WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Only first-year students (and transfer students who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC) can enroll in this class. If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

TITLE: Afro-Latinxs in the US

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR; FC-GLOBAL OR FC-POWER

COURSE DESCRIPTION

What does it mean to be both racially Black and ethnically Latino in the U.S.? This discussion-based course will look at the history, culture, experiences, political struggles, and social dilemmas of ¿Afro-Latina/o/xs¿: African-descended peoples from Latin America and the Spanish-speaking Caribbean who reside in the U.S. The erasure of these communities, along with their struggles for well-being, prosperity, belonging, and visibility, will be explored. The class provides an opportunity for a deeper understanding of the legacies of the transatlantic slave trade, ethno-nationalism, and U.S. foreign-policy, and their connection to contemporary issues of migration, sexism, inequality, and anti-blackness. In-depth conversations about the politics of ¿race¿ and ¿ethnicity¿

This course examines the decolonial moment on the African continent (1958-1963), anti-colonial struggles and the rise of liberation movements (1964-1992), and the post-colonial and neo-colonial era through the early twenty-first century. Furthermore, this course will equip students to analyze critically cutting-edge issues concerning Africa today through readings, lectures, and research. For junior/senior majors and students with an interest in Africa.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Only first-year students (and transfer students who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC) can enroll in this class. If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

AMST 055H.001 | Birth and Death in the United States

TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Tim Marr. Enrollment = 24.

This course explores birth and death as essential human rites of passage impacted by changing American historical and cultural contexts. Since both remain defining life events beyond experiential recall, studying them in interdisciplinary ways opens powerful insights into how culture mediates the construction of bodies and social identities. Readings and assignments are designed to explore changing anthropological rituals, medical procedures, scientific technologies, and ethical quandaries. Students will choose the topics for research projects and learn how to access useful resources. We will collectively explore a variety of representations of birth and death in literary expression, film, and material culture as well as investigate questions about when life begins and ends, different ways of disposing bodies and remembering individuals, and how a confrontation with the impermanence of life leads to the creation of meaning, especially for students being figuratively born again as learners at UNC.

TITLE: America's Threatened Languages

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FC-KNOWING or FC-POWER

COURSE DESCRIPTION

Throughout the 19th and 20th centuries, the rich tapestry of minority languages spoken in this country began a widespread shift toward English. This has led many indigenous languages to the brink of extinction, and to the loss of the heritage languages of many immigrant communities. This course examines the social and historical motivations for this trend, and explores critical thinking skills for analyzing the phenomenon of language shift.

TITLE: What is Critical Race Theory?

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FC-POWER

COURSE DESCRIPTION

One of the most misunderstood terms to enter the public consciousness in recent years is ¿critical race theory.¿ It is a term that, by now, we have all heard, have at least some vague concept of what it is about, and have some inclination ¿ depending on our political leanings ¿ to either defend or reject it. But what is it really? Where did it come from? How it is used? Why has it become part of the public consciousness? Is it really something that I want to defend or reject depending on my political leanings? What happens when we bridge the gap between the empty signifier that is bandied about on cable news channels and the scholarship that started, continues to fuel, and critiques this movement? This class offers a real grounding in what is too often an empty

This course introduces students to a wide range of topics covering food studies taught by faculty across the UNC campus as well as from Duke, NC State and outside of an academic setting. The overall objective of this course is to provide an overview of how individuals, communities, and societies produce, distribute, and eat food. This inter-disciplinary course will examine cultural, political, economic, environmental, and geographic approaches to food within local, national, and global contexts. Topics include food politics, food in the arts, land use, how we eat through time, culture and religious food values as well as a basic understanding of physiological concepts of nutrition. Students will explore:

In his memoir Black Boy, Richard Wright wrote that he left the south as a young man not to "forget the south, but so that some day [he] might understand it." In this course, students will engage the ways that thinkers across different genres and mediums-- novelists, visual artists, directors, activists, and others-- have reckoned with this challenge to "understand the south," both in the south and from elsewhere. In doing so, we will look at the ways that authors and artists invoke the south's varied natural landscapes in articulating regional and local identity in order to think more broadly about what we mean when we talk about "the south."

AMST 294: Seminar on Aesthetic Perspective.
 How has the American aesthetic realm of art and literature offered a means of reimagining the Jewish past, the Jewish present, and Jewish myth? This seminar examines both the aesthetic choices of select Jewish American artists and writers and the historical contexts in which they created their work, with an eye to critical and communal responses to their work at the time.

Digital Native America is a project-based course that explores settler colonial appropriations of American Indian identity and knowledge, as well as diverse forms of repatriation, recovery, self-representation, and re-representation by Indigenous and non-Indigenous people. Over the course of the semester, we will engage critical themes, such as settler memory, decolonization, digital storytelling, social media and engagement, gaming, story mapping and digital exhibit design. Students will work collaboratively to contribute to The Experiential World of D&Arcy McNickle, a digital project that re-presents the life of one of the twentieth century's most important Native writers and intellectuals.

This course is cross-listed with ASIA 691H

AMST 691H is a research and methods course designed to help senior American Studies and Asian Studies majors research and write an honors thesis. Our objectives are to review some major issues in Asian and American Studies and interdisciplinary area studies in general, investigate how each student's research topic fits into these larger debates, review the writing conventions of the appropriate discipline and field, and help students produce innovative, insightful, and articulate research essays. EE.

Students who complete and successfully defend an honors thesis will graduate with honors. American Studies and Asian Studies students will also participate in the senior colloquium in the spring, where each student will give a short presentation summarizing their thesis research. Completed theses will be entered into the Carolina Digital Repository.

Students writing an honors thesis will be enrolled in AMST 691H and ASIA 691H by the department once their thesis applications have been approved.

ANTH 053H.037 | Darwin's Dangerous Idea

TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Paul Leslie. Enrollment = 24.

Darwin's theory of evolution by natural selection is central to one of the most profound revolutions in the history of thought, generating stunning insights but also some misunderstanding and tragic abuse. This seminar aims to provide a clear understanding of how natural selection works, and how it doesn't. We will examine objections to the theory; how the environmental and health problems we face today reflect processes of natural selection; and recent attempts to understand why we get sick, how we respond to disease, why we get old, why we choose mates the way we do, and more. Class sessions will feature a mix of lecture and discussion of concepts and issues. Students will also engage in small group projects; cooperative explorations of problems raised in class or in the readings and/or designing mini research projects.

FIRST YEAR STUDENTS ONLY.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Only first-year students (and transfer students who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC) can enroll in this class. If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

TITLE: Archaeology and Popular Culture

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR; FC-PAST OR FC-KNOWING

COURSE DESCRIPTION

Archaeology often captures the popular imagination through fantastic and farfetched portrayals of lost civilizations, aliens, and spectacular treasures. While these depictions of archaeology and the past may not be accurate, the story being told is nonetheless significant and reflects something about the culture that produced it. This course explores how these films, television shows, books, and video games tell stories about the past, what stories are being told, and what these representations imply about the relationship between archaeology and society. We will critically analyze popular representations of archaeology, comparing how competing visions of fact and fiction operate in the public sphere.

In Fall 2023, ANTH 411 will be all about curating things, specifically the curation and care of archaeological collections. Students will learn about collections management through readings, discussion, lectures, and hands-on work at the Research Laboratories of Archaeology's curation facility. The RLA curates collections mainly from the American South. Through the lens of the RLA collections, we'll explore basic principles of curation and data management as well as issues that affect curation nation-wide and internationally, such as collection accessibility and accountability, conservation and preservation, policies and regulations, and ethical concerns.

