaeology, architecture, cultural tourism, ecology, folklife, foodways, geography, history, language, literature, material culture, myth and manners, music, politics, religion, values, and more. Throughout the semester, students meet and work with scholars from our university community who study the region from a variety of disciplines and perspectives. The course exposes students to the unsurpassed resources of UNC's Southern Historical Collection, Southern Folklife Collection, the North Carolina Collection, and the Southern Oral History Program, as well as southern collections at UNC's Ackland Museum of Art, and other cultural and historical institutions in the region. Students are be encouraged to explore local cultural repositories, to taste the flavors of southern foodways, and to attend regional art happenings, lectures, literary readings, musical performances, and folklife events.

This course explores the multiple ways that American Indians navigated cultural, political, and economic changes in the twentieth century. Opening with assimilation policy in the 1880s and extending to contemporary struggles for autonomy, this course emphasizes the continuities of American Indian life ways and their adaptability to changing cultural and political landscapes. It will examine a number of important, interrelated questions. First, how have American Indian peoples maintained sovereignty as Native nations and autonomy as individuals in the shifting contexts of the twentieth century? How have federal policies shaped their lived experiences, and how have they responded to and resisted these policies? This course will approach these questions through historical texts, literature, and film. This course is cross-listed with History 235.

According to the Census Bureau, in the year 2020 "more than half of the nation's children are expected to be part of a minority race or ethnic group. All Americans under the age of 18 are now at the front of a trend that will see the overall population follow suit some 20 years later¿ (NPR's Hansi Lo Wang). In essence, we are in a time of a dynamic racial shift, and yet our country ¿ especially its southern part ¿ seems to be more divided or at least confused about what ¿race¿ is, how to talk about it and how it might intersect with other identity formations like gender, class, or sexuality. The first goal of this super course is to give students real tools for how to address multiple modes of difference. The second arc of this course is its focus on the southern hemisphere ¿ a site that is almost universally recognized as more and more important as we approach the mid-century mark. By understanding region and race, for example, students will not only enhance their understanding of the south, but also contribute a substantial body of scholarship to the state archives through group and individual projects (see below). We plan to be at the forefront of the discussion on the future of the U.S. south and its connections with sister states above and below the equator. This class is cross-listed with AMST 248/ENGL 248/POLI 248/PSYC 348/WGST 249

How might popular fictions about tropical places shape and reflect cultural perceptions and desires? How do current horror, science fiction, and prison genres repeat or change these fictions?

In this course, we will examine a variety of media, including nineteenth-century novels and ephemera (newspapers, magazines, advertisements), twentieth-century pulp novels and exploitation films (Mandingo, Women in Cages), contemporary TV shows (American Horror Story), Hollywood blockbusters (Django Unchained), and graphic novels (Bitch Planet). We will analyze how texts craft popular narratives about intersecting topics such as nationality, sexuality, gender, race, and class throughout time. To help shape our flexible interdisciplinary approach, the course will introduce students to a variety of academic fields, including American studies, literary studies, film and television studies, as well as women’s & gender studies.

AMST 351 Global Waters, American Impacts will be offered by Professor Rachel Willis on Tuesday and Thursday from 11 -12: 15 in the Spring of 2019. Water is a vital element for life, agriculture production, countless processes essential to health and economic development, transportation, industrial processing, energy production and distribution. Nations have always been connected and separated by water through borders, trade, and transportation systems. This seminar will focus on examining the key global impacts on American waters with respect to port cities, water corridors, food, health, economic development and more. Students will learn from readings, documentary sources, music and expert guests about critical global water transportation issues and related impacts. A major portion of the course will be devoted to climate change predictions of sea-level rise, increased storm severity, and drought. Equally important will be examining the potential for planning in creating opportunities for resilience, recovery, and development with respect to local, regional, national and global water issues. Throughout the term, students will be responsible for several short collaborative projects and one major individual research project and presentation related to water and climate change.

AMST 351 earns the SS, CI, and GL attributes.

AMST 475H.001 | Documenting Communities
TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Rachel Willis. Enrollment = 12.
We will focus on documenting communities impacted by the rising waters associated with climate change. In the short run, this includes storm surges and flooding due to hurricanes and severe precipitation events. Intermediate term consequences include development in flood plains, increases in impervious surfaces, and other impacts related to the rapidly growing coastal population. In the long run, sea-level rise and increases in severe weather intensity and frequency due to global warming will be considered. Students will collaboratively build a public ArcGIS site with Map Stories sharing narratives from past and recent flood events in NC on audio, through images and video based on oral history interviews and the use of publicly available resources. The goal is to document flood vulnerable communities with a focus on NC. In addition, each student will be responsible for 6 hours of participation in either the Clean Tech Summit VI at the UNC Friday Center Feb. 28-March 1 or the Beyond Despair: Theory and Practice in Environmental Humanities at the National Humanities Center April 3-5. This will include researching the nexus of water issues related to the conference speakers and presentations. Students will learn the

How often has art, music, or writing influenced the foundation of a space, individual, or practice? In this course we will investigate the colorful intersection between documenting your story and creating a movement. How can culture creators quickly adapt their practice to changing times, and support the evolution of collective consciousness, geared towards justice? Responding to the world involves a plethora of strategy which is often influenced by both our individual skill and target audience.

When creating art within politicized or otherwise sacred communities such as punk rock, hip-hop, activism, or spirituality (to name a few), an individuals chosen practice is often blurred behind their voice or political agenda. How can we, as creators of culture, honor our craftsmanship at the same level as we do our social and political goals? In Articles of Truth, students will respond to current events and historical facts through individualized multidisciplinary practices ranging from writing, visual art, performance, and publishing. How can a song, an illustration, a poem, or a photograph discuss the same ideology? How can they co-exist in either exhibition, collaboration, or a piece of art? Through pop-challenges, lectures, and the exploration of local art and movements, students will develop the voice and motive to create a final piece documenting truth via their chosen discipline.

Media and Indigenous Experiences focuses on addressing systemic issues in Indian Country while providing media solutions to mitigate internal and external intergenerational trauma and oppression.

This course examines the relationship between media and Indigenous Peoples in American history. Course content focuses on the following: First, critical analysis of representations of Indigenous Peoples, politics, issues, and cultures in historical and contemporary mainstream media, including television, Hollywood films, popular music, and news media. Second, the ways media has been used by Indigenous media producers as a social and political platform to engage the non-Indigenous American public on Indigenous issues. Environmental issues and land rights issues play a large role in content of media examined in this course.

At its core, this class aims to teach students how documentary arts and media production can be used to effect positive social change and harnessed as tools...

This course begins with the methodological approaches students already bring to their research into American subjects and challenges them to broaden the ambit of their analysis to reveal new angles of exploration. What happens to a project when it is approached with inter-, trans-, or multi-disciplinary perspectives? The course readings will examine models of innovative scholarship, appraise the genre of the dissertation and its chapters, and practice different critical forms of inquiry, all while coming to a deeper understanding of their place within the history of American Studies.
The purpose of this course on public humanities scholarship is to prepare graduate-level humanists for socially impactful careers, either within the academy in diverse contexts, or beyond. Course enrollees will build capacity for individualized public scholarship agendas in their teaching and research, alongside building a collaborative public project to debut at the Spring 2019 Humanities for the Public Good symposium.

The syllabus for the course is clustered around four areas: Working With People and Communities; Publicly Engaged Research; Accessible Writing and Public Writing; Models of Engaged Teaching. Critical and constructive examination of reigning and emerging paradigms of public scholarship will be paired with lab sessions in which students will work on engaged syllabi, pitch public writing projects, and work toward their final public project together.

Core course texts include Gilvin et al, eds., Collaborative Futures: Critical Reflections on Publicly Active Graduate Education (Syracuse, 2012); and Post et al, eds., Publicly Engaged Scholars (Stylus, 2016), and a number of shorter readings available online. (Schroeder S19)

American Studies 840 is a topical graduate seminar exploring the relationship between tools and materials of digital humanities, on the one hand, and methods and approaches of American Studies on the other. The Spring 2019 offering of this course will be organized around the history of North Carolina’s first and principal insane asylum, which opened as the North Carolina Asylum for the Insane in Raleigh in 1856 and became Dorothea Dix Hospital in 1959. The hospital was closed in 2012. This iteration of the course takes advantage of the ongoing research into the history of the hospital and its site, Dix Park, being conducted by the Community Histories Workshop in partnership with the City of Raleigh and the Dix Park Conservancy Board. Those interested in participating should contact Prof. Allen (rallen@email.unc.edu) for more information.

"Folklorists seek to understand how people interpret and make sense of the world. The study of folklore asks how, in a world flooded with commercial and highly refined cultural products, people use those particular materials that they themselves create and re-shape in order to express who they are, where they belong, and what they value. In this course we will look at diverse forms (or 'genres') of folklore, including song, architecture, legend, and food. We will consider how vernacular expressive culture is learned, what it does for people, and why these processes and products persist through time and space. Students will be introduced to the discipline of Folklore's central research methodology, ethnography, and have an opportunity to practice that approach in individual and group research projects."

This course is cross-listed with ENGL/ANTH 202.

Note: Students enrolling in FOLK 202-001 are also required to enroll in one recitation section numbered FOLK 202-601 through FOLK 202-604.

Narrating the everyday and the extraordinary are universal forms of expression. This course will explore the many ways in which oral narrative is communicated from migratory legends to song-making to a conversation at the kitchen table. Specific focus will be given to the ways in which individual and shared experience have been and continue to be communicated through various forms of Scottish Gaelic verbal art as found in both Scotland’s Highlands and Hebrides as well as within the Scottish Gaelic Diaspora from North Carolina to Atlantic Canada. These narratives include everyday conversations on how to give a fiddle tune the right "flavor" (blas) for dancing to immigrant memorates of treacherous Atlantic crossings to songs composed from the perspective of hungry sheep-thieving bears. They also entail extraordinary yet frequently expressed supernatural encounters with ambivalent fairies, shape-shifting witches and seal-wife ancestors as well as the foretelling of future events through the "gift" of second-sight (an d¿ shealladh) and comet-tailed ghost-lights. Taken together, these narratives reveal the many ways each of us makes sense of our experience in the world by artfully and effectually communicating it to others. (Falzett S19)

First-year students only.

DESCRIPTION:
By AD 1200, most Southeastern Indians were farmers who lived in societies ruled by hereditary chiefs. After 1500, encounters between Indians and Europeans changed the lives of all concerned, but the changes took place in, and were shaped by, existing cultures. This seminar uses reading, discussion, and lecture to examine the lives of Southern Indians and to understand how encounters and interaction with European explorers and colonists changed the worlds in which the Indians lived. Students will learn how archaeologists and historians work, both separately and together, to study the past of Native societies. Students will study and analyze archaeological artifacts, Spanish accounts of Southeastern Indians, and other primary materials in class. These activities, along with various role-playing exercises, will directly involve the students in the study of Native people in the period between 1200 and 1800. Grades will be

DESCRIPTION:
Race is a prominent feature of American life and the U.S. is made up of more small towns than large cities. What, then, does race mean for small town American life? The goal of this course is for students to understand how race shapes the ways that people live their lives in U.S. small and rural towns? We will address such questions as: How do a rural identity and a racial identity intersect? How do different racial groups experience rural life? How is race

TITLE:
Race | Sex | Latin America

GEN EDS:
SS, BN, CI

DESCRIPTION:
What can we learn by considering past and present differences of race, gender, and sexuality in Latin America and the Caribbean? What might this tell us about such a diverse region of the Americas, and even perhaps about our own forms of difference and inequality in North America? How might this exploration expand and transform our knowledge about this part of the world? This first-year seminar considers how race, gender, and sexuality come together in

ANTH 356H.001 | Artsisans and Global Culture

MW, 2:30 pm - 3:45 pm. Instructor(s): Lorraine Aragon. Enrollment = 20.