This graduate seminar focuses broadly on the topic of 'complexity' in archaeology. We are going to use Wengrow and Graeber's 2021 book 'Dawn of Everything' as a way to frame some of the discussion about 'complexity' in the archaeological literatures. The idea is to think through the colonial worlding represented by the idea of complex societies (and the origins of the state) and then to explore alternate frameworks and methodologies that might provide different points of view (seeking alternate ways to look at old problems). For example Wengrow and Graeber explore different sources of domination including control over violence, control over knowledge, and charismatic power; as well as different institutional forms including sovereignty, administration and heroic politics; each of which can be explored not as essentialized categories (e.g., chiefdoms or the Asiatic mode of production) but rather dynamic relational entities operating at different scales. We can try to explore these through examination of archaeological and ethnographic case studies from the Southeastern US, Mexico, Near East, Oceania, etc.

The idea is to broadly think about what the search for 'complexity' in archaeology is really doing; how archaeological narratives are active process of

COURSE DESCRIPTION

Trees, through their biology, meaning and uses, create an arc of understanding that spans what it means to be human. Ultimately, we will explore the meaning of trees and wood and why we seek happiness in nature, cherish wood and the creation of objects of wood. Tree: What is a tree from a biological perspective? How do they represent a complex community and play a vital role in life on the planet? Timber: What is the economy of wood internationally and in the state of NC? What are biophysical and material properties of trees that allow them to grow so large and be so useful to human society? Totem: Why do we respond emotionally to wood and choose it as a material in our lives and surroundings? How do we design and create objects of meaning from wood? We will walk in the

TITLE: Convergent Research: Solving the Grand Engineering Challenges of the Future

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR

DESCRIPTION

Convergence research focuses on addressing complex problems in science, engineering, and society. Today's and tomorrow's grand challenges will not be solved by one discipline, but by the integration of knowledge, methods, and expertise from across various disciplines.

This first-year seminar will introduce students to the new scientific language of convergence research. Through surveying the grand challenges of engineering, we will learn how through pursuing a common research challenge, experts from various fields intermix their knowledge, theories, methods, data,

Engineers help to design and build solutions to the world's problems. This course will explore some of the fundamental skills and tools in engineering. You will get experience using engineering tools, and you will also develop a mindset so that you can "learn how to learn" because technology changes rapidly and the tools that you use today may be obsolete in 20 years. There will be an emphasis on developing strong professional skills, including work in a group setting and effectively communicating your efforts.

In addition, a goal of this class is to help you develop an entrepreneurial mindset so that you will understand the bigger picture. For example, while it may be easy to develop an engineering solution to a problem, what are the economic and ethical considerations of various solutions? These concepts are important to help engineers build a better world.

This will be an "active learning" class in which we spend much of our class time working. For example, we will write computer programs to model and simulate

Seats in this class are reserved for each class year. When the registration window opens for your class year, a limited number of seats will become available on a first-come first-served basis. If these seats are already taken when you try to sign up, we encourage you to sign up for the waitlist. In past years, many students have been able to enroll from the waitlist.

Students work in flexible, interdisciplinary teams to assess opportunities, brainstorm, and prototype solutions. Design thinking and physical prototyping skills are developed through fast-paced, iterative exercises in a variety of contexts and environments.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Only first-year students (and transfer students who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC) can enroll in this class. If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

This course will cover both fundamental and applied aspects of modern materials science. We will discuss how to select materials based on their properties and how they can be processed into products that you encounter in everyday life. A strong focus will be on the relationship between processing, structure (development), and properties of solid materials, such as metals, ceramics and polymers. Topics include crystal structures, imperfections, diffusion, mechanical properties, deformation mechanisms, phase diagram, phase transformations, material characterization techniques, and electrical, magnetic, optical and thermal properties of materials. In-class demonstrations and class projects will be a critical part of this course and involve the use of the UNC makerspace (BeAM) and the Chapel Hill Analytical and Nanofabrication Laboratory (CHANL). One of the goals of this class is to bridge materials science and engineering disciplines and to make connections to real-world applications.

What kind of material is Sponge Bob made of? What about the slime of his pet snail, Gary? We are taught that there are three states of matter: solid, gas, and liquid. However, in our daily lives we encounter materials that challenge this simple description such as foams, pastes, gels, soap, and rubber, as well as our skin, hair, nails, and cells. These are Soft Materials and in this course we will learn about their special properties and how to describe them mathematically. This class is an active one, everyone participates and everyone learns from and helps one another. We will use various in-class activities to make the class more engaging. We will discuss, take quizzes, and do presentations. We will also evaluate each other's homework. Be prepared to come to class and participate in these activities! The technical material that you will learn will provide you with a valuable skillset. In addition, a goal of this class is to help you develop an entrepreneurial mindset so that you will understand the bigger picture; draw connections between the material in this class and what you have learned in other classes; recognize opportunities; and learn from mistakes to create value for yourself and others.

An ideal research experience provides students with practical experience in a research lab, performing work that is relevant to their UNC education. The research internship should develop and enhance the students' professional skill sets and involve experiences that allow students to have responsibility for results that are of value to the research laboratory.

Research interns are mentored by a faculty member and other members of their lab. The implementation, and evaluation of the internship are a collaborative effort between the student and their research mentor. If the research mentor is not a member of the APS faculty, then the students should also have an APS faculty advisor. Oversight is also provided by the APS Research and Internship Coordinator and/or Director of Undergraduate Studies (the same person may be serving both of these roles). Internships are typically 150 hours in duration (10 hours per week during an academic semester). However, internship time frames can be flexible to match the needs and interest of the student with the opportunities offered by the research lab.

ARTH 055H.001 | Art, Gender, and Power in Early Modern Europe
TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Tania String. Enrollment = 20.

What did it mean to be a man or to be a woman in the Renaissance? This seminar will explore the ways in which constructions of gender are critical to understandings of the visual arts in the early modern period (c. 1400-1650). We will discuss and analyze a focused group of representations of men and women: portraits, mythological and biblical paintings and sculptures, and even turn our attention to the buildings these men and women inhabited. We will study the work of artists such as Michelangelo, Donatello, Titian, Holbein, and Rubens, amongst others, to find ways of understanding how masculinity and femininity were central concerns in early modern society and in the art produced in this period.

FIRST YEAR STUDENTS ONLY.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Only first-year students (and transfer students who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC) can enroll in this class. If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

ARTH 285H.001 | Art Since 1960

TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Cary Levine. Enrollment = 24.

This course will explore some of the major trends in American and European art since 1960. It will spotlight select artists whose work offers particularly intriguing, challenging, or problematic examples of contemporary art practice. We will focus on close readings of artworks and texts and consider how the questions and debates raised by them relate to various historical, social, cultural and political contexts. This course will present contemporary art and discourse as diverse, contradictory, contested, and unresolved.

Cary Levine specializes in contemporary art. He received his Ph.D. from the Graduate Center, City University of New York, and was a recipient of a J. Paul

ARTS 105H.001 | Basic Photography

MW, 2:30 pm - 5:15 pm. Instructor(s): Joy Drury Cox. Enrollment = 15.

In ARTS 105H Basic Photography you will be introduced to the basic techniques of digital photography. Both technical and conceptual applications of image-making will be explored. This course seeks to develop an understanding of the mechanics, visual language, and history of the photographic medium. Specifically, we will work with digital photographic practices, learning the fundamentals of DSLR cameras, Adobe editing software such as Photoshop and Bridge, inkjet printing, and basic digital workflow and file management. In conjunction with your studio practice, you will also learn about the medium's rich history.

Assignments will be supplemented with readings, films, library, and museum visits. Over the course of the semester, you will be exposed to a variety of examples of historical and contemporary photography. In the classroom you will be exposed to technical demonstrations, lectures, discussions, critiques,

Print I is a media-based studio art foundation course. It is designed to introduce core concepts of 2-D image-making through concepts and techniques of printmaking. In other words, the course focuses on developing visual literacy with specific attention to image-making strategies afforded by print media such as layering, reversal, multiple (editions, variant and modular) that make this approach to art-making unique. Questions arising from this inquiry include:

- What does working with a matrix or set of matrices allow? What sorts of images and ideas does this make possible?
- Why make art in serial or multiple forms?
- How is thinking for print different than/same as other media?
- How can the tools and methods of printmaking shape the development of an idea, both visually and conceptually?

ARTS 409H.001 | Art & Science: Merging Printmaking and Biology

MW, 11:15 am - 2:00 pm. Instructor(s): Bob Goldstein / Beth Grabowski. Enrollment = 14.

ARTS409H and BIOL409L together form a course that brings art majors and science majors together to learn theory and practical skills in both art and science, and to make use of this learning to make artworks using a variety of printmaking techniques. Students in this course learn some specific biological concepts and practical lab skills, and then use these and their own interests to guide, gather and generate visual information (frequently photographic) and pose questions that arise from scientific looking. These images, processes and ideas then become the point of departure for printmaking projects.

In the print studio, work in the class includes both analog and digital skills. The course introduces several printmaking processes including relief (large-scale wood cut and/or letterpress) stencil printing (screen-printing and/or pochoir) and approaches to photo-printmaking (photogravure, cyanotype). Technically, students learn how to translate imagery by hand and digitally (especially using Photoshop), make printing matrices (block, plate, or screen),

Most seats in this course are reserved for FR, SO, and DAMES majors. Anyone may waitlist; unused reserved seats will be released and go first to the people on the waitlist, if any.
First-year seats will be added to the course gradually for each wave of FY registration, so even if the course looks full, there should be more FY seats to come if not all FY have registered. The final class size is 35.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Only first-year students (and transfer students who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC) can enroll in this class. If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

ARTH 055H.001 | Art, Gender, and Power in Early Modern Europe
TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Tania String. Enrollment = 20.

What did it mean to be a man or to be a woman in the Renaissance? This seminar will explore the ways in which constructions of gender are critical to understandings of the visual arts in the early modern period (c. 1400-1650). We will discuss and analyze a focused group of representations of men and women: portraits, mythological and biblical paintings and sculptures, and even turn our attention to the buildings these men and women inhabited. We will study the work of artists such as Michelangelo, Donatello, Titian, Holbein, and Rubens, amongst others, to find ways of understanding how masculinity and femininity were central concerns in early modern society and in the art produced in this period.

FIRST YEAR STUDENTS ONLY.

TITLE: Unsolved Problems in the Genomic Age

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR; FC-NATSCI OR FC-QUANT

COURSE DESCRIPTION

We are living in times of a genetic revolution. We have sequenced the human genome and are in a position to transform medical treatment in the world. In spite of the advances in DNA sequencing, there remain mysteries in terms of how the cell accesses genetic information and how our genomes are transmitted to progeny cells with such high fidelity. The principles governing chromosome organization have been discovered through advances in biology, physics, statistics and computational sciences. This class will explore advances from the diverse disciplines and discuss the successes and limitations of the different approaches.

BIOL 395H - Honors Research in Biology

The purpose of BIOL 395H is to provide honors students with independent research experience, while working in a research lab on a question of current biological interest. Under the supervision of a faculty member, and with contribution of research postdoctoral fellows, students will learn more than just basic research techniques. They will learn how to start to think as scientists, raising hypotheses and finding ways to test them in an empirical manner. In addition to the research performed in the lab, honors students will meet with each other on a weekly basis, discuss their research and develop their scientific thinking through reading and discussing primary scientific literature.

FOR BIOLOGY MAJORS ONLY. PREVIOUS ENROLLMENT IN BIOL 201 OR 202 REQUIRED. DEPARTMENT OF BIOLOGY PERMISSION REQUIRED

BIOL 395H may be taken for no more than six graded academic credits. Three to five credit hours of research may be counted as one lecture course toward Students who take 395H meet for an hour and a half each week (in addition to the research that they do in their own labs) and work on research-related skills. We run workshops on literature search, you will discuss and analyze primary scientific literature, you will practice in scientific writing, and the icing on the cake- you will learn how to present your own research.

You do not have to be an honors student to enroll in 395H (you do have to have a GPA of 3.00 or higher).

BIOL 409L 401 3327 PRINTMAKING AND BIOLOGY Lab 1 A
(In Person On Campus Learners)

BIOL 409L & ARTS 409H | Merging Printmaking and Biology - must take class & lab together!
M, 11:00 am - 2:00 pm. Instructor(s): Bob Goldstein / Beth Grabowski. Enrollment = 14.
ARTS409H and BIOL409L together will bring together art majors and science majors to learn theory and practical skills in both art and science, and to make use of this learning to make artworks using a variety of printmaking techniques. Units in this course are organized according to topics in biology. As students learn specific biological concepts and practical lab skills, they will gather and generate visual information and pose questions that arise from scientific looking. This will become the source material (images, processes and ideas) for printmaking projects.

In the print studio, the course will introduce specific technical approaches within three categories of printmaking: intaglio (photogravure), relief (large-scale wood cut and/or letterpress) and stencil printing (screen-printing). Students will learn how to make printing matrices (plate, block or screen), how to print these matrices and explore the affordances of these technical skills (print strategies) as unique approaches to art-making. Email professors Dr Goldstein (bobg@unc.edu) and Dr Grabowski (beth.grabowski@unc.edu) with your PID number, major and why you want to take this exciting class/lab combo.

BIOL 395/395H/495 will only be accepting an online-application form for undergraduate research. You will apply online, get a copy after submission, and share the copy with your research mentor and biology sponsor (when applicable).

Here is the online form:
<https://forms.gle/qvdBoW26cbyfcQhGA>

Please note- before you apply you need to make sure that you found a lab and a faculty that will mentor you (principal instructor or PI). If that faculty member is outside the biology department you also need to find a biology faculty member that will serve as the biology faculty sponsor, interacting with you and the faculty mentor (the PI) to make sure everything works well during the semester.

BIOL	495	110	3293	UNDERGRAD BIOLOGY RESEARCH	Lecture (In Person On Campus Learners)	1 - 3	A

BIOL 395/395H/495 will only be accepting an online-application form for undergraduate research. You will apply online, get a copy after submission, and share the copy with your research mentor and biology sponsor (when applicable).

Here is the online form:
<https://forms.gle/qvdBoW26cbyfcQhGA>

Please note- before you apply you need to make sure that you found a lab and a faculty that will mentor you (principal instructor or PI). If that faculty member is outside the biology department you also need to find a biology faculty member that will serve as the biology faculty sponsor, interacting with you and the faculty mentor (the PI) to make sure everything works well during the semester.

Enrollment = 24. A quiet revolution has transformed biology; a revolution triggered by new empirical and theoretical breakthroughs that have called into question our longstanding assumptions about the mechanisms of development, inheritance, and evolution. These unexpected breakthroughs have spawned a new field that seeks to understand how environments interact with developing organisms (including humans!) to shape their features, affect their health, and impact their evolution. In this combined lecture and discussion course, you will learn how this new field is transforming biology, gain experience interpreting the scientific literature, plan scientific research, and integrate ideas from across diverse disciplines of biology, from genetics to ecology. PREREQUISITES: BIOL 201, BIOL 202, AND BIOL 205 (or consent of the instructor).

BIOL 543H.001 | Cardiovascular Biology

TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Victoria Bautch. Enrollment = 24.

An experimental approach to understanding cardiovascular development, function, and disease. This class will cover development of the cardiovascular system (heart and blood vasculature), and cardiovascular function as linked to selected diseases. We will cover the molecular, genetic, cell biological, and biochemical techniques used to study the cardiovascular system, with an emphasis on the genes and signaling pathways involved in cardiovascular development and disease. It is assumed that students will have some familiarity with animal development and cell and molecular biology. This course will focus deeply on

BIOL 669 001 3418 ECOLOGY SEMINAR Lecture 1 - 3 A
 (In Person On Campus Learners)

Please sign up for THREE (3) credit hours!
 In this graduate-seminar style class we will explore the patterns and causes of changes in species richness at landscape, regional, and global scales. This will be an informal and fun class, focusing on learning as a community, discussing ideas, and debating the science. Primarily we will be reading the contemporary literature on studies that document and attempt to explain the causes of the biodiversity crisis. There is a surprising degree of disagreement in this literature, e.g., about whether richness is changing and if so at what scales. We will focus on recent literature and current and near-future biodiversity loss. However, we will also do some reading on the late Pleistocene megafauna extinctions and historical mass-extinction events and how these changed life on earth.