This course examines the role of skilled handwork in the creation of contemporary culture and society. Ethnographies about culturally varied artisan industries and apprenticeship will guide our investigation. We begin by exploring how the fundamentally human, sensual act of producing things with one's hands structures distinct ways of knowing and acting in the world. Next we turn to the archaeological record and consider the curious ways that skilled craftwork made chiefs, kings, and the concentration of political power possible. Taking up the industrial revolution, we will explore the customs and the causes that common folk defended as the alternative to a mechanized, capitalist order. Finally we devote the last third of the course to the parameters of modern artisan production, including the organization of work, the use of materials and technologies, and the differences between artists, artisans, trades people and laborers. Moving beyond the classroom and library, the course will have a major fieldwork and related class presentations component. Class participants will work throughout the semester with an artisan (defined broadly and inclusively) to make connections among readings, class discussions, and Design thinking is a popular buzz term in this age of Kickstarter, instant turnaround, and short time-to-market. But what is design thinking really all about? In many ways, it is a process that most of us were quite familiar with in our preschool years. Observe an opportunity. Take an action. Assess the results. Laugh at the failures. Repeat. Design is not just for artists and engineers — we are all designers!

But how do we get back to that pure form of design thought? In this class we will explore design through active making, discussion, presentation, and self-evaluation. Starting with the most basic of materials, we will exercise our latent creativity muscles and exorcise the constrained thinking and other obstacles engrained in us by "traditional" education. In this class, "failure" is an important concept that will be embraced and even celebrated. Science, entrepreneurship, and life itself is a process of try and try again. We must accept and learn from failure in order for "try" to become "do" and for "do" to lead to success.

This course earns 3 credit hours for Spring 2019. When enrolling for this course, please select 3 credit hours.

Instructor approval is NOT required for this course. Please disregard the ConnectCarolina description that says it is.

Take-home and in-class activities, group discussion and problem-solving coaching will enhance student understanding of how chemistry, physics, materials science and biology are applied to engineering. There will be special focus on BioEngineering, Chemical, Mechanical and Environmental Engineering. Discussions of relevant scientific literature introduce each topic. Guest lecturers and faculty will provide perspectives in fields like mathematical modeling, mechanical engineering or circuit design so students gain a true interdisciplinary view of topics.

This course earns 3 credit hours for Spring 2019. When enrolling for this course, please select 3 credit hours.

This course introduces principles of optical system design, covering a broad variety of imaging and microscopy instruments. The material will include computational methods for optical signal processing and basic principles governing light-matter interactions. The course will include theory and hands-on experience to implement and test methods. We will discuss recent publications and state-of-the-art optical systems which are task-driven, controlled by computers, tailored to specific applications, and optimized to monitor or manipulate complex systems.

Do you have an entrepreneurial idea and you would like to make a prototype to turn your idea into reality? Or do you want to experience the design and making process? In this class, you will go through this process for a semester-long project. The final outcome will be a prototype that meets an entrepreneurial need.

Students from any major are welcome to take this class. The pre-requisite is ECON 125, Introduction to Entrepreneurship. Orientation in the BeAM makerspace is also required.

You do not need to have an entrepreneurial idea before taking this class. You will work in groups to identify entrepreneurial ideas, which could emerge from discussions with people in the UNC community, local community, or around the country. From these ideas, you will choose a topic for your semester project, and then start working with your group on different designs, getting feedback throughout the process. By the end of the semester, you will fabricate a

Seminar Topic:
Paragons: Image and Text in Antiquity and the Renaissance

This seminar explores the dialogue between ancient literature, criticism and the visual arts, and its reprise in the European "long Renaissance," from the 14th to the 18th century. Throughout the semester, we will focus on key texts and works of art that reveal the close connections between ancient art criticism and the early modern theory of the arts. Though we will be discussing Greek and Latin texts, this course requires no knowledge of ancient languages.

This seminar will explore the intersections of art and emergent technologies. Focusing on specific theoretical models, cultural analyses, artists, and artworks, we will examine the multifaceted relationships between technology, culture, and art, and the implicit and explicit politics of such relationships. We will explore the ways in which technological development has affected perception, subjectivity, social thought, activism, critique, and the shifting conceptions of art, artist, viewer, and artistic practice.
Scholars of African American art are increasingly redefining the field in terms of the broader African diaspora. What does it mean to study diaspora culture? How does diaspora culture interact with globalization? How have artists approached the question of diaspora? This seminar is designed for students new to the topic and for those who took my previous seminar on the topic. We will explore a range of theories of diaspora, black internationalism, and globalization, including the work of Stuart Hall, Paul Gilroy, Kobena Mercer, Jacqueline Francis, Tobias Wofford, and Huey Copeland and Krista Thompson, including their theory of "Afrotropes."

TR, 11:00AM - 1:45PM. Instructor(s): Joy Drury Cox. Enrollment = 15.

In ARTS 105H Basic Photography you will be introduced to the basic techniques of digital photography. Both technical and conceptual applications of image-making will be explored. This course seeks to develop an understanding of the mechanics, visual language, and history of the photographic medium. Specifically, we will work with digital photographic practices, learning the fundamentals of DSLR cameras, Adobe editing software such as Photoshop and Bridge, inkjet printing, and basic digital workflow and file management. In conjunction with your studio practice, you will also learn about the medium's rich history.
Assignments will be supplemented with readings, films, library, and museum visits. Over the course of the semester, you will be exposed to a variety of examples of historical and contemporary photography. In the classroom you will be exposed to technical demonstrations, lectures, discussions, critiques.

Movie Making Machines: Learning About Cinema in the Maker Space
Though we generally think of movies as the result of the work of screenwriters, cinematographers, actors, and directors, movies are also the product of a range of scientific and technological concepts and innovations. The magic of the movies begins with the technologies that make moving images possible. This

PREREQUISITES:
First-year students only.

DESCRIPTION:
In this course, students will experience films by some of the most acclaimed directors working in various languages and regions of India, as well as the Indian diaspora. The cinematic journey in this course will introduce students to important themes in South Asian culture and history over the past 200 years. It will also introduce students to some of the formal elements of filmmaking to help them better read the text of film, and appreciate the craft and aesthetics of filmmaking. There will be weekly film screenings and related readings on Indian cinema, culture, and film theory. For the Communication-Intensive component of this course, students will receive feedback on a piece of their writing and be asked to revise and resubmit it. They will also be given opportunities to speak on assigned topics in class.

DESCRIPTION:
Arab World Photography introduces students to the practice of photography in the Arab world. We will begin by studying photography of the Arab world by others: European travelers and missionaries, colonialists, ethnographers, journalists, etc. We will examine and discuss selected images, paying particular attention to the relationship that is created and/or represented in them. This viewing will be supplemented with background readings on the history and/or sociopolitical or cultural contexts in which the images are made. We will then turn our attention to indigenous photography in the Arab world. What types of images do people in the region make for themselves and to what purpose? In what ways are these images similar to or different from the photographs created about them by travelers and colonial administrators, foreign journalists, and academics? We will then consider photographs of war and violence and what
DESCRIPTION:
In this course, we will explore the various ways that wars and conflicts, particularly Iran-Iraq, U.S.-Iraq, and U.S.-Afghanistan wars, have been portrayed in literature, film, and photography. We will attempt to deepen and enrich our understanding of war experienced by both veterans and civilians of each country. We will examine the impact of war on the human psyche in regards with violence. We will read books by American war veterans and Middle East authors contemplating the wars and their consequences. We will look at each writer's perspective on war and their interpretation of it comparatively. In order to enhance our understanding of the phenomenon of war, we will also read supplementary articles on criticism of war and a few on psychology of war. There will be film screening on these wars which will give students the opportunity to examine these wars in a different medium than just literature. We will also look

TITLE:
Transnational Korea: Literature, Film, Popular Culture

GEN EDS:
LA, BN

DESCRIPTION:
Taking the recent Korean Wave phenomenon as its point of departure, this course introduces students to the history of transnational imaginations in modern and contemporary Korean culture. Drawing upon literature, film, television, and secondary scholarship, we will explore how a diverse array of Korean cultural producers have used narratives of cross-border travel, migration, and exchange to rethink Korea's place in the world and refashion Korean identity.

Biol | 53 | 001 | 5677 | FY5 TOPICS IN BIOTECH | Lecture | 3 | A

Prerequisites:
First-year students only.

Description:
A good life depends on access to adequate food and medical care. Advances in biotechnology have made possible both agriculture and medicine, and further advances may allow us to feed and keep healthy a burgeoning population in both developed and undeveloped countries. This seminar will examine the science behind a number of striking recent advances in biology, including animal cloning, genetic engineering of crop plants, development of new therapeutic drugs, development of embryonic stem cells, and deciphering of the complete human genome sequence. Students will debate how specific technological advances force us to confront new social and ethical choices, such as whether you want your own genome to be sequenced. We will also consider how new technologies are actually implemented, and we will visit an academic lab and a biotechnology company. The seminar should bring together the humanistic and technical impulses.

First Years and Sophomores only

This lab introduces students to the process of science through collaboration on a research project, learning relevant techniques and scientific skills. Topics may include identification of soil bacteria and isolation of natural products they produce.

This lab can be taken in place of BIOL 101L and when taken with BIOL 101, counts as Communication Intensive credit.

First Year Launch class = The Creativity of Science, or Scientific Thinking in Biology

Counts as Allied Science elective in the BIOL major

Open only to first-year students and/or transfer students in their first year at UNC. Transfers unable to register please email Dr Shank with your PID number: eshank@email.unc.edu

This course provides an introduction to the dynamic, creative, and open-ended process that is the scientific method. Through guided analysis of news reports and scientific articles, this class will encourage students to learn how to discuss and debate data and their interpretation, generate and evaluate hypotheses, and design experiments to test their hypotheses. We will discuss current biological topics relevant to society (such as antibiotic resistance and discovery, the human microbiome, or how microbes impact our environment) while emphasizing the creativity and open-ended nature of research and the diversity of people who do science. No previous experience reading scientific literature is required, but a curiosity about biology, the scientific process, research and discovery, or communication of technical ideas is recommended.

BIOL 202H 001 (MOLECULAR BIOLOGY & GENETICS)

Building: Genome Sciences Building
Room: 1378
Days: TuTh
Time: 09:30 - 10:45

Instructor(s): Kerry Bloom / Joe Kieber

Enrollment: 24

Attributes: PL - Physical and Life Science

Course Description:
The content of this course will be essentially the same as that of a regular section of Biology 202. We will discuss the structure and function of nucleic acids as well as the principles of inheritance, gene expression, and genetic engineering. There will be four lecture/discussion hours per week with special emphasis on class discussion. In addition to two mid-term exams and the final exam, there will be one significant writing assignment and one small group project during the semester. The required text for this course will be Introduction to Genetic Analysis (11th edition) by Griffiths et al. There is likely to be additional assigned reading from the primary literature. Students who have taken or are currently taking organic chemistry will be particularly well prepared for this course.

Prerequisite: BIOL 101 AND CHEM 101 OR 102 WITH A GRADE OF C OR BETTER.

BIOL 205 006 (CELL & DEVELOPMENTAL BIOLOGY)

Building: Coker
Room: 0201
Days: TuTh
Time: 09:30 - 10:45

Instructor(s): Zachary Luke Nimchuk / Stephen L Rogers

Enrollment: 199

Course Description:
This course requires a recitation in the 600-699 range.

Honors students get priority registration for all honors courses. Non-honors students (minimum 3.0 GPA) can put themselves on the honors course waitlist: honorscarolina.unc.edu/waitlist between Nov 19 and Jan 2. The Honors Office will review waitlists daily and contact students directly if a seat is available. Please do not contact the professor regarding the waitlist.

BIOL 205H.001 | Cellular and Developmental Biology
TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Bob Goldstein / Amy Maddox. Enrollment = 24.

BIOL 205H Cellular and Developmental Biology is an Honors course that covers the fundamentals of cell structure and activity in relation to special functions, metabolism, reproduction, embryogenesis, and post-embryonic development, with an introduction to the experimental analysis of cell physiology and development. The material that we present will mirror what is presented in non-honors sections, plus we will use some class periods for hands-on enrichment activities and discussions. These activities are designed to give you experiences related to the course topics, and to give you time to interact informally with the instructors and with each other.

PREREQUISITE: Grade of C- or Better in BIOL 202.

BIOL 224H.001 | The Mathematics of Life Lecture 3 (Face to Face Instruction)
TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Maria Servedio / Todd Vision. Enrollment = 24.

This course is aimed at Honors Biology majors in their sophomore or junior year. It enriches the foundational material from BIOL 201, 202 and 205 by studying classic applications of math to many of the same topics. By revealing the mathematical underpinnings of much of the material in the majors' core, this course will introduce students to quantitative approaches and research directions across Biology.