The class will be composed of roughly half graduate students and half undergraduate students. Graduate students will be required to co-lead at least one weekly discussion. Undergraduate students can do so for extra credit. There will be no exams or long, written assignments. Grades will be based on class participation and weekly pre-class quizzes on the readings.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Only first-year students (and transfer students who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC) can enroll in this class. If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

Use Waitlists on Connect Carolina until the registration period is complete.

- Only waitlist one section! (If you add to the waitlist for multiple sections, the registration system will see a conflict (enrolling in the same course twice) and you will not be enrolled if a seat becomes available. The person behind you on the waitlist will claim the seat.

- Check to see if other sections at the same day and time have a waitlist. Some sections have no waitlist, while others are 4 deep. If there is another section at the day and time you need, it is better to be first on the waitlist.

- Be persistent, seats do open up.

If you are not enrolled in a lab section by the first week of classes: The chemistry undergraduate lab courses use an electronic waitlist to fill any empty seats that open during the week of check-in

Use Waitlists on Connect Carolina until the registration period is complete.

· Only waitlist one section! (If you add to the waitlist for multiple sections, the registration system will see a conflict (enrolling in the same course twice) and you will not be enrolled if a seat becomes available. The person behind you on the waitlist will claim the seat.

· Check to see if other sections at the same day and time have a waitlist. Some sections have no waitlist, while others are 4 deep. If there is another section at the day and time you need, it is better to be first on the waitlist.

· Be persistent, seats do open up.

If you are not enrolled in a lab section by the first week of classes: The chemistry undergraduate lab courses use an electronic waitlist to fill any empty seats that open during the week of check-in

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Only first-year students (and transfer students who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC) can enroll in this class. If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-LAUNCH, FC-NATSC

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Only first-year students (and transfer students who transferred <24 post-high school college course credits) can enroll in this class. Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar or one (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. If you are a transfer student, please refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students should not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

CHEM 102H.001 | Advanced General Descriptive Chemistry

TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Todd Austell. Enrollment = 35.

CHEM 102H is recommended by the Chemistry Department for incoming first year students who have taken Advanced Placement Chemistry or the equivalent and plan to major in chemistry and/or plan a career as a research scientist. CHEM 102H focuses on a more in-depth treatment of topics traditionally covered in two semesters of freshman courses. The topics covered have been identified by the Department of Chemistry faculty as essential for success in and a good foundation for more advanced study in chemistry and other areas of the basic and applied sciences. The textbook, lectures and course work require a willingness to accept rigorous academic challenges and a solid high school background in algebra, coordinate geometry, and trigonometry. Differential and integral calculus will be used only where necessary in derivations and with explanation.

STUDENTS ELIGIBLE FOR ENROLLMENT IN CHEM 102H ARE INCOMING FIRST YEAR STUDENTS WHO HAVE RECEIVED AN ADVANCED PLACEMENT SCORE OF 5 AND HAVE BEEN GRANTED

Use Waitlists on Connect Carolina until the registration period is complete.

- Only waitlist one section! (If you add to the waitlist for multiple sections, the registration system will see a conflict (enrolling in the same course twice) and you will not be enrolled if a seat becomes available. The person behind you on the waitlist will claim the seat.

- Check to see if other sections at the same day and time have a waitlist. Some sections have no waitlist, while others are 4 deep. If there is another section at the day and time you need, it is better to be first on the waitlist.

- Be persistent, seats do open up.

If you are not enrolled in a lab section by the first week of classes: The chemistry undergraduate lab courses use an electronic waitlist to fill any empty seats that open during the week of check-in

Use Waitlists on Connect Carolina until the registration period is complete.

- Only waitlist one section! (If you add to the waitlist for multiple sections, the registration system will see a conflict (enrolling in the same course twice) and you will not be enrolled if a seat becomes available. The person behind you on the waitlist will claim the seat.
- Check to see if other sections at the same day and time have a waitlist. Some sections have no waitlist, while others are 4 deep. If there is another section at the day and time you need, it is better to be first on the waitlist.
- Be persistent, seats do open up.

If you are not enrolled in a lab section by the first week of classes: The chemistry undergraduate lab courses use an electronic waitlist to fill any empty seats that open during the week of check-in

- Only waitlist one section! (If you add to the waitlist for multiple sections, the registration system will see a conflict (enrolling in the same course twice) and you will not be enrolled if a seat becomes available. The person behind you on the waitlist will claim the seat.
- Check to see if other sections at the same day and time have a waitlist. Some sections have no waitlist, while others are 4 deep. If there is another section at the day and time you need, it is better to be first on the waitlist.
- Be persistent, seats do open up.

If you are not enrolled in a lab section by the first week of classes: The chemistry undergraduate lab courses use an electronic waitlist to fill any empty seats that open during the week of check-in

CHEM 261H.001 | Honors Organic Chemistry I
 TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Marcey Waters. Enrollment = 25.
 Molecular structure and its determination by modern physical methods, correlation between structure and reactivity and the theoretical basis for these relationships; classification of "reaction types" exhibited by organic molecules using as examples molecules of biological importance. This course will be similar to CHEM 261 with a greater emphasis on class discussion and some use of computer modeling techniques.

PREREQUISITES: CHEM 102 OR CHEM 102H. GPA OF 3.600 OR HIGHER.
 DEPARTMENT OF CHEMISTRY CONSENT REQUIRED. EMAIL chemus@unc.edu.

Professor Waters's research interests are at the interface of organic chemistry and biochemistry. The overarching goal of her research is to design

CHEM 430H.001 | Introduction to Biological Chemistry
TR, 9:30 pm - 10:45 pm. Instructor(s): Matthew Redinbo Enrollment = 30.
Dynamic examination of the principles of biochemistry, from macromolecules through enzyme function and catalysis, and into the primary metabolic pathways that generate cellular energy. This course will be an interactive combination of lecture, group based guided inquiry along with presentations from students and deeper dives into topics of mutual interest to course participants. The goal of the course is to provide a detailed foundation in biochemistry and to teach critical thinking skills focused on understanding and challenging primary biochemical data. Students who enroll in this course are typically heading to graduate or professional school in this area of study, or will use the principles employed to enhance their problem-solving abilities. Chemistry 430H is designed for chemistry majors and is not cross-listed with biol 430. Hence, Chemistry majors in the honors program will have priority. Seats will open as follows: Chemistry majors in honors with senior status, Chemistry majors in honors with junior status, Chemistry majors BS-Biochem, Chemistry majors BA. Any additional seats (and there usually are very limited

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Only first-year students (and transfer students who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC) can enroll in this class. If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

CLAS 057H.001 | Dead and Deadly Women: Around the World with Greek Tragic Heroines
TR, 12:30 pm - 1:45 pm. Instructor(s): Sharon James. Enrollment = 24.
In this course, we will study the great tragic heroines of ancient Greek drama, focusing on Clytemnestra, Medea, Alcestis, Phaedra, the Trojan Women, Antigone. We will also read a contemporary novel that engages many of these mythic women. We will study the Greek tragedies intensively, along with their global reception in later art, from paintings to poems, stage productions to sculptures, operas to ballets; these plays have been adapted and engaged in virtually every part of the world. Our questions will include: why does Greek tragedy focus so intensely on women? Are the playwrights misogynists or do they express some sympathy for women? What about these female characters grabbed the imaginations not only of ancient Greek playwrights but of later writers, painters, composers, not to mention readers? How do these characters appeal to artists and audiences from Alaska to Asia, from Latin America to Eastern Europe? How are their stories relevant to the 21st century? Did the ancient Athenians know something we don't?

What is health? What does it mean to be ill? How would doctors, patients, and ordinary people who lived more than two thousand years ago in the ancient Mediterranean have answered these questions? Ancient Greek medicine is often claimed as an ancestor of modern Western biomedicine ; but what is the nature of this relationship? In this course we learn about ancient Greek concepts of disease and therapy as they were developed and appropriated through cross-cultural conversations with Egyptian, Roman, Christian, Arabic, and Enlightenment cultures. Our sources include ancient medical writings, literary texts, and archaeological evidence for therapeutic practice, including votive offerings, surgical tools, and visual images. CLAS 131H.001 | Classical Mythology

MWF, 2:30 pm - 3:20 pm; Recitation: W, 3:35 pm - 4:35 pm. Instructor(s): James Rives. Enrollment = 24.

The purpose of this course is to introduce students to the myths of the ancient Greeks and Romans, the stories about gods, goddesses, and heroes that were told and retold over a period of centuries. The emphasis will be not simply on learning these stories, but on studying them in their historical context. How were they transmitted? What roles did they play in Greek and Roman culture? What can we learn from them about the way that the ancient Greeks and Romans understood the world around them? In our explorations we will concentrate on literary texts, especially epic and tragedy, but will also consider visual sources, especially vase painting and sculpture. As another way of exploring the significance of myth in ancient Greek and Roman society, we will also examine analogous phenomena in our own society.

I received my BA from Washington University in St. Louis in 1984 and my PhD from Stanford University in 1990. After teaching at Columbia University in New

CLAS 263H.001 | Athletics in the Greek and Roman World

MWF, 11:15 am - 12:05 pm . Instructor(s): Alexander Duncan. Enrollment = 24.

To talk about sport is to talk about society, both today and in antiquity. This course will inspect the cultures of ancient Greece and Rome, from the age of Homer to the end of the (Western) Roman Empire, through the lens of athletics. We will scrutinize the mechanics and logistics of ancient athletic events and take up larger questions of interpretation, considering sport within its religious, cultural, and political contexts. Adopting and adapting an extensive battery of theoretical approaches economic, anthropological, poetic, political, sociological, etc. we will address such questions as the following: How do the ideals embodied in Greek and Roman sport relate to the myths and cultural practices of these societies? How were competitors, whether amateur or professional, rewarded and regarded by their societies? What ethical dilemmas did athletes face? Why were animals, slaves, and religious minorities subjected to blood-sport in Roman amphitheaters? Why did others volunteer to face the same fate? What legacies and lessons have ancient athletics left for the modern world?

Course Description

This course may count as a core course for all COMM concentrations.

Should nonprofits accept money from donors with a troubling past to provide life-saving services? Are international aid groups doing more harm than good through their long-term presence? Ought abuse survivors be paid to share their story with supporters of the organization that helped them?

This class will provide you with the space and tools to investigate questions like these as well as practical skills for working in the nonprofit sector. We will focus on the ethical dimensions of communication, fundraising, governance, and programming in nonprofit organizations. Students will have the chance to apply what we are learning in class through a service-learning project and prepare several nonprofit communication deliverables that you can use as work samples on the job market. We will also host guest speakers with various roles in the nonprofit sector to help you build your professional network.

This course approaches TV structure and genre from a screenwriter's point of view. Through weekly screenings and writing exercises, you will learn to analyze storylines and story beats within an episode. We will also identify genre expectations for eight different TV genres. While increasing your knowledge of scripted TV, you will learn how to use structure and genre to hook audiences into an episode and ultimately, a series.

Course descriptions:

This course will provide an introduction to the history and development of "Theory" as the foundation for much of the most interesting thinking and research in the humanities and social sciences. In the contemporary intellectual universe, "theory" provides a common language of concepts and methods that enable intellectuals and scholars investigating human social and everyday life to speak to one another-- across disciplines and geographies, comparable to the way statistics and experimentation function in the more traditional models of science (including some social science work).

"Theory" includes many of the major schools of modern and contemporary philosophy (that stand in opposition to what is often referred to as "analytic philosophy, " which often dominates Anglo-American philosophy departments); but it also includes other-- less traditionally "philosophical"--positions. At the same time, "theory" differs from "philosophy" in so far as it is interested in providing the foundation for more empirically oriented understandings of concrete instances of human relations, practices, etc. What philosophy and theory have in common is that they provide a set of tools--concepts, filters,

The overarching objective of COMM 702 is to introduce graduate teaching assistants to the practice and theory of teaching undergraduate students at UNC. The course will provide practical advice and tips about teaching. The beginning and middle of the course will focus on practical elements of teaching, such as people management (ie. navigating classroom relationships, classroom climate, and disruptive students), classroom management (ie. fostering class discussion, classroom activities, and lectures), and document management (ie. preparing syllabus, choosing reading assignments and grading). The final few weeks of the course encourages contemplation about the theory of teaching and the role of the professoriate in academe. Course content and class discussions are designed to encourage intellectually rigorous and personally meaningful conversations about our teaching and how our personal perspectives of teaching and learning influence our practices as teachers. We will read about and discuss different approaches to teaching, the enactment of communication instruction, and growing as a teacher. You will leave this course with materials designed to help you as a new teacher, such as a course syllabus, a lesson plan, and a draft of your statement of teaching philosophy.

Seminar: Media & Consumer Culture

This seminar looks to explore the historical shifts in how consumers are imagined and addressed by key stakeholders, from the nineteenth century through the twenty-first, with a particular focus on how entertainment, leisure, and advertising industries have redefined the consumer in relation to new technologies and platforms and changing sensibilities about what types of consumers have value and what makes acts of consumption valuable. Consumer culture is oft maligned as apolitical, inauthentic, passive, and a means of manipulating and distracting people from challenging systems of oppression and engaging in more meaningful cultural practices. While such critiques may have some merit, they are also deeply classist, exclusionary, treat people like dupes, and most importantly, ignore the complex ways in which the "consumer" is constructed and reconstituted within shifting political, economic, educational, industrial and cultural contexts, or how the structuring logics of consumer culture also afford consumers agency through which individual, social, and systemic constraints can be challenged (or, at least, acknowledged). The seminar will pay close attention to the ways consumer culture has been leveraged in the

COMP 283H.001 | Discrete Structures

MWF, 12:20 pm - 1:10 pm. Instructor(s): Jack Snoeyink. Enrollment = 24.

Underlying the many applications of computers in our daily life are discrete structures like Boolean logics, relations, finite state machines, graphs, and networks that have mathematical specifications. You can tell your parents that the primary purpose of this class is to introduce these discrete structures and the formal proof techniques that support the production, verification, and maintenance of correct software. In fact, many of these are familiar from puzzles and games: already in 1990 Super Mario World expects kids to immediately understand a finite state machine diagram;

This is a language class: you will learn vocabulary and idioms of a language that is more precise and less ambiguous than the languages that we usually speak or write. With any new language, you may at first struggle to make yourself understood, but by frequent immersion and fearless practice you can become comfortable thinking and expressing yourself creatively in the language. Students pick up languages at different rates, so work to teach each other. All can gain fluency with effort and a willingness to make mistakes. And fluency will help all your computer science endeavors ; precise and unambiguous

DRAM 284-001, Anton Chekhov and The Seagull FALL 2023
Tu/Th 9:30 - 10:45 AM

In Spring 2024, the Kenan Theatre Company will present 'The Seagull' by Anton Chekhov, directed by Mark Perry. This fall, Mark will lead a companion course to the play, an in-depth investigation into this captivating, yet difficult work.

One difficulty in the play is understanding its genre positioning. The first production of the play in 1896 was a fiasco, at least in part because the company gave no attention to its subtlety and nuance. The second production in 1898 by the fledgling Moscow Art Theatre was an epiphany, signaling a paradigm shift in modern performance. Even so, that production was not quite true to the playwright's vision, as the director, Konstantin Stanislavski, emphasized its tragic aspects to the detriment of its comic and even absurdist nuances. The 'Chekhovian' balance of serious and comic moods represents a razor edge we must learn to walk. One cannot discover that balance in 5 weeks of 20-hour rehearsals.