One of the goals of this section is to make a mathematical approach to these topics as accessible as possible. To accomplish this, we will use a number of techniques to remove some of the anxiety that many students experience when dealing with mathematical problems. These include making the material accessible by approaching the mathematical formulations from intuitive biological principles, eliminating time constraints in problem solving as much as possible, working in groups, and encouraging lots of questions. No advanced mathematical knowledge beyond the first semester of calculus. The mathematical techniques
NOTE: Honors Carolina students register online when their registration appointment begins. Non-honors students register beginning November 19. If you are unable to enroll online, submit a wait list request at honorscarolina.unc.edu/waitlist between November 19 and January 2.

The purpose of BIOL 395H is to provide honors students with independent research experience, while working in a research lab on a question of current biological interest. Under the supervision of a faculty member, and with contribution of research postdoctoral fellows, students will learn more than just basic research techniques. They will learn how to start to think as scientists, raising hypotheses and finding ways to test them in an empirical manner. In addition to the research performed in the lab, honors students will meet with each other on a weekly basis, discuss their research and develop their scientific thinking through reading and discussing primary scientific literature.

FOR BIOLOGY MAJORS ONLY. PREVIOUS ENROLLMENT IN BIOL 201 OR 202 REQUIRED. DEPARTMENT OF BIOLOGY PERMISSION REQUIRED; APPLICATION AVAILABLE IN 213 COKER HALL.

BIOL 395H may be taken for no more than six graded academic credits. Three to five credit hours of research may be counted as one lecture course toward...

BIOL 565H.001 | Conservation Biology

TR, 12:30 pm - 1:45 pm; Recitation: T, 2:00 pm - 2:50 pm. Instructor(s): Peter White. Enrollment = 24.

Our objective in the Honors Section of Biology 565 (Conservation Biology) is to take the course material from the Biology 565 lectures and find new, interactive, and collaborative ways to explore and learn about course topics from lectures and readings. In the past, we've examined and dissected the biological science embedded, unseen, in contemporary events and news stories. We've applied course topics to North Carolina environmental problems. We've devised original games that are based on course material, including predicting the future of endangered species populations and community decision making about conservation issues. We've invited in practitioners in the field for guest lectures with particular reference to what their day-to-day jobs are like, how they found their way to particular careers, and how students can approach the job market and careers in conservation science. But we will design our objectives, methods, and schedule together as a class early in the semester.

The goal of this course is to familiarize students with the theory and practice of genome editing technologies in a weekly seminar course format. This course is intended for graduate students and advanced undergraduates (with permission) with broad interests in molecular biology and is not specific to any one model system. Post-docs are also welcome and encouraged to attend and participate.

Behavior is "the internally coordinated responses (actions or inactions) of whole living organisms (individuals or groups) to internal and/or external stimuli . . . . " (Levitis et al. 2009).
Behavior ranges from mate attraction, egg production, and parental care to herd aggregation, navigation, and predator defense. Behavior is uniquely positioned at the interface between organism and environment and therefore can only be understood completely in the context of ecology. In this seminar, students will lead discussions of the primary literature on behavioral ecology. We intend to discuss a wide range of topics including ultimate and proximate control; behavioral plasticity; innate and learned behavior; and the neuroendocrine, developmental, and evolutionary causes of behavior. Because consideration of the natural ecology of organisms is a major goal of this seminar, we will not examine studies of behavior with minimal context in Ecology is more quantitative and theory-driven than ever. Many processes in ecology such as predator-prey interactions, disease spread, competition, and ecosystem functioning can be difficult to measure or manipulate in the field. Luckily, computer simulations can provide essential insights about the natural world. This course will improve your understanding of fundamental ecological concepts while developing skills in R.

Using the R programming environment and reading of academic papers, this class will explore how to translate descriptions of major ecological processes (like predation or disease spread). This course will be hands on, and so some experience using R and/or other coding languages is necessary. However, students do not need to be experts; we will review the basics!

We will meet 1x a week (2.5 hours), final date and time to be determined. Taught by Dr. Tucker (carolinetucker@unc.edu). Please email with questions about prerequisites, etc.

Pre-requisites: BIOL 201 and one upper level ecology class

Prerequisites: BIOL 202

This course will target upper level undergraduate and entry level graduate students. The course will introduce the concept of using engineering principles to modify cells in applications such as drug delivery and cellular therapy. The goals of the course are to 1) discuss genome editing technologies, 2) evaluate strategies for directed differentiation of stem cells, and 3) illustrate how cells can be applied to bioprocess engineering. Students should register for 3 credit hours for this course.

CHEM 241H.001 | Honors Modern Analytical Methods for Separation and Characterization

TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Leslie Hicks. Enrollment = 25.

Analytical separations, chromatographic methods, spectrophotometry, acid-base equilibria and titrations, fundamentals of electrochemistry.

PREREQUISITE: CHEM 102 OR 102H
Dr. Hicks received her B.S. in Chemistry at Marshall University (summa cum laude) and Ph.D. in Analytical Chemistry at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign where she was the recipient of an NSF Graduate Research Fellowship. She was an Assistant Member and Principal Investigator at the Donald Danforth Plant Science Center and an adjunct professor in the Department of Biology at Washington University in St. Louis prior to assuming her current role.

CHEM 245L.401 | Honors Laboratory in Separations and Analytical Characterization of Organic and Biological Compounds
R, 1:00 pm - 3:50 pm. Instructor(s): Domenic Tiani. Enrollment = 15.
In the honors analytical methods lab students will use chromatographic, spectroscopic, and electrochemical methods to carry out a real world analysis. Students will work with real world samples throughout the semester and the lab course will emphasize group work. A portion of the lab will involve a group research project. Groups will be given a problem to solve and the time to design their own experiments, run their experiments, collect data, and give a poster presentation on their group research project. What is great about the group research is that each group decides on their own direction, what techniques they wish to use, and need to use, to solve a particular analysis problem.

PREREQUISITE: CHEM 101/101L AND 102/102L.
PRE/COREQUISITE: CHEM 241H.

CHEM 262H.001 | Honors Organic Chemistry I
TR, 9:30-10:45am. Instructor(s): Simon Meek. Enrollment = 30.
Continuation of CHEM 261H with particular emphasis on the chemical properties of organic molecules. This course will be similar to CHEM 262, but with a greater emphasis on class discussion and on discussion of contemporary research problems.

PREREQUISITE: CHEM 261 OR 261H.

DEPARTMENT OF CHEMISTRY CONSENT REQUIRED. EMAIL chemus@unc.edu.

Simon Meek is Assistant Professor of Chemistry. Researchers in Dr. Meek's group are involved with the discovery, design, and development of new chiral

Chemical Biology. 3 Credits.

Application of chemical principles and tools to study and manipulate biological systems; in-depth exploration of examples from the contemporary literature. Topics include new designs for the genetic code, drug design, chemical arrays, single molecule experiments, laboratory-based evolution, chemical sensors, and synthetic biology.

Requisites: Prerequisite, CHEM 430.

CHEM 397H.001 | Honors Colloquium in Chemistry
Instructor(s): Dorothy Erie. Enrollment = 10.

This course is designed for students in the Honors Program to complement their research work carried out under Chem395H. This class will meet weekly. One focus of the course will be to expand students’ exposure to specialized areas of research through guided literature readings and seminars with invited speakers. The second focus will be to aid students in preparing their research for evaluation. Students will develop professional skills including (1) devising a clear hypothesis and designing well-controlled experimental methods; (2) developing good graphical aids to present data and concepts to an audience; (3) giving a clear research presentation to a broad audience; (4) writing an effective research report and (5) evaluating ethical issues that arise in a research setting. CHEM 395H and 397H together may not be counted for more than nine hours total credit toward the B.A. or B.S. degree in chemistry.

Class Equivalents: CHEM 460/460H
CHEM 460H.001 | Intermediate Organic Chemistry
TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Marcey Waters. Enrollment = 30.
Concurrent to CHEM 460 with increased emphasis on primary literature.

PREREQUISITE: CHEM 262 OR 262H.
TO REGISTER FOR CHEM 460H, YOU MUST BE REGISTERED FOR CHEM 460 FIRST. ONCE YOU ARE REGISTERED FOR CHEM 460, PLEASE EMAIL chemus@unc.edu REGARDING YOUR INTEREST IN REGISTERING FOR CHEM 460H.

Professor Waters’ research interests are at the interface of organic chemistry and biochemistry. The overarching goal of her research is to design molecules to control biomolecular recognition for biomedical applications.

Taking a participatory approach to ancient Greek drama, this course pairs readings of three Athenian playwrights (Aeschylus, Euripides, and Aristophanes) with performance-oriented activities, readings, and writings. At its most traditional, this course surveys the historical and cultural context of the so-called ¿classical¿ Athens of the fifth-century BCE, placing particular focus on the political, religious, and aesthetic forces that gave rise to humankind¿s first recorded theater.

More ambitiously, however, this course probes the dual nature of theater ¿ its distinct but intertwined existences as script and performance ¿ through sustained investigations of some of its earliest and most influential texts. Through a variety of original compositions (e.g., Tweets, character backstories, stand-up routines, press releases, director¿s and dramaturg¿s notes, performance reviews, and scholarly analyses) students will acquire

The intersection of history-writing, cinema and fiction will be our focus as we engage with the greatest Greek historians ¿ Herodotus, Thucydides, Polybius ¿ against the backdrop of modern renditions of the past and of war in cinema (including Peter Weir¿s Gallipoli (1981), Wolfgang Petersen¿s Troy (2004) and Zack Snyder¿s 300 (2007)), documentaries (including Tolga Ornek¿s Gallipoli (2005), news footage and short stories. We will examine the strategies of each of our ancient writers in confronting challenges that remain pressing for directors, journalists and historians today. These include difficulties of conflicting perspectives, biased evidence, and the limitations of memory, as well as broader questions about the nature of historical representation. Should it present the `warts and all¿ truth, or commemorate and memorialize? What balance should it strive for between informing and educating us, and providing our entertainment? Where lies the border between history and fiction? Homer¿s portrayal of the legendary past will supply a further touchstone. The aim is for students to engage in critical and informed analysis of the strategies of our three ancient historians in `writing the past¿, and to draw appropriate

TITLE:
Ancient Magic and Religion

GEN EDs:
LA, WB

DESCRIPTION:
Bindings and curses, love charms and healing potions, amulets and talismans; from simple spells to complex group rituals, ancient societies made use of both magic and religion to try to influence the world around them. In this course, we shall examine the roles of magic and religion in the ancient Greek and Roman worlds, paying special attention to their local contexts and to the myths and actual techniques ancient practitioners used to serve their clientele.

CLAS 363H.001 | Latin and Greek Lyric Poetry in Translation
TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Patricia Rosenmeyer. Enrollment = 24.

CLAS 363H This class will introduce you to the lyric poetry of ancient Greece and Rome, with an additional unit on the Song of Songs from the Hebrew Bible. Our theme will be love poetry. Ideas of love and desire are culturally determined, reflecting assumptions often very different from our own. We will read a variety of poems in the context of their socio-historical settings, and address a range of issues including physical vs. spiritual love, cultural ideals of beauty, literary representations of gender roles and sexual preferences, the dynamics of tradition and imitation in literature, and conventions of literary form. This course will be taught as a seminar, allowing for discussion and in-depth analysis of the poetry. Students will write a total of 20 pages during the semester, including an interpretative project and a final research paper. There are no prerequisites, but students may find that a basic knowledge of ancient Greek and Roman civilizations will be helpful to them in the class.

Attributes: Social and Behavioral Science

Reserve Capacity:
- 13-NOV-2018 RC CLAS UG FFYS STDTS
- 18-NOV-2018 RC CLAS UG FFYS STDTS

PREREQUISITES:
First-year students only.

DESCRIPTION:
The network is the 21st century's most popular metaphor, used to describe relationships, economies, technological infrastructures, and politics. In this class, we will delve into the relationship between networked digital technologies (social media, video games, server farms, gig economy apps like Uber and Care.com, cryptocurrency, online retailers, political campaign apps, etc.) and the ways we think about ourselves, our communities, our jobs, money, our careers, and our environment. In this seminar, we will delve deeply into some of these technologies and processes, with the goal of providing participants with a set of critical and theoretical tools to interpret the complexity of everyday life. We will do a lot of reading, try out a variety of new networked technologies, and debate their ramifications in class, culminating in a series of essays on technology and society. This class is a great fit for sci-fi fans.