This class will meet in DC-103.

Contact Mark Perry at mperry9@email.unc.edu if you are interested.

DRAM 284-001 fulfills a Theatre History/Literature-Criticism requirement for DDA majors and Dramaturgy minors. You DO NOT have to be a major or minor, though students who have taken DRAM 120 (Play analysis) will receive preference. Enrollment is by permission of instructor.

Dance Course Description:

This class will meet in DC 101.

All-levels. No prior experience required.

Are you ready to discover your inner dancer? If yes, this class is for you.

Dancing is physical storytelling; 'a perpendicular expression of a horizontal desire.' (Shaw)

This course will assist students in learning how to use their body (stature, lines, shapes etc.) as a vessel to convey a character's story. Dance is more than just a viral 8 count. It's self-expression when words aren't enough. It's becoming comfortable in who you are and how you move through space. Students will end the semester with knowledge in various dance physicality's and their terminologies, increased stamina, energy and confidence and a deeper understanding of themselves and their movement ability.

This is a judgment free zone, so come as you are and lets have some fun!

DRAM 290 INTRO TO PROJECTION DESIGN AND MAPPING

Welcome to Projection Design and Mapping, an exciting course that explores the creative and technical aspects of projecting images and video onto physical spaces. In this class, students will learn the fundamentals of projection mapping, a technique that allows you to transform any surface into a dynamic canvas for visual storytelling.

Over the course of the semester, students will gain hands-on experience in designing and executing projection mapping projects. We'll cover a range of

CMPL 180: Black Women in Popular Culture
This course explores the representations and contributions of Black women in popular culture. We will examine how Black women have historically utilized television, film, music, literature, etc. to think through and challenge social, cultural, economic and ideological issues facing Black girls and Black women. While contemporary popular culture texts will be stressed, the class will also engage the evolution of Black women creators, artists, and audiences in the U.S. & how these roles have changed and what those changes have meant for Black Feminist Cultural Politics. Through in-depth analyses of these issues, the class will attempt to engage in more macro level considerations such as a) the construction of race, gender, class and sexuality in popular culture, b) popular culture as a catalyst for public discourse and as an archive for

CMPL 280: Blackness, Horror, and the Limits of Historical Trauma For better or worse, Jordan Peele's 2017 film Get Out serves as a cultural reset in the world of contemporary Black horror and all its related politics, speculative worlds, and desires to reckon with the monster that is white supremacist patriarchal violence. This course explores Black horror as a cinematic universe held together through the logics, sounds, and aesthetics of antiblackness, violence, nostalgia, Black trauma, and themes/tropes from horror media. We will consider the relationship between horror and Black modes of expression focusing on the various ways Black filmmakers, writers, and artists have attempted to visualize the haunting connections between the body, the flesh, and the cultural geography of America and the Black Diaspora. We will ask what Black Horror can teach us about the intersections of media, culture, death, and

TITLE: Human Rights and Literature

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR

COURSE DESCRIPTION

In this class we will investigate the history of human rights from the perspective of literature. We will explore how rights are represented and narrated in novels such as Mary Shelley's Frankenstein and how founding declarations, famously, the Declaration of Independence (1776), the Declaration of the Rights of Man and Citizen (1789), and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (1948) rely on fictional structures. While attending to some of the more politically contentious issues involved with human rights, such as the claim that universal rights lack political and legal enforcement, we will also consider the following questions: how does fiction help articulate and represent claims to human rights? Why might a political philosopher or legal scholar turn to a

TITLE: American Poetry in Motion

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course focuses on the creative processes involved in writing poetry. We will look at poets; revisions of their work, their statements about poetry, their letters to and from other writers, and the publication and reception of their poems in their own time. We will concentrate on specific case studies: the manuscripts and letter-poems of the reclusive writer Emily Dickinson; the notebooks, letters, and poems of Walt Whitman that he wrote while tending the wounded in the Civil War hospitals; the poems, manuscripts, and letters of George Moses Horton, who taught himself to read and write and published two books of poetry while enslaved in North Carolina; and the drafts, revisions, and animal drawings of twentieth-century modernist Marianne Moore. The course seeks

TITLE: Shakespeare's Hamlet: A Tragedy for a Modern Age in Crisis

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR; FC-AESTH

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This first-year seminar provides a multi-faceted, in-depth, and unique exploration of William Shakespeare's tragic masterpiece, Hamlet. A play as oft misunderstood as it is celebrated, Hamlet occupies a strange place in our cultural landscape, being a work with which many of us become acquainted early on & be it through The Lion King, parodies, or compulsory high school reading & while at the same time remaining a kind of distant, difficult, and marbled-encased & classic & that seems to evade our attempts to appreciate or even understand it. Put more simply, Hamlet is an artistic masterpiece & though an extremely difficult one & that we have been told we & should & know and love, but that for many students remains a frustrating, even confounding, mystery.

ENGL 089H.001 The Machine Mistake from Frankenstein to the Smartphone MWF, 10:10 am - 11:00 am. Instructor(s): David Ross. Enrollment = 24. Science fiction supposedly pines for gleaming gadgetry. Even at its giddiest and wonkiest, however, science fiction remembers Frankenstein. It remembers that monsters develop ideas of their own; that they wind up haunting and even hunting us; that our innovations;however seemingly benign;threaten to escape our control and comprehension and embark on whole new careers of unintended consequence. Our course traces the genealogy of this machine anxiety. Our guiding questions will be: What are machines? Are machines ¿natural¿ or ¿unnatural¿? Are their dangers inherent? How do they change us? Is an artificially intelligent ¿machine¿ really a machine?

.Coding, algorithms, data visualization;these technological words may seem completely unrelated to fields of study such as Literature, Philosophy, History, and Art, but they actually play a key role in shaping culture, society, and even human thought today ; issues at the heart of the Humanities.

As a result, a new interdisciplinary area of study, known as Digital Humanities, has emerged to both explore the impact of technology on society and use new digital methods to analyze traditional materials in the Humanities, such as texts, objects, and archives. In English 105i: Writing in the Digital Humanities, we will explore this new area of study by completing three unit projects, each dedicated to learning a key digital method in the field and the types of composition and writing that result from it. Our central theme will be maps and mapping, with the idea that maps;as a ubiquitous and historical tool and process;resonate with the tools and processes afforded by new computational technologies.

We will learn how to write within this discipline and along the way we will try to answer the question: how do the humanities work with computers?

.Coding, algorithms, data visualization, these technological words may seem completely unrelated to fields of study such as Literature, Philosophy, History, and Art, but they actually play a key role in shaping culture, society, and even human thought today. Issues at the heart of the Humanities.

As a result, a new interdisciplinary area of study, known as Digital Humanities, has emerged to both explore the impact of technology on society and use new digital methods to analyze traditional materials in the Humanities, such as texts, objects, and archives. In English 105i: Writing in the Digital Humanities, we will explore this new area of study by completing three unit projects, each dedicated to learning a key digital method in the field and the types of composition and writing that result from it. Our central theme will be maps and mapping, with the idea that maps, as a ubiquitous and historical tool and process, resonate with the tools and processes afforded by new computational technologies.

We will learn how to write within this discipline and along the way we will try to answer the question: how do the humanities work with computers?

ENGL 132H.001 | Honors: Intro to Fiction Writing

TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): . Enrollment = 15.

This course is a collective, collaborative exploration of the techniques of fiction, through close reading and discussion of classic short stories to the writing of short exercises dealing with the elements of fiction (setting, characterization, dialogue, point of view, etc.) and, later in the term, one short story (2,000-5,000 words). There is a midterm examination. The class is a seminar, a workshop with both written and oral critiques of student works required, and students can expect a lively and encouraging atmosphere as we investigate and practice the imaginative craft of fiction writing.

FIRST YEAR HONORS CAROLINA STUDENTS ONLY.

ENGL 133H.001 | Honors: Intro to Poetry Writing

MW, 1:25 pm - 2:40 pm. Instructor(s): Gabby Calvocoressi. Enrollment = 15.