DESCRIPTION:
Extremist groups use materials that are particularly dependent on the visual: videos, memes, even old school posters. This class will examine the way these materials work to persuade by, first, looking at the power of the visual image itself. How do visuals work in any context? What makes one visual effective, while another falls flat, one memorable, while another is forgettable? Then we will look at the way visuals are harnessed by extremist groups in any number...

Title: Mediating the US-Mexico Border
Gen EDS: VP, US
Description: The US-Mexico border is a contentious site in public culture, media, and the lives of the people who daily navigate it. A remote site for many, understanding the border takes place largely through the images that mediate it. This course is an investigation into cultural mediations of the US-Mexico border through film, photography, music, performance, and digital media. Critically examining these mediations we will seek to ground the images and ideas.

Title: Environmental Communication and the Media
Gen EDS: SS, GL
Description: This seminar introduces first year students to the ways in which climate science, ecology and environmental science and climate change intersect with and are represented in politics, cultural artifacts, and the media. From television news, newspapers, and radio to social media such as Facebook and Twitter, climate change is a political, social, and cultural phenomenon. Climate change and global warming are also potentially consequential natural phenomena that

COMM 120H.001 | Introduction to Interpersonal and Organizational Communication
Instructor(s): Katie Striley. Enrollment = 20.
Interpersonal communication is about our connections with other human beings. Communication shapes our understandings of ourselves, others, organizations, and social systems. Our communication creates and recreates the social worlds in which we reside. We often take interpersonal communication for granted, assuming that we already know much of it because we engage it on a daily basis. Yet, through engaged study, we will come to realize that interpersonal communication is complicated, consequential, and crucial. This course provides a space to openly analyze and discuss the role interpersonal and organizational communication plays in our understanding of self, other, and everyday life as constituted through the relationships that we create, sustain, and sometimes end.

This course has prerequisite requirements.
This course has major restrictions.

Prerequisite: COMM 130 (C or better)

Permission of instructor for non-majors and those who are lacking the prerequisite.

Course Description:
This course will explore the material, processes, and procedures of audio, video, and film production. Our emphasis will be on the control of those elements of convention that define the form in the appropriate medium. The creative development of narrative and documentary storytelling forms through the stages of pre-production through production and post-production will be explored through lectures, workshops, lab exercises and most importantly hands on practice.

COMM 325H.001 | Introduction to Organizational Communication
TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Dennis Mumby. Enrollment = 20.
This course will involve a critical examination of the field of organizational communication. We will begin by studying the various theories of organizational behavior that have been developed in the past 100 years, looking at both the elements of each theory and the ways that they have shaped organizational life. The course will examine organizations as complex social structures that exist in equally complex social and political environments. We will explore the nature of work and how it has evolved in recent decades, with particular emphasis on the world of work that students are likely to encounter after graduation.

We will also focus on the communication-organization relationship, examining organizations as communication phenomena. Through this communication approach, we will study various contemporary organizational phenomena, such as the new workplace, branding and consumption, leadership, gender and difference, and the

Course Topic: Social Media
This class examines the relationship between society and the current crop of computer-mediated communication technologies known as "social media", including Facebook, Twitter, Snapchat, Instagram, and more. These technologies are often regarded with fear or awe; the purpose of this class is to break down the mythologies of social media and develop methods of analysis and critical understanding. To do this, we will draw from a broad range of social theory including science and technology studies (STS), communication theory, linguistics, cultural studies, and media anthropology to critically evaluate the impact of social media on relationships, activism, branding, politics, news media, and identity. We will focus on the sociotechnical, the relationship between the technical affordances of a website/technology and the social norms of a user community, and how to use this to understand emerging technologies (and social media that doesn't exist yet!).

Course Topic: The Dark Side of Interpersonal Communication

The "dark side" of communication is a metaphor intended to describe the study of disruptive, dysfunctional, distorted, distressing, and destructive aspects of human communication and the direct and indirect effects of human exploitation. This course explores the dark side of communication - the side that allows us to lie, cheat, exploit, objectify, misguide, resist, stigmatize, judge, reject and exclude. Along the way, it provides the opportunity to explore a variety of theoretical perspectives and apply them to the everyday problems we face in our interpersonal encounters. A sample of topics discussed throughout the course include: deviants, rebels, outsiders, ostracism, exile, peer rejection, social judgments, surveillance and policing, stigma, alienation and loneliness, conformity, group think, deceit, gossip, secrets, revenge and abuse.

Course Topic: Writing the Full Length Play

This course expands upon the students basic knowledge of character, plot, dialogue, and structure. The importance of editing and revision are explored in great detail. Students will write a full length, polished script and receive instruction on submitting work to theaters. The prerequisites for this course are COMM 131, DRAM 231, or ENG 130 or 132. Students who do not have these requirements can contact the instructor for approval to take the course.

Howard Craft is creator of the first dramatic African American Super Hero Podcast and The Jade City Chronicles which is currently in development with a release date set for the spring of 2017. Craft is also the creator of audio drama, The Jade City Pharaoh and is the Department of Communication Piller Visiting Professor of Practice.

Understanding that the hard work of solidarity- and coalition-building cannot be accomplished without a commitment to engaging with and respecting differences, this course focuses on the nuanced stories that women of African, Latin, Asian, Middle-Eastern and Native American descent tell about living, working, loving, and building community within various US cultural contexts. With an analytical toolbox drawn from theories of feminism, race, ethnicity, decolonization, and performance, we will examine the cultural narratives and critical perspectives these diverse women offer through their poetry, short stories, and drama.

Course participants will create performances (live, mediated, art-object), reflection papers and a research paper as critical tools in analyzing course materials. Performance will serve as a process-oriented, participatory, and experiential way of critically engaging our theme.

Detailed course description:
The purpose of Hate Speech is to expose students to the nature of hate in American life. As we attempt to understand the essential qualities of hate we will learn that hate is made possible through communication (sometimes in the form of hate speech) and human perception (sometimes in the forms of stereotypes and bias). We will learn that hatred is sustained through the imposition of racist, sexist, and heterosexist ideologies that privilege Whiteness, maleness, and heterosexuality. Sometimes these ideologies are explicitly understood by the people who use them. Sometimes these ideologies and the assumptions underlying them are only implicitly understood and we may be relatively unaware of their influence.

We will also learn that hate may also be resisted through communication. Students will learn how communication may serve to teach respect and tolerance,

This course is reserved for COMM students for the first two weeks of enrollment. Non-majors can begin enrolling on November 19th.

In this course students will learn a wide range of post-production techniques for video projects, using primarily After Effects (and Photoshop, to a lesser extent). Topics explored include: Compositing, that is to say the integration and collage-ing of multiple video/film/still/text layers. Motion Graphics deals with the movement through 2D and 3D screen space of these layers, and Visual Effects will consider the myriad ways one can distort, color manipulate, and modify these layers, or create such phenomena as smoke, rain, etc. Besides creating projects using these techniques, we will also screen and analyze how this form of image manipulation is used in television and motion pictures.

In Media in Performance, students will acquire advanced skills and explore critical approaches that are necessary for creating advanced, professional multi-media works in concert with live performance. Working collaboratively, using text, music, and devising processes, students will refine their understanding of the concepts and processes of creating multi-media theatre and build performance works that marry live and mediated elements in a fully integrated experience.

<td>Though we generally think of movies as the result of the work of screenwriters, cinematographers, actors, and directors, movies are also the product of a range of scientific and technological concepts and innovations. The magic of the movies begins with the technologies that make moving images possible. This projects-based seminar will introduce students to the fundamental optical and technological principles of motion pictures. By using the Maker Space to design and fabricate cameras, lenses, film strips, and movie projectors, students will gain a deep understanding of the material and technological foundations of the cinema, and the operating principles that are behind not only the classic films of Hollywood's past, but the high-definition digital imaging technologies of the present. Over the semester, students will learn about the history and science of early cinema through lectures and readings while delving into the principles of</td> your answer is no, then this class is for you.

In this course, we will explore the aesthetics of sound design for motion pictures. We will listen to movies. Lots of movies. Listening, after all, is an act of subversion or rebellion in a world that privileges the image. Our goal is to give the soundtrack its due. Through discussions, readings, and a series of production projects, we will consider the elements that constitute a soundtrack and examine the ways that sound finds a home on the Silver Screen.

Because of our discipline’s expansiveness, we have developed a set of core courses designed to orient you towards the richness of communication’s inheritance and current substance. The core is not designed to limit your theoretical perspective but, instead, should help you consider the possible range of contributions of communication, as a mode of inquiry. This specific core course, Communication and the Social, was created in combination with Communication and the Political and Communication and the Discursive to

As new projects and struggles to transform the world have brought about profound economic, political, sociological and cultural changes, political intellectuals have a responsibility to understand "what's going on," to analyze how these changes are realized, lived, represented and resisted in significantly different ways by different peoples in different political, cultural and geographical positions around the globe, and, through their intellectual and imaginative efforts, to open up further possibilities for struggle and change. This class assumes that cultural studies is a specific but always contextually determined project that investigates contexts as problem spaces. It embraces the contingency and complexity of existing relations and structures, in attempting to understand how the multiplicities of struggles, articulations and effects—among discursive formations, material assemblages, everyday experiences, social structures and apparatuses of power—are organized in/as specific contexts. It embraces interdisciplinarity because it refuses to reduce the complexity of any context (or phenomenon for that matter) to a single dimension, aspect or contradiction. It sees power as always multi-dimensional, multi-modal and contested. It refuses to assume that having the "right" theory or politics is enough to guarantee one's analyses and thus, it operates with a distinctive affective tone: modest, provisional, open-ended, uncertain and...

Course topic: Buff and Polish

The objective of this seminar/practicum is to provide students with an orientation to the process of finding employment in an academic setting, and to provide students with opportunities to develop the materials necessary to assist in that effort. While the focus is primarily on entry-level academic positions, such as Assistant Professor, materials developed as part of the course are applicable to applying for post-doctoral fellowships, "ABD" positions, and work in other settings (e.g. governmental) requiring a Ph.D.

This course provides an experiential learning environment so you can gain experience building the early stages of a software startup. This course is a lab, where you will be working in teams, brainstorming a new product or service concept, actively getting feedback from potential customers and partners, researching competitors, and developing a "minimum viable product." A minimum viable product is a product or service with the smallest number of features that will provide value to a set of customers. The end goal is to develop a software product or service that customers will actually want to use. For the course, you can either pursue a for-profit or non-profit startup idea.

This course examines the nature, function, and effects of the Internet and Internet use in the context of an extended study of its history, considering key technologies, concepts, ideas, innovators, and historical and sociocultural influences. Significant reading, writing, research, and beginner-friendly, code-light web development and data science components. No previous programming or technical experience is required. This course is suitable for both CS majors and nonmajors.

Tessa Joseph-Nicholas, MFA/PhD, is a Teaching Associate Professor in the Department of Computer Science. Her teaching and research explore the intersection of computing technologies and human culture with a blend of approaches and methods from the computational to the creative. Specific interests include Internet histories, cultures, and communities; digital literatures, arts, and poetics; inclusive, accessible web design and development; net neutrality and

COMP 585H.001 | Serious Games

MW, 11:15AM - 12:30PM, Instructor(s): Diane Pozefsky.

COMP 585H is taught in conjunction of COMP 585: that is, it is a single set of lectures that all students will attend. Students interested in 585H are to enroll in 585 and switching to the honors section will be done after the first day of class. In addition, COMP 585H students will have an additional project separate from the class assignment and will have a weekly meeting related to it. The additional project will be built around the specific interests of the students but will include more in depth development and design of topics taught in COMP 585. Possible topics include techniques for adapting the difficulty of a game to a player's achievements or topics of current research within the department such as advanced simulations of human behavior, sound simulation or use of devices such as Oculus Rift or Google Glass. COMP 585H students may work in teams or individually on their projects.

PREREQUISITES:
First-year students only.

DESCRIPTION:
This seminar will explore the artists, art and technology involved in creating the world of the play. It is intended as an overview for students who want to learn about theatrical design. Students will create their own designs in the areas of scenery, costumes, and lighting for three plays throughout the semester. The plays will be placed outside of their traditional setting while still maintaining the story and themes. Students have placed Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream in a trailer park and a daycare center for example. Careful historical research, close reading and analysis, text and source material, and collaboration will be the focus of the student projects.

DRAM 087H.001 | Style: A Mode of Expression

This seminar studies the elements of design in their pure form and in context, surveys a history of period styles and theatre, and identifies their causes. Consider Oscar Wilde's statement from The Decay of Living 1889:
¿Life imitates Art far more than Art imitates Life. This results not merely from Life's imitative instincts, but from the fact that the self conscious aim of Life is to find expression, and that Art offers it certain beautiful forms through which it may realize that energy¿
Do you agree or disagree?

Art and design have frequently shown the inner life of humankind throughout history better than political, intellectual or social history. While a period's style is seldom defined by the everyday choices of everyday people and is most often recorded in the works of artists, writers and intellectuals we must recognize the ¿times¿ as a major motivator for all stylistic choices. Even minor arts reflect major events.

DRAM 586.001 | Costume History: Africa, Asia, and Arabia
TR, 12:30 pm - 1:45 pm. Instructor(s): Bobbi Owen. Enrollment = 10.

The course considers traditional garments worn in Africa, Asia, and on the Arabian Peninsula. Specific peoples considered vary from semester to semester. Class format for 12:30-01:45 is mainly lecture accompanied by numerous illustrations; there are also demonstrations and lots of real objects to view (and handle). Students who participate in the Honors section will also meet on Thursday afternoon from 4-5 pm and consider the ways in which ethnicity in dress is re-interpreted and/or mis-interpreted by Hollywood. The film, Black Panther (Ryan Coogler, 2018), depicts characters very effectively -- even though they are wearing elements of traditional dress from several different peoples in Africa. We will examine the costumes in that film and a few others (chosen by the class) which might include The Queen of Katwe (Mira Nair, 2016) and English Vinglish (Gauri Shinde, 2012).

TITLE:
Curiosity and the Birth of the Imagination

GEN EDS:
LA, WB

DESCRIPTION:
Today we tend to see curiosity and imagination as two peas in a very positive pod. Yet, although they have often been linked together, neither curiosity nor the imagination has always been viewed in such a favorable light. Pandora’s curiosity supposedly unleashed all ills and calamities upon the world. In the sixteenth century, Michel de Montaigne famously called the imagination a ‘runaway horse’ and asserted that the imagination brings fevers and death to

Change, Metamorphosis, Transformation

The relationship between literature and the visual arts, especially literature and painting, has been a major theme of interest and controversy from classical times to the present day. Do the verbal and the visual complement each other or are they rivals locked in conflict and competition? Are the "sister arts", as they are frequently known, friends or foes? We will explore these issues in representative texts and works of art that focus on the theme of metamorphosis and transformation from classical antiquity to about 1700. We will read and study works by Ovid, Cervantes, and Shakespeare, among others, and make several visits to the Ackland Museum in our exploration of these issues. (Collins S19)

This course considers responses to “being modern” from 1800 to 2019. What features define “modern” societies, and what difficulties do citizens of such societies face? We will read works by Jane Austen, Fyodor Dostoyevsky, Jorge Borges, Henrik Ibsen, E. L. Doctorow, J. M. Coetzee, Colson Whitehead, and Kamila Shamsie. Students will write short reading responses and four 2500 word essays along with making oral presentations in class. (McGowan S19)

The course is designed to consider moving-image media in light of the longer history of media and visual art. To this end, the class follows on a number of pictorial and technology traditions to which film and digital media are heir, including painting, lithography, photography, etc. This year, in particular, we will focus on the relationship between nature (ecology) and art, but we will also take this opportunity to think about the disappearance of the natural world and the significance of images: cinematic and otherwise, today. Screenings for the class will likely include:

- Herzog, Fitzcarraldo
- Malick, Days of Heaven
- Antonioni, L’Eclisse
- Varda, The Gleaners and I
- Frammartino, Le Quattrro Volte

Attributes: VP- Visual or Performing Arts, GL- Global Issues

Ever since Auguste and Louis Lumière sent their cinematograph on a world tour in 1896, the cinema has been global. At each stop, from St. Petersburg to Mexico City, from Melbourne to New York, the Lumière company shot as well as exhibited films, producing a catalogue of views from 31 countries. In this course, we will consider the original Lumière vision of a truly global cinema, one that accommodates a diversity of cultures in a medium that has enduring worldwide appeal. While we will conduct a broad historical overview of the cinema, our approach will focus on paradigmatic shifts in the medium. Drawing deeply and widely from the history of motion pictures, we consider how the cinema is used to deliver spectacle and develop narrative, measure time and map space, mark genre and make nations, depict reality and experiment with visual expression. By the end of our journey, we will be able to think analytically, historically, and comparatively about a medium that continues to connect distant cultures and peoples. Assignments include three short papers, a midterm exam, and a final exam. This course satisfies both the Visual & Performing Arts (VP) and the Global Issues (GL) general education requirements. It is also a core component of the Film Studies major within English and Comparative Literature, as well as the Global Cinema Minor. (Johnson S19)

CMPL 251 familiarizes students with the theory and practice of comparative literature as it introduces students to the broader practices and methods of literary theory. Against a background of classical poetics and rhetoric, CMPL 251 explores various modern literary theories, including Russian formalism, the Frankfurt School, feminism, psychoanalysis, the Black Arts Movement, deconstruction, new historicism, the critical philosophy of race, and others. This course takes an historical approach to literary theory, with a focus on the questions that define the field of aesthetics: What is a work of art? What social functions does it play? What are the sources of an artwork and how does it influence its audiences? We will read works by Plato, Aristotle, Kant, Marx, Freud, Du Bois, Foucault, Derrida, Judith Butler, Gloria Anzaldúa, and Toni Morrison, among others, as well as selected literary texts against which to measure the theorists. Students will write multiple response papers demonstrating their grasp of the subject matter, and two 5-page essays. A final exam is required.

This course considers three film genres in particular: horror, thriller, and dark comedy. While genres tend to be defined on the basis of their recurring stylistic and narrative conventions, we will consider our three genres mainly in terms of their emotional, psychological, visceral, and ideological impact on the audience. How exactly do suspense and surprise operate? How is it that we enjoy frightening and eerie situations? How do horror and thriller genres make use of multisensory atmospheres? Why do we sometimes laugh at onscreen events that are deeply unsettling? And how do these genres provoke discussion around matters of gender, sexuality, and race? These are just a few of the basic questions we will consider along the way. Films likely to be screened: Signs (Shyamalan), Dracula (Browning), The Birds (Hitchcock), Suspiria (Argento), Let the Right One In (Alfredson), Zodiac (Fincher), Cure (Kiyoshi Kurosawa), Personal Shopper (Assayas), Videodrome (Cronenberg), Get Out (Peele), Don't Look Now (Roeg), The Shining (Kubrick), and Hereditary (Aster). NOTE: some of the films we will examine necessarily feature disturbing scenes. This content is vital to the artworks and the course as a whole; please enroll only if you plan to engage such representations in a serious, critical manner. This course satisfies the Visual & Performing Arts (VP) general education requirement. It also counts

This course deals with cross-cultural definitions of heroism, authority, individualism, and rebellion as portrayed in film, particularly with an eye to how stories have been translated across cultures. The primary texts will be a selection of classic films, many of which were directed by John Ford or Akira Kurosawa. Readings will include selections from works by Thomas Hobbes, John Locke, Jean-Jacques Rousseau; Japanese source texts such as The 47 Ronin (Chushingura); and works on the Samurai Code, as well as select short stories. We will study the films in pairings of Japanese samurai films with complementary American (or Italian) Westerns, such as Kurosawa’s The Seven Samurai with Sturges’ The Magnificent Seven; Kurosawa’s Yojimbo with Leone’s A Fistful of Dollars; and Kobayashi’s Harakiri with Ford’s My Darling Clementine. Other films will include: John Ford’s Stagecoach, Kurosawa’s Throne of Blood, and John Ford’s The Searchers. The juxtaposition of these two genres will display important aspects of national identity and issues of violent transitions from peace to war, and the less

Designed as an introduction to genre of epic poetry, this course surveys readings (all in modern English translations) that represent the very foundations of Western literature, thought, and spirituality: the Homeric Greek epic known as the Iliad, Virgil's Latin epic, the Aeneid, selections from the Bible, the Sumerian Epic of Gilgamesh, the Old English epic known as Beowulf, and selections from several other works that reference the epic tradition. Our course is cross-listed and, as a course in Comparative Literature, we focus on defining the epic genre and understanding the formal qualities of epic poetry; as a course in the Peace, War, and Defense Curriculum, we focus on the historical influences exerted by ancient epics in matters of war and peace, the rise and fall of empires, imperial ambition, and related issues of defense and diplomacy. The course is co-taught with the former British Ambassador to the U.S., Sir Christopher Meyer, who will Skype in from London and join us for a visit during the semester.

This seminar allows comparative literature majors to work on an independent project that synthesizes their curricular experience, and it introduces them to current, broadly applicable issues in comparative literature. Our weekly discussions in this seminar will revolve around the relationship between film, literature, and other artistic media. In consultation with the professor, students will devise a semester-long independent research project, culminating with a revised 15-page paper at the semester's end. Students will also share their research with classmates in the form of two scholarly presentations.

"Open to both undergraduate and graduate students.

Montaigne's Essais and Shakespeare's plays both reflect strong interest in the political upheavals of the sixteenth century. These authors frequently engage with the proliferation of the political writings of their era that treat sovereignty, state legitimacy, the role and rights of the citizen, the ideal society, and other questions. We will read major political thinkers of the sixteenth century; Erasmus, Machiavelli, Thomas More, Justus Lipsius, Etienne de La Boétie, among others; and consider how Montaigne and Shakespeare responded to them. Our objective will be to consider the extension and nuancing of political thought in these two major literary authors, as well as how their treatment affects our understanding of European Renaissance politics.

Taught in English. All readings will be available in English; those by French authors will be available in French. French credit is available for majors and minors who do the reading and writing in French. (Melehy S19)

This course is designed to introduce students to some of the major strains in literary criticism from the Classical Period to the 18th century. Readings of major authors will be paired not only with literary examples contemporary with our chosen critics, but also with modern day theoretical responses to their works. Our objective is a working knowledge of dominant trends in European literary criticism up to (and including) the Enlightenment, useful in understanding the literature of the successive historical periods and also as a continuing, vital influence on twentieth-century poetics. We will also be devoting some time to the primary non-Classical tradition of early Western literary criticism, namely Biblical interpretation. Authors read include Gorgias, Plato, Aristotle, Aristophanes, Horace, Longinus, Philo, Proclus, Plotinus, Augustine, Scaliger, Luther, Boileau, Sidney, Burke, Young, and Lessing; Homer, Pindar, Callimachus, Ovid, Vergil, Dante, and Pope; and Auerbach, Derrida, Genette, Ricouer, Benjamin, and Bernal. DESCRIPTION:
The Cities of Modernism is a cross-cultural, inter-medial, and meta-critical exploration of the human condition in imagery of the "Great City" in modernist works of literature, art, and film. Numerous novels and poems of the early twentieth century, and even some appearing during the last decades of the nineteenth century, reflect the ways in which turn-of-the-century cities generated states of shock, exhilaration, alienation, anonymity, confusion, or thrill. Our work this semester will lead us to discover not only the origins of such sentiments as they are expressed through various works of art, but also the origins of and theories behind twentieth-century Western modernism itself.

GEN EDS: TBD

DESCRIPTION: From 1935-1939, America had a national theater. Born of the Great Depression, the Federal Theatre Project (FTP) was a Works Projects Administration (WPA) program to put unemployed people back to work. With almost one-third of the nation unemployed, the FTP provided jobs to the out of work and cheap or free entertainment to a people struggling with the hardships of the economic depression.

TITLE: Scottish Gaelic Folksong and Vernacular Verse in the North American Diaspora

GEN EDS: US, CI

DESCRIPTION: In this seminar, we will delve into the treasure trove of Scottish Gaelic song tradition and vernacular verse transmitted and composed in the North American Diaspora, from the earliest surviving examples of verse made in Revolutionary eighteenth-century North Carolina to the living Scottish Gaelic song tradition in Cape Breton Island, Canada. Scottish Gaelic texts will be engaged in English translation and students will be encouraged to participate fully.