In this class we'll be thinking about every aspect of the poem. What inspires us to write them, how do we start? And, most importantly, how can a deep understanding of poetic craft help us to make rigorous and muscular poems from the raw material of our lives and vision? We will look at the work of established poets to help us increase the power of our own. We will think about traditional forms as an invitation to our own urgent, necessary and deeply contemporary work. More than anything poetry is a conversation that's been happening over millennia. We will endeavor to find where we fit in and where and how we are blazing our own path. This is an Honors class so students will be expected to be actively engaged in their own work and the work of their peers. As such, each student will be paired with another member of the class as a Primary Reader. Primary Readers will write letters to each other throughout the term as means of thinking about how we talk (even at the beginning of our poetic lives) about the arc of another writer's poems and poetic pursuits. It will rock. We're in it together!

American Literature: From Page to Screen (ENGL 220)
Prof. Thrailkill, Fall 2023, MW 3:00 - 4:15

What happens to a story when it moves from words on a page to images on a screen?
What do the stories we choose to retell cinematically tell us about the promise and perils of the United States experiment?
This course pairs selected canonical works of U.S. literature (short stories, essays, and 3 longer narrative works) with cinematic adaptations. The majority of our literary works are drawn from the nineteenth-century, a crucial period for the creation of powerful ideals, myths, and narratives that gave shape to different versions of American national identity. T
We will begin our exploration with a quick pre-history (focused on The Declaration of Independence) and conclude the semester with powerful 21st century works (I Am Not Your Negro and Brokeback Mountain) that circle back to the tensions that animate and sometimes threaten the radical experiment that is the

ENGL 224H.001 | Survey of Medieval English Literature, excluding Chaucer

TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Taylor Cowdery. Enrollment = 24.

Modern readers sometimes assume that poetry is not political; that it is a type of literature more concerned with beauty and its own inner logic than with the political and social world that has produced it. In this course, we will challenge this idea by studying the politically and socially inflected work of four great medieval poets: Geoffrey Chaucer, William Langland, John Gower, and the anonymous Pearl-poet. These writers, who are often called the "Ricardian poets," lived and worked during the reign of Richard II, a time when England was shot through with conflict. During this period, the plague decimated the English population; the king sought to seize new and authoritarian powers from parliament; the English church was riddled with corruption; rural peasants and urban laborers staged an uprising; and an unpopular and bloody war with France seemed to drag on without end. All these issues and more appear in the works of these four poets, and by reading them, we will learn about the complex relationship between literature and history during the fourteenth century. We'll also learn about the formal qualities that make Ricardian poetry distinctive; about medieval views on aesthetics and beauty; about the sound of Middle

ENGL 225H.001 | Shakespeare

TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Jessica Wolfe. Enrollment = 24.

This introduction to the dramatic works of Shakespeare will place nine or ten of his plays in conversation with classical and Renaissance philosophy, focusing on the ethical, epistemological, and ontological questions raised by his comedies, tragedies, Roman plays, and romances. How do his plays debate when and whether it is acceptable to lie or dissimulate? How just, or unjust, is the law, and how may justice best be upheld by those tasked to do so? How do they address problems about the reliability, or the unreliability, of human knowledge, the senses, or experience? How effective, or how slippery, is language in conveying philosophical truths? By reading brief passages drawn from classical Greek, Roman, and Renaissance philosophers side by side with Shakespeare's plays, we will also look to Shakespeare as a means of introducing ourselves to some key questions of philosophical thought, focusing on three key ancient schools of philosophy (skepticism, Stoicism, and Epicureanism) as well as on the more eclectic thought of philosophers contemporaneous with Shakespeare himself (Francis Bacon, Michel de Montaigne, Machiavelli, to name a few).

ENGL 265H.001 | Literature and Race, Literature and Ethnicity: #BlackLivesMatter and the New Humanism
TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Elyse Crystall. Enrollment = 24.

This course takes as its primary objects of analysis novels, poetry, and visual and filmic texts; historical and government documents; and personal memoir, music, journalism, and interviews, in order to examine how race and ethnicity, or maybe our perceptions of race and ethnicity, shape our current world. This, in turn, should enable us to imagine other ways of seeing and being. We will consider how race and ethnicity, among many other identity signifiers, are structured by institutions and social relations and informed by cultural beliefs. Once we understand how we participate in and interact with these structures, how we are defined by them, how we create them, we are positioned to critique and change them.

The sub-title (how does it feel to be a problem?) comes from W.E.B. Du Bois's 1903 foundational text The Souls of Black Folk where, among other important insights, critiques, and analyses, he predicted that the "color line" would be the issue of the twentieth century. Perhaps it is the question for the Program: Honors Semester in London

Course: Life Writing in London
Dates: September 2, 2023 - December 9, 2023

It's been said that there are only two plots in all of literature: a stranger comes to town, or You go on a journey. This semester, we are in the unique position of experiencing both plots & strangers in town, on a journey all our own & so it seems fitting that for this class we should be writing both fiction and non-fiction. We will learn how to write creatively about our experiences in London and local countryside in notes and short scenes & mini-essays & and turn those experiences into short fiction. What is the connection between fact and fiction? How can we use our own experiences as grist for Spend this term in some exciting places. Plunge down the rabbit hole with Alice, get whirled to Oz with Dorothy or fly to Neverland with Peter and Wendy, go shopping on Diagon Alley with Harry and Hagrid.

In English 284 Reading Children's Fiction read (or reread) some of the most influential and lasting books written in English. Enjoy works hailed as classics alongside works recovered for their importance and vitality: get lost in the pictures and stories of the children's magazine, The Brownies Book, edited by W. E. B. Du Bois and a masterwork of the 1920s.

This course considers how to define children's literature (from &nursery stories& through &young adult&).

What stories do these books tell? How do they tell them?

We focus on illustrated books for children that have established or transformed that genre. We locate children's books within the history of illustration to explore conventions of visual story telling. How do images reflect, extend, or dispute written meaning? How do they reveal changing ideas of children or childhood?
We compare different depictions of classic forms--fables, nursery rhymes, fairy and folk tales--as well as the roles of pictures in primers and readers. We read books transformed by their pictures--the Alice books, Oz, Treasure Island. The role of photography takes us into twentieth-century illustration. How does medium shape meaning?

ENGL 362H.001 | Asian American Literature and History

MWF, 1:25 pm - 2:15 pm. Instructor(s): Heidi Kim. Enrollment = 24.

This course focuses on events of particular import in Asian American history and how they are narrativized in a variety of primary documents and interdisciplinary texts. Events may include (for example) specific ethnic histories, refugee movements, immigration, or others, at the instructor's discretion.

The Japanese American incarceration and internment during World War II was a pivotal event in the history of the United States. This course will explore the legacy of the incarceration as a major piece of civil rights history through law and literature. We will study its history, including the Supreme Court landmark cases, now known by every lawyer, and the 1980s appeals and movement for redress and reparations, in conversation with other major civil rights issues and debates, such as the current detention in Guantanamo Bay and the infamous Tuskegee syphilis study. At the same time, we will uncover the human side of the story through documents, memoirs and artwork. Students will be expected to engage in original archival research utilizing oral histories,

ENGL 490 Literary Citizenship & Poetry Communities Poets don't just emerge in the national conversation overnight: they do so after years of study, establishing a community of poets, and publishing. A cadre of poets emerged from each emerging social media technology into the national conversation; in this course, we'll create a cadre that will support each other and widen our exposure to the poetry community via technologies that are currently emerging. The point of this course is to prepare you for your poetry career beyond UNC. Wherever you end up, you will appreciate your poetry life more if you're connected to a community. In this course, you'll work on projects that build the skills needed to find those communities; skills that you will use in any career. Prerequisite: ENGL 207 or ENGL 407. Students who have completed ENGL 131 or 133H may petition the instructor for permission to enter.