Mark-up, coding, metadata, data visualization—these technological words may seem completely unrelated to fields of study such as Literature, Philosophy, History, and Art, but they actually play a key role in shaping culture, society, and human thought today. These issues at the heart of the Humanities. As a result, a new interdisciplinary area of study, known as Digital Humanities (DH), has emerged to explore the role of technology in society and use new digital methods to analyze traditional materials in the Humanities, such as texts, objects, and archives. In English 105i: Writing in the Digital Humanities, we will explore this new area of study by participating in a joint DUKE-UNC DH project in which you will learn key methods in DH and the types of composition and writing that result from it. Students may not receive credit for both ENGL 105 and ENGL 102, 102I, or 105I. (S19)
Humanities, we will learn key methods in DH and the types of composition and writing that result from it. Students will create their own digital exhibit and multimedia projects to engage with a wide range of issues in DH. Students may not receive credit for both ENGL 105 and ENGL 102, 102I, or 105I.

Class Equivalents: ENGL 120/120H

Fulfills a major core requirement. An introductory survey to British literature, from the earliest survivals of Anglo-Saxon poetry (Beowulf) to John Milton's epic, Paradise Lost. In this course, we'll engage with traditions of epic, lyric, romance, and theology; watch the birth of modern English in slow motion; read classic poems by Chaucer, Donne, and Spenser; and, finally, learn to enjoy literature in a more profound way. The course will move roughly chronologically, with an emphasis both on the history and politics of premodern Britain and on the currents of literary influence that shaped the English poetic tradition.

English 123 offers the opportunity to explore the art of storytelling through short stories and novels by Chekhov, Joyce, Woolf, Baldwin, Ellison, Carver, Morrison, Lahiri, and others and to watch and read critically a season of the popular TV series, Mad Men. One of the goals in this class is to help you understand and articulate more precisely why you can be so moved, gratified, challenged, or frustrated by a piece of fiction. We will investigate ways of telling stories by looking at narrative voice, symbols, characterization, and setting, among other things. Class will be discussion-based. (Gualtieri-Reed S19)

In English 123, we will examine the short story and the novella from the perspective of the writer and the critic. We will study various ways of interpreting fiction, looking historical movements in literature, while also analyzing how writers construct stories. In a sense, we will look at how fiction is both crafted and understood. Most of the works will be fairly modern with short stories by writers like Antonya Nelson, George Saunders, and Sandra Cisneros, but we will also dip our toe into some of the classic tales from the early 20th century.

On September 14, 2018, the online news site Vulture.com compiled a list of the best twenty-first century novels so far written. The idea was to create a contemporary "canon" Á-list of semi-sacred texts Á produced by novelists still writing today. But the field of contemporary literature is by definition always changing. How do we determine the greats of a field that is still unfolding? Moreover, "contemporary" is a relative term: how long do works get to be called Á "contemporary?" The editors at Vulture explain that, under the circumstances, defining a canon of contemporary novels can only amount to á "blurry selfie of a cultural moment." In this course, we will sharpen the focus on that selfie, surveying contemporary novels but rooting them in historical precedents (novels written in the postwar moment comprised the first, "contemporary," literature) and aligning them with key literary themes relevant to the contemporary. The course will focus in particular on fiction and its relation to media; from the emergence of computers and the birth of rock and roll in the 1950s, to the domination of digital forms and the end of rock in the present. But other literary themes will emerge as well, including disorientation, climate change, impersonality, and globalization. Authors surveyed will include Patricia Highsmith, Thomas Pynchon, Flannery O'Connor, William Faulkner, James Baldwin, Jonathan Franzen Jonathan Lethem, Dana Spiotta, Lorrie Moore, and Weike Wang. This class is designed to give students an introduction to the joys of reading fiction (mostly novels) written by some of the most innovative, creative, and thrilling voices in contemporary American literature. All of the works engage with themes of movement, migration, and memory. In this class we will investigate all the ways in which these narratives illustrate the many wondrous interconnections among these three terms and the means by which characters in the fiction challenge and are challenged by movement, migration, and memory, and hopefully these stories will, in turn, propel you to consider the way that movement, migration, and memory has shaped your own lives.

Books we will read include:
*The History of Love (2005) -- Nicole Krauss
*Run (2007) -- Ann Patchett

This course will engage short(er) works by major American authors in order to explore the relationship between narrative and moral values, and consider the question: ¿What does it mean to do the right thing?¿ We will consider the ways fiction, poetry, and film from the 19th and 20th centuries can foster empathy for others and inform our approach to ethics and lives as global citizens. We will focus particular attention on the intersections of race, class, religion, and politics. Active participation in discussion and weekly short responses will be required, in addition to a research paper and final exam.

This course will engage lesser known works by American women authors in order to explore the concept of recording knowledge - cultural, political, historical, or otherwise. We will consider the question: Who traditionally gets to record knowledge? Our discussions will include genres such as poetry, letters, political speeches, serialized fiction, ethnography, short stories, and the contemporary novel. In this course, we will also explore what women authors have to say about contentious issues in American history that involve race, gender, class, politics, and cultural proliferation, among others. We will read works from Lucy Terry, Phillis Wheatley, Abigail Adams, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Zora Neale Hurston, Alice Walker, Flannery O'Connor, Grace Paley, Amy Tan, Esmeralda Santiago, and Yaa Gyasi. Along with active participation, students will be required to write one short essay, a mid-term research paper, and a final exam.

Central questions that will guide our inquiry this semester include:

What makes a text "major"?

This course is largely a study of perceptions and perspectives. It will examine first the well-documented European views of Native Americans presented in historical accounts and on artists' canvases, views which tell us as much about Europeans as they do about Natives. Then it will sample the explosion of perspectives presented by Native American novelists, poets, short story writers, and film makers whose voices, having been ignored for centuries, eloquently provide alternative views of themselves and of America. Because art is not produced in a vacuum, the course will also explore political, social, and cultural issues which have influenced each group's perception of the other.

¿How Does it Feel to be a Problem¿?

This discussion-based class brings together a series of social texts -- literary, filmic, critical, historical, journalistic -- that respond to, comment upon, and struggle with key events in the history of ¿America.¿ The exploration of race, ethnicity, class, gender, sexuality, and nationality and how they are structured by institutions and social relations and informed by cultural beliefs will enable us to understand how we participate in and interact with these structures, how we are defined by them, how we create them, and how we can critique and change them. Graded work: 3 papers, two exams, and group oral presentations. Texts include: I, Tituba, Black Witch of Salem by Maryse Conde; Octavia Butler's Kindred; The Bluest Eye by Toni Morrison; Arab in America by Toufic El-Rassi; Memoir of a Race Traitor by Mab Segrest; articles by June Jordan, James Baldwin, and Allan Johnson; films such as The Muslims are Coming; Harvest of Empire: A History of Latinos in America, Little White Lie; and poems and music by Suheir Hammad, Rebel Diaz, and Cassandra Wilson, among others.

This course is largely a study of perceptions and perspectives. It will examine first the well-documented European views of Native Americans presented in historical accounts and on artists' canvases, views which tell us as much about Europeans as they do about Natives. Then it will sample the explosion of perspectives presented by Native American novelists, poets, short story writers, and film makers whose voices, having been ignored for centuries, eloquently provide alternative views of themselves and of America. Because art is not produced in a vacuum, the course will also explore political, social, and cultural issues which have influenced each group's perception of the other. (O'Shaughnesssey S19)

ENGL 132H.001 | Honors: Intro to Fiction Writing

MW, 3:35 pm - 4:50 pm. Instructor(s): Daniel Wallace. Enrollment = 15.

Writing intensive. Early short assignments emphasize elements of dramatic scene with subsequent written practice in point-of-view, dialogue, characterization, and refinement of style. Assigned short stories from textbook with in-depth analysis of technique, craft, and literary merit. Students will write and revise two full stories which will be duplicated for all class members and criticized by instructor and class. The short stories will be approximately 10-15 pages long. Revision in lieu of final exam. The course is informal but stringent; students may be asked to write each class meeting. Vigorous class participation in workshop is expected. Required texts: This course (or ENGL 130) serves as a prerequisite for other courses in the fiction sequence of the creative writing program (ENGL 206, 406, 693H). Textbook: Seagull Reader, W. W. Norton.

There is not one easy, digestible, back-of-the-jacket way to describe Creative Nonfiction. The term is at once incredibly accurate and very vague, which is perhaps befitting for the only genre of writing that has a negation in its title. We will read and produce work that is inventive, imaginative and artistic in its use of language, structure, and form. I.e. Creative. And we will also read and produce work that stays factually, if not spiritually, true to our actual experience and processing of the world. I.e. Nonfiction. Finally, we'll be discussing the limitations and possibilities of the genre throughout the semester and what forms it might take: essay; personal essay; memoir; literary journalism; portraiture; science and nature writing; travel writing; cultural criticism; ekphrasis; and the lyric essay.

This course examines the ways in which culture and history shape and are shaped by motion pictures. In this course, we will focus specifically on films that highlight race and racial issues. The course emphasizes discussion and a broad range of screenings, as opposed to canonical film studies topics and movies.
and uses comparative methods that group related films as well as films and texts. The purpose of this strategy is for students to broaden their perspectives on film by appreciating connections between the past and the present, between established ideas and reinterpretations of those ideas, between texts and their screen adaptations, and between films and filmmakers all the while interrogating the role that race plays in both American film and related global cinema. By playing the familiar against the unfamiliar, this course encourages students to reexamine what is ¿normal¿ as well to question how the movie screen both influences and reflects audiences' views about race. Our course attempts to trace the principal expressions: artistic, political, psychological, religious, technological, of modern culture. We will ask the most basic questions: What is the nature of modern culture? What are its challenges? What future awaits? In the attempt to answer these questions, we will hone the skills of visual and philosophical analysis and deepen our sense of film's evolution, variety, and sophistication. Drawing on films from China, Denmark, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Russia, Sweden, the United Kingdom, and the U.S., the course will consider differences in national, generational, and personal perspective.

Contemporary literature rarely qualifies as popular, and genre fiction scarcely makes it onto syllabi, but it would be wrong to treat the two as opposites. What is the difference between popular genres and contemporary fiction? And how do these terms—popular, genre, contemporary, fiction—drive the
This course explores such questions through two inextricably related genres that influence many twentieth-century literary forms: the haunted house narrative and the detective story. We will trace the development of their Romantic foundations in Poe and James, follow them into mid-century popular expressions, explore their remediation in films like The Shining and Get Out, and finally determine how concepts of race and indigeneity centrally motivate these genres from their inception through twenty-first century expressions by black and Native American authors. Authors include Patricia Highsmith, Shirley Jackson, Percival Everett, Thomas Pynchon, Stephen Graham Jones, and more. (DiLeonardi S19)

This course begins with a simple question: What makes African American literature and music ¿black¿? We will attempt to answer this question throughout the semester by exploring what different black genres—an autobiographical narrative, a novel, or a song—can tell us about the past, present, and future of ¿race¿ in our society. We will broadly explore black literary and musical genres through the historical frames of three major institutions of U.S. history: the antebellum institution of slavery, the postbellum institution of lynching, and the modern institution of mass incarceration. By the end of the course, we will come to see how asking that opening question is to ask ourselves: What does ¿blackness¿ mean or represent today in the 21st century? In addition to considering the literary/musical representation of blackness, and its implications for us today, we will also explore the generic relationship between black literature and music. We will consider how black literary genres of autobiography and fiction and black musical genres of slave spirituals, blues, and rap music have paralleled and intersected throughout their historical developments. We will explore, then, how certain black literary or musical genres not only artistically influence each other but also literally convey and musically sound distinct meanings of ¿race¿ (along with its intersections with ¿class¿ and ¿gender¿). By the end of the course, we will have explored how a study of black literary and musical genre is not only an

From historical representations of dehumanization in Octavia Butler’s time-travel novel Kindred to an exploration of the humanity in Kazuo Ishiguro’s Never Let Me Go to comparisons between zombies and humans in Colson Whitehead’s Zone One, the science/speculative fiction novels and films in this course will examine the ways we conceive of and narrate what is human and what is not. Additionally, students will gain a deeper understanding of the real-life processes and repercussions of dehumanization. This course will consider the genres of science and speculative fiction and explore theories in the fields of post humanism, critical race theory, animal studies, and dehumanization.

Potential texts include: Mary Shelley’s Frankenstein (1818), Octavia Butler’s Kindred (1979), Gregory Maguire’s Wicked (1995), Margaret Atwood’s Oryx and Crake (2003), Kazuo Ishiguro’s Never Let Me Go (2005), and Colson Whitehead’s Zone One (2011).

Mystery Fiction (ENGL 147) surveys the prose genre of modern mystery fiction. The course introduces students to significant literary works, movements, publishing trends, and debates that stimulated the development and popularity of 19th century mystery fiction and have carried the genre through its postmodern/contemporary iterations. Readings include works by Edgar Allan Poe, Arthur Conan Doyle, Agatha Christie, Raymond Chandler, Dashiell Hammett, Thomas Pynchon, Paul Auster, Walter Mosley and Michael Chabon. Students will gain proficiency in the analysis and discussion of literary works, analysis of rare books, and related critical materials. The course also offers to students an opportunity to engage topics that have recently appeared at the interface between traditional print and emergent digital media cultures. Topic areas related to the latter include the history of mystery-specific periodicals and mass-market publishing, how the visual aesthetics of the digital book have re-shaped genre fiction, how literary works circulate in a digital marketplace, and how new media afford new opportunities for digital literary scholarship (digital curation, digital research methods and digital archives).

Terror and Horror are so far opposite that the first expands the soul, and awakens the faculties to a high degree of life; the other contracts, freezes and nearly annihilates them. Based on Ann Radcliffe's definition of the genre, this course will explore how the visceral interplay between terror and horror lies at the heart of a genre that confronts its readers with the darker side of human nature. We will explore horror fiction from its origins in the Gothic novel to the contemporary work of Stephen King alongside film examples that range from Alfred Hitchcock's Rebecca to Stanley Kubrick's The Shining. Readings will include Frankenstein, Dracula, The Haunting of Hill House and shorter works by Edgar Allan Poe, HP Lovecraft, Richard Matheson, and Mark Z. Danielewski. To enrich our discussion of the literature, we will also watch classic horror films such as Halloween, Alien, The Exorcist, Night of the Living Dead and A Nightmare on Elm Street. (Guillermo S19)
Northrop Frye. We will also view some classic comic movies and consider how theories of comedy help us to understand situation comedies like Thirty Rock and Parks and Recreation. Short writing assignments throughout the semester along with a final research paper of approximately 5000 words. (McGowan S19)

Folklorists seek to understand how people interpret and make sense of the world. In this course we will look at diverse forms (or "genres") of folklore, including song, architecture, legend, and food. We will consider how vernacular expressive culture is learned, what it does for people, and why these processes and products persist through time and space. Students will be introduced to the discipline of Folklore's central research methodology, ethnography, and have an opportunity to practice that approach in individual and group research projects.

Students enrolling in 202-001 are also required to enroll in one recitation section numbered 202-601 through 202-604.

This course is cross-listed with FOLK 202-001 and ANTH 202-001.

Got wanderlust? In this class, you'll learn how to quench it with your pen. We'll survey travel literature throughout the ages from Marco Polo's outlandish adventures to Robyn Davidson's 1,700 mile trek across the Australian Outback with four camels and a dog named Diggety with essays by Langston Hughes, Bruce Chatwin, Ma Jian, Rosemary Mahoney, and Pico Iyer in between. Then we'll venture out into the Piedmont and embark on our own solo journeys, capturing the people and places we encounter in visceral detail. So lace up your boots: in this class, we'll be roaming. Course Title: Renaissance Drama
Class Equivalents: ENGL 226/226H

Requirements:
- Although we often measure Renaissance time and achievements in terms of Shakespeare (e.g. Drama in the Age of Shakespeare), the theater of England between the end of the sixteenth century and the closing of the theaters in 1642 was rich and diverse. The dramatists of the time did not tremble in the shadow of Shakespeare. Indeed, they often mocked or simply ignored him as they found their own ways to explore the pressing cultural concerns of their age: social, political, economic, and religious while entertaining their audiences. We will explore the work of Marlowe, Kyd, Middleton, Heywood, Jonson, Webster, Ford and others, as both cultural documents of their time and as living and vibrant theater still pertinent to our contemporary debates. (Kendall S19)
John Milton was a religious dissident, a political theorist, and a poet. He wrote at a time in English history when concepts of government and authority were in the process of active and militant critique, when religious, domestic and civil spheres were being reimagined and reformulated. We will study Milton’s writings within this highly charged political environment, as political theory, as religious dissension, as social history, and as poetry. Students will be asked to consider Milton’s poetry and prose accounts culturally, in terms of the material circumstances of their writing. Teaching methods: Class time will be spent in lecture and group discussion of pertinent texts.

Requirements: Weekly writing assignments; two papers (8-10 pages); final exam.

This course will examine fiction written between the 1950s and 2000, along with films and music from the same era, to explore how media altered fiction in the second half of the twentieth century. In the early 1960s the former literature scholar Marshall McLuhan argued that highways and information technology were shrinking space by decreasing the amount of time it takes to connect humans between points on the globe. At the same time, McLuhan and other critics of the era shifted their focus from literature to media, suggesting that the telegraph, the phonograph, and the typewriter mattered just as much as poems, novels, or plays. This course examines how this change registered in short fiction by Flannery O'Connor, James Baldwin, Thomas Pynchon, and Lorrie Moore, among others. Along with the fiction, we will watch Alfred Hitchcock's Vertigo, Billy Wilder's The Apartment, and study the historical emergence of key rock songs like Jackie Brenston - Rocket 88, Elvis Presley - That's Alright, and Ray Charles - What'd I Say. Why, after writing Citizen, has Claudia Rankine gone on to write an opera? Why are so many of our most popular and experimental poets choosing to work in the musical genre? In this class we will think about the ways poetry and song work together. We will read libretti written by poets. We will watch movie musicals, and operas. We will listen to the songs we love and think about where they intersect with poems. And we will make our own musical book! This is a collaborative class that will work with Professor Bland Simpson's songwriting class (ENGL 490, Musical Writing, Part II; our classrooms are right next to each other!) and to make and perform a musical collaboration at the end of the term. You do not need to be a musician or have any musical background. Though, if you are a musician you can bring your instrument to class. This is a laboratory and the first class of its kind at Carolina. A rigorous, joyful, maker's space. All genres welcome as long as you've completed Introduction to ________ (you name it). Let's spend the spring in poetry and song and deep experiment. This class will fulfill the Intermediate requirement for poetry if you are looking to work towards Advanced and Thesis.

Ever wonder why certain posts come in your Facebook feed or how songs get classified in your i-tunes? These seemingly every day technological occurrences have a profound effect on how we understand the world. In this class, we will explore exactly how data is constructed and used to shape technology, such as social media sites, archives, and visualizations. In order to analyze these topics, we will work with different technologies to actually create and visualize data for ourselves. However, no previous technological experience is necessary. In constructing our own data, we will learn how the process requires significant interpretation, consideration of the audience and users, together with attention to arrangement and outcome, making it a highly rhetorical act.

Chaucer's Canterbury Tales is an extraordinarily wide-ranging poem; with the turn of a page, the reader finds herself on a medieval pilgrimage, in the aftermath of an ancient Mediterranean war, in the court of Genghis Khan, or in a barnyard squabble between a rooster and a fox. One moment a serial-monogamous seamstress is professing her theories about marriage, and the next a monk is puzzling over how to divide a fart. We will read each of Chaucer's tales in the original Middle English and find out how all of these different ideas and characters live together in one poem. (Cushman S19)

This course will investigate one of the most important decades in the history of American cinema, when formal experimentation went hand in hand with an intensity of political consciousness not equaled before or since. We will explore how films of this period reflect and respond to the social unrest surrounding the Watergate scandal; political assassinations; the diverted revolutionary hopes of the 1960s; and the war in Vietnam. We will consider the ways in which these films critique and reshape traditional genres, from the Western and war film to the musical and noir detective film. We will look at the rise of the new blockbuster as it drastically changed Hollywood's production environment. Alternatives to Hollywood, from independent films to Blaxploitation will be addressed. We will consider the legacy of this decade of American cinema and its relevance to our current cultural moment. And we will study the extraordinary innovations of several major filmmakers including Scorsese, Spielberg, Coppola, Malick, Altman, Nichols, and Cassavetes among others. Films likely to be screened include: The Graduate, Days of Heaven, All the President's Men, Chinatown, Killer of Sheep, Sweet Sweetback's Baadasssss Song, Easy Rider, The Long Goodbye, Taxi Driver, Network, Woman Under the Influence, Carrie, A New Leaf, Close Encounters of the Third Kind, Heaven's Gate, Apocalypse Now, The Godfather, The Conversation, and Alien. This course satisfies the Visual & Performing Arts (VP) general education requirement. It also

In English 340 we’ll study three novels by her creator, Jane Austen, in order to discern what the novelist enjoyed reading and which habits, in her view, enhance a reader’s enjoyment. In particular we will attend to her reading of authors now designated “Romantic.” Their literary movement articulated “the Spirit of the Age,” a new perspective on the natural environment, on the emotions’ importance in human flourishing, and on social reforms for women, the working class, and enslaved persons. The twenty students in this writing-intensive course will devote considerable class time to expository skills, such as: lessening the agony of producing a first draft, engaging the reader’s attention, setting forth ideas in a reader-friendly sequence, line-editing, and revising in light of peer review and instructor feedback. It will appeal to undergraduates—ECL majors or not—who want to cultivate superior communications skills. Devoted Janeites and newcomers to Austen are equally welcome.

Texts: Jane Austen: Sense & Sensibility (1811), Emma (1815), Persuasion (1817); The Norton Anthology of English Literature, 9th ed. (Romantic Period)

Selected topics or authors in American literature in the twentieth century. In this case “topics” are the large twentieth century literary and theoretical movements called modernism and postmodernism. The course examines an interesting variety of canonical American writers representing modernism and postmodernism from the post-World War II period to the end of the twentieth century. Among the writers are modernist writers William Faulkner, Marianne Moore, T. S. Eliot, William Carlos Williams, and Robert Frost, and among the postmodernists are Thomas Pynchon, John Edgar Wideman, Toni Morrison, and Maxine Hong Kingston.

ENGL 348H.001 | American Poetry
TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Eliza Richards. Enrollment = 20.

Focusing on the 19th and 20th centuries, this course will concentrate on books of American poetry that have strongly influenced the literary landscape. We will explore poets’ engagements with historical events and cultural conditions (wars, struggles for social and political justice, modernization, etc.), as well as their interest in artistic invention and expression. The course seeks to broaden understanding of poetry’s historical and cultural role; to develop close reading skills that are crucial for interpreting and appreciating poetry; and to strengthen critical writing and thinking skills. No previous knowledge of poetry is required for the course!

Dr. Eliza Richards is Associate Professor of English with a focus in American literature to 1900 and comparative literature.

Course studies contemporary British and American fiction through representative works. Intellectual and aesthetic, historical and cultural emphases. May include works from the Anglophone diaspora.

This course will explore the legacy of the Japanese American incarceration during World War II as a major landmark of civil rights history through literature and other writings. We will study its legal history, from the Supreme Court landmark cases and the 1980s appeals and movement for redress and reparations, putting them in conversation with other major civil rights issues and debates, such as the current detention in Guantanamo Bay and the infamous Tuskegee medical experiments. At the same time, we will uncover the human side of the story through memoirs, letters, artwork, and fictional retellings. If possible, we will engage in a virtual reality project which reconstructs the camp experience and narratives. (Kim S19)

Special emphasis will be given to the Scottish Gaelic language and its wealth of cultural expression as found in both Scotland’s Highlands and Hebrides and its Diaspora, from North Carolina’s Cape Fear and Sandhills to Canada’s Maritime Provinces (Falzett S19)

This course focuses on the life and works of one of the most striking personalities of the nineteenth century: Oscar Wilde. In addition to reading numerous works by Wilde (including short fiction, poetry, drama, fairy tales, and critical essays), we will consider the cultural landscape of the 1890s in a far more comprehensive sense. To that end, we will study a wide range of visual media, material culture, scientific debates, budding psychological discourses,
This course is a study of the work of Virginia Woolf (1882-1941). We will read four of Woolf's novels: Jacob's Room (1922), Mrs. Dalloway (1925), To the Lighthouse (1927), and Between the Acts (1941). We will also read some of Woolf's major essays ("Modern Fiction," "Mr. Bennett and Mrs. Brown," "A Sketch of the Past," A Room of One's Own) and short stories ("Kew Gardens," "The Mark on the Wall"). Extracts from her diaries and letters will be included, and we will watch a few film and theatrical adaptations of her works. Texts: the four novels; A Room of One's Own, The Virginia Woolf Reader.

Victorian Afterlives

In this course we'll explore the questions of why and how modern novelists write back to Victorian fiction by reading Charlotte Bronte's JANE EYRE and Charles Dickens's GREAT EXPECTATIONS alongside modern sequels, prequels, and spin-offs. We'll conclude the semester by considering two neo-Victorian novels by A.S. Byatt and Margaret Atwood, POSSESSION and ALIAS GRACE. We'll also consider recent film adaptations of the novels. How does returning to the nineteenth-century texts help 20th and 21st-century novelists address our own cultural preoccupations?
Narrating the everyday and the extraordinary are universal forms of expression. This course will explore the many ways in which oral narrative is communicated from migratory legends to song-making to a conversation at the kitchen table. Specific focus will be given to the ways in which individual and shared experience have been and continue to be communicated through various forms of Scottish Gaelic verbal art as found in both Scotland’s Highlands and Hebrides as well as within the Scottish Gaelic Diaspora from North Carolina to Atlantic Canada. These narratives include everyday conversations on how to give a fiddle tune the right "flavor" (blas) for dancing to immigrant memorates of treacherous Atlantic crossings to songs composed from the perspective of hungry sheep-thieving bears. They also entail extraordinary yet frequently expressed supernatural encounters with ambivalent fairies, shape-shifting witches and seal-wife ancestors as well as the foretelling of future events through the "gift" of second-sight (an d¿¿ shealladh) and comet-tailed ghost-lights. Taken together, these narratives reveal the many ways each of us makes sense of our experience in the world by artfully and effectually communicating it to others. (Falzett S19)

He has stripped his dead wife naked," protested a reviewer of William Godwin's biography of feminist pioneer Mary Wollstonecraft, which candidly detailed her heterodox religion and unconventional sexual history. Then as now, religion, politics, and sex are often thought too volatile for polite discussion. In Britain, the Romantic literary movement (1780-1840) responded to the advent of modernity in first-wave feminism, the Industrial Revolution, and the French Revolution. A female author's opinions on religion, politics, and/or sex tagged her as an advocate or an opponent of Modernity. In English 340 we will reflect on key texts by Romantic-period women concerning religion, politics, and sex, in order to chart their self-fashioning in relation to Modernity; we'll pay particular attention to the importance of travel literature and of the sea (as shown in these images) for representing and mastering the perils women face. (Moskal S19)

This course explores novels and short stories by Latinx writers that focus in one way or another on photographs & photography and, in doing so, that simultaneously question (or "queer") certain cultural givens about gender, sexuality, race/ethnicity/nationality, class, and other coordinates of identity and subjectivity. We will investigate the connections between this double focus. At the same time, we will examine actual photo-based visual work by Latina/o artists. Textual and visual works considered include those by Alma López, Laura Aguilar, John Rechy, Achy Obejas, Helena Maria Viramontes, Emma Outline of Requirements. All these assignments will be graded:
* Completed readings done on time, attendance, and active participation in class (10%)
* 7 page double-spaced standard expository essay (30%)
* 10 page double-spaced final project, standard expository or creative (40%)

Philosophy of the Image: Media, Ecology, and Technology

This course focuses on Gilles Deleuze two cinema books, The Movement-Image and The Time-Image, inasmuch as they form the basis for an evolution/ecology of images and anticipate our technological/digital transformation. Thus, we'll use Deleuze's philosophy to grapple with biological and morphogenetic questions (or what we'll call "prehumanism") and contemporary socio-technical questions ("posthumanism"). Intended for graduate students and advanced undergraduates, the class will be largely lecture-oriented, and I've arranged for Anne Sauvagnargues (Professor of Philosophy at Paris X, Nanterre) to come to UNC and co-teach the class for several weeks at the end of the semester. Apart from Deleuze, other readings for the class will likely include:
- Bergson, Matter and Memory (and other selected texts)
- Beniger, The Control Revolution
- Debaise, Nature and Event

In this course, we will read a range early modern medical texts, including plague tracts, anatomical treatises, regimens, herbals, and midwifery manuals, to consider how this material may inform our understanding of the period's beliefs about bodies, sex, gender, emotions, temperament, disease, mortality, and sin. We will also examine how this medical discourse instructs our interpretation of more familiar literary genres of the period, including drama, poetry, and prose. We will ask a range of questions, such as: What social narratives can we discern in medical writing? Why were writers obsessed with melancholy? How did people explain the plague? What were the common methods of curing? What were the cultural assumptions about professional and lay medical practitioners? How did religion shape medicine and sickness? When and how did physic intersect with magic? Literary texts may include works by William Shakespeare, John Webster, John Donne, Ben Jonson, Thomas Dekker, Edmund Spenser, and more. This course will survey archival theory and practice, not limited by period or national literature. In addition to readings from a variety of disciplines on definitions and construction of the archive, we will engage in archival research in UNC's holdings and learn about the major archival centers (digital and physical) available for scholarly work.

Students will survey the ways in which African Americans have used a variety of communicative practices and discourses to construct and represent themselves, advance social justice platforms, and as a means of survival. Readings will cover a range of rhetorical practices, themes, and time periods.

This course will offer doctoral students a broad, multi-genre survey of Elizabethan literature (epic, lyric, prose fiction, dialogue, educational literature, controversial writings, plays, masques and entertainments), focusing on works responding to topical political events including but not limited to the Anjou ('French') match, the trial and execution of Mary, Queen of Scots, the invasion of the Spanish Armada, the Saint Bartholomew's Day Massacre and the French religious wars, the Dutch wars of Independence and the death of Philip Sidney, and the trial and execution of the Earl of Essex. Although our focus will be on three canonical writers -- Sidney, Spenser, and Marlowe -- we will also read works by Foxe, Ascham and Mulcaster, Churchyard, Gascoigne, Lyly, Nashe, Greville, Deloney, Bacon, and Chapman. Students should secure on their own an unabridged copy of Spenser's Faerie Queene (we will be reading selections from Books 3, 4, and 5); remaining assigned texts will be ordered through UNC student stores. This is a Jane Austen course which will focus first on her 6 novels, juvenilia and short works, and second on her reception from 1817 to the present, the stages by which Austen's writings became identified with nostalgic pleasure for a lost agrarian green world, to the Britishness defended in WWI to an Alt-Right fantasy of hierarchy and deference. So too, we will look at the translation of Austen into, on the one hand, prequels and sequels, and, on the other, stage and screen. Over the course of two centuries she moves from what we would call a mid-list author, to a figure who can be monetized in every way imaginable from tea-towels to web series. Along the way, she is transformed from the elite pleasure of the few to a mass-market matinee ideal. (Thompson S19)

PREREQUISITES:
First-year students only.

DESCRIPTION:
The basic question examined in this seminar will be the costs and benefits of the U.S policy of drug prohibition. Does drug prohibition decrease drug abuse? Affect violence in our society? Aid terrorism? Diminish our civil liberties? Affect the public's health? Corrupt public officials? Should drugs be decriminalized or legalized and if so, how? Should different illicit drugs be treated differently? What is the evidence in the United States and in other countries on decriminalization or legalization? Students will write a paper and present it in class, and prepare an interview with individuals who are on the frontline of the drug war, such as police or attorneys. As a seminar, classroom activity will consist of discussions and debates.

ECON 057H.001 | Higher Calling--Applying Entrepreneurial Thinking to the Challenges of Higher Education
TR, 12:30 pm - 1:45 pm. Instructor(s): Buck Goldstein. Enrollment = 20.

This seminar will explore urgent questions about selective college admissions. We will examine the fairness and effectiveness of different approaches to admissions, inviting students to use entrepreneurial thinking to develop innovative alternatives. We will explore the market trends, political pressures, and institutional needs higher education must confront in choosing among applicants. Course readings will be supplemented by outside experts to provide a real-world view of current challenges and opportunities for change. Student teams will then develop and test novel approaches to college admissions. Small venture grants will be available to facilitate this process. The course will draw upon the recent book, Our Higher Calling: Rebuilding the Partnership Between American and its Colleges and Universities, co-authored by Buck Goldstein. Eric Johnson will bring unique insight into the conversation through his role as Director of Editorial Strategy for the College Board.
Would you like to find out about the financial crisis of 2008? This seminar will discuss the reasons why the crisis happened, examine critically how the government responded to the crisis, and why it has been difficult for the economy to regain its pre-crisis momentum. We will also discuss the similarities between the Meltdown and other historical financial crisis. Students will gain a broader understanding of the global economy in which we live and work. In addition, the historical perspective will enable students to gain a more thorough appreciation of the challenges that lie ahead for their generation. The aim of the seminar is not to concentrate on facts but rather to comprehend the big picture of economic processes in their social and political context in a very long-run perspective. Lots of discussion, lots of audio visual material will make this an exciting way to start your college career.

ECON 101H.001 | Introduction to Economics
TR, 12:30PM - 1:45PM. Instructor(s): Can Tian. Enrollment = 24.
This is an introductory course in both microeconomics and macroeconomics for undergraduates. In this one-semester course students are introduced to the basic theory and models that economists use to analyze the world. The concepts introduced include: comparative advantage and the gains from trade; supply, demand, and the market system; the theory of the firm; market failures; national income and its determination; inflation and unemployment; monetary and fiscal policy; and foreign exchange fluctuations.
Class periods will consist of lecture and active learning activities. A recitation section will be used to practice more in-depth problem solving. Students will take two midterms and a final exam, will complete problem sets, online homework, and essay assignments.
Text: Krugman and Wells, Essentials of Economics, 4th edition. There are no prerequisites for the course, however, you are expected to have a strong grasp of basic algebra and geometry (plotting points, graphing lines, solving for x, calculating areas of shapes, etc.)

ECON 470H.001 | Econometrics

Econometrics is the application of statistical methods and economic theory to the problem of identifying, estimating, and testing economic models. This course covers concepts and methods used in empirical economic research. Students will learn how to conduct and how to critique empirical studies in economics. Accordingly, the emphasis of the course is on various empirical applications. Topics include classical single-equation regression model, multiple regression models, discrete and categorical dependent variables, instrumental variables and longitudinal data. In the lectures, there will be many empirical examples using a wide variety of data sets.

PREREQUISITES: GRADE OF B OR BETTER IN BOTH ECON 400 AND MATH 547.

ECON 511H.001 | Game Theory
TR, 3:30 pm - 4:45 pm. Instructor(s): Sergio Parreiras. Enrollment = 24.
The course will provide an introduction to Game Theory methods. While most of the course will be devoted to the mathematical foundations of the theory (where calculus and probability are the main "tools of the trade"), applications of Game Theory to: Economics, Political Science, Biology and Finance (in that order of relevance) shall be considered as well.

PREREQUISITES: ECON 101 AND ECON 410 AND MATH 233.
NO FIRST-YEAR STUDENTS.

Sergio O. Parreiras earned his Ph.D. in Economics in 2001 from The University of Pennsylvania and shortly joined the Economics Department of UNC at Chapel Hill.

Water supply is a critical component of food and energy production, good health and sanitation. Yet globally, access to clean water is still not assured, even within developed nations like the United States. Following the leadership of the UN Declaration of Human Rights, an increasing number of countries are adopting the position that access to water is a human right. What barriers to nations and individuals have to guaranteeing water access? Given the critical nature of water to good health and nearly all of human economic activity, what constraints do people have to negotiate globally to maintain sufficient stocks of this crucial resource for the earth’s population?

This course examines these questions. To do this we will use a variety of mediums: film, books, scientific research, lectures and discussions. We will endeavor to not only outline the constraints to and conflict over this increasingly limited resource, but also suggest some paths towards sustainable water...