ECON 101H.001 | Introduction to Economics

TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Sergio Parreiras. Enrollment = 24.

Introduction to Economics (Economics 101H) is the Honors section of the introductory course in Economics. The Honors section covers the same material as the large enrollment version but does so in more depth thru discussion of real-life questions and the use of economic models. The course is an introduction to both micro and macroeconomics. In this one-semester course students are introduced to fundamental issues in economics including competition, scarcity, opportunity cost, resource allocation, unemployment, inflation, and the determination of prices. This course is the gateway course for the major of Economics; if you wish to major in Economics, you must have at least a C in this course.

FIRST YEAR STUDENTS ONLY.

The course is designed to advance analytical skills in the field of applied labor economics. The course covers empirical models of labor supply, human capital, earnings, income inequality, informality, and the current COVID-19 crisis. Students will learn how researchers evaluate policies affecting labor markets, including tax and welfare reforms, education programs, minimum wage and labor regulation, and COVID-19-related policies. The course mostly focuses on the U.S. labor market. Students will improve programming skills in Stata and use real-world survey data in writing a research project.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Only first-year students (and transfer students who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC) can enroll in this class. If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

EMES 072H.001 | Field Geology of Eastern California

TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Drew Coleman. Enrollment = 20.

Have you ever wanted to stand on a volcano, see a glacier, trace out an earthquake fault, or see the Earth's oldest living things? This seminar is designed around a one-week field trip to eastern California, where students will study geologic features including active volcanoes, earthquake-producing faults, and evidence for recent glaciation and extreme climate change. Before the field trip (which will take place the week of Fall Break and be based at a research station near Bishop, California), the class will meet twice a week to learn basic geologic principles and to work on developing field research topics. During the field trip students will work on field exercises (e.g. mapping, measuring, and describing an active fault; observing and recording glacial features) and collect data for the research projects. After the field trip, students will obtain laboratory data from samples collected during the trip and test research hypotheses using field and laboratory data. Grading will be based on presentation of group research projects, and on a variety of small projects during the trip (notebook descriptions, mapping projects, etc.). Students may be required to pay some of the costs of the trip (a maximum of about

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-LAUNCH; FC-GLOBAL or FC-POWER

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Only first-year students (and transfer students who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC) can enroll in this class. If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

TITLE: Freshwaters in the Anthropocene

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR, FC-NATSCI

COURSE DESCRIPTION

Freshwaters sustain myriad ecosystem services by providing drinking water, irrigation, inland fisheries, transportation, recreational opportunities, nutrient cycling, and biodiversity. At the same time, both water quality and quantity are impacted by land use, water abstraction, damming, contamination, and climate change. This seminar will focus (1) on understanding how these anthropogenic pressures affect freshwater ecosystems differently across ecoregions, and (2) how management, legislative, and social initiatives have adapted or developed solutions. We will focus mainly on the United States but consider case studies from around the world. Students should be prepared to read and discuss three materials per week. These reading materials will include

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Only first-year students (and transfer students who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC) can enroll in this class. If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Only first-year students (and transfer students who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC) can enroll in this class. If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

TITLE: The Environment in American History

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR; FC-PAST or FC-VALUES

COURSE DESCRIPTION

In this course, students will analyze the ways in which Americans have both shaped and been shaped by their natural environment. Together, we will trace a selected history of interactions between humans and nature in America, focusing on the often-fraught intersection between political, economic, social, and religious understandings of nature. As we do so, we will examine the various answers that Americans have given to a set of slippery core questions: What responsibilities do humans have to the broader natural world? Are humans a part of nature, or outside of it? What, ultimately, is the nature of nature?

HIST 174H.001 | Honors Seminar in African, Asian, and Middle Eastern History
T, 3:30 pm - 6:00 pm. Instructor(s): Cemil Aydin. Enrollment = 24.

This course will focus on imperial experience and decolonization of Asia and Africa from the 1870 to the 1970s. Course readings will explore the content of the anti-colonial critique of the international order and visions for a post-imperial new world in Asian and African intellectual history. Students will examine Pan-Africanism, Pan-Asianism and Pan-Islamism, as important trends in the process of decolonization. While focusing on intellectual and political decolonization, this course will revisit the debate on the politics of racial thinking from the perspective of international history. How did ideas and ideologies about difference and hierarchies among races, religious groups and continents shape the evolution of the modern world order? Topics will include the history of international law, multiple internationalisms, alternative humanisms in Asia and Africa, as well as debates on cosmopolitanism and nationalism.

HIST 179H.001 | Slavery and the US Civil War

TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Antwain Hunter. Enrollment = 24.

The United States' historic relationship with slavery, particularly during the Civil War Era, is often misunderstood in the present day. This loosely chronological course explores the country's ties to the institution during this important period in the American past. Course content features the institution's expansion into the United States' western territories, the political debates around slavery in the decades preceding the Civil War, the rise of the abolition movement and the proslavery response, slavery's role in the secession crisis, the wartime experiences of enslaved people on the Southern home front, the Lincoln administration's policies towards enslavers in the Confederacy and the slaveholding Union states, wartime emancipation and formerly enslaved people's military service, the struggle to pass the XIII Amendment, and freedpeople's fight to fully realize their freedom during Reconstruction. Students in this course will read a number of important secondary texts on the subject but will also engage with a wide array of sources produced during the Civil War Era, which will allow them to draw their own conclusions about this complex period. These primary sources will include slave narratives, period

HIST 189H.001 | The Global Order from World War II to the Present

TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Klaus Larres. Enrollment = 24.

This course deals with the establishment of the rules-based global order toward the end of the Second World War and analyzes the development of that order throughout the Cold War years and the post-Cold War era up to the present. The course has three main parts:

1. Analysis of the establishment and nature of the Bretton Woods system;
2. outline and analysis of the most important international institutions and intergovernmental organizations which have remained relevant in today's global order;
3. analysis of the challenges to the rules-based global order that have emerged in the 21st century.

HIST 291H.001 | Putting Literature and History in Dialogue
M, 2:30 pm - 5:00 pm. Instructor(s): Donald Reid. Enrollment = 24.

In this course, we will discuss (a) novels by Assia Djebar, Boualem Sansal, and Yasmina Khadra that deal in very different ways with the history of Algeria during and after its time as part of France; and (b) novels by Tariq Ali, Arthur Koestler, and Victor Serge that explore the unrequited love and terror Soviet communism inspired. There are no prerequisites for this course. None of the authors we'll read set out to write books that would achieve the status of required reading in a college course. They wanted readers from all walks of life open to being engaged and enthralled and who are willing to think about what had never occurred to them before. If that could be you, take that walk on the wild side to this class.

I will present to the class the particular historical context in which each novel is situated. Students will not read any history books, although we will read the novels as history books of a radically different sort. Our goal is to examine how the imagined worlds authors create in these novels pose and

History 398-001: Seeing the Past

The value that we attach to seeing something for ourselves, and then being able to describe what we have seen to others, is central to our culture. Seeing is the privileged form of sensory perception and consequently a common metaphor for understanding itself: ¿I see what you mean,¿ we say, or ¿My view on this has changed.¿ In the criminal legal process, great weight is attached to eyewitness testimony, whereas convictions based only on hearsay are rightly considered unsound. Eyewitness is also a key criterion for how historians evaluate their primary sources and arrange them in hierarchies of importance: in the history books and articles that you have read, you will doubtless have come across numerous comments to the effect that such-and-such a source is reliable because its author was present at the events recorded in it, while another source is of lesser significance because it is second hand. This course seeks to unpick the idea of eyewitnessing in order, ultimately, to think about how historians go about their research, and how they evaluate their sources. What is an eyewitness? What is an eyewitness source? And what exactly is an eyewitness source a source for? The examination of key theoretical issues will

History 398-002: Cultural Encounters in Early America

This seminar will consider the early interactions among Native Americans, Europeans, and Africans on the North American continent. Why did these peoples come together? How did they make sense of one another? How did they change one another's lives, religions, political and economic systems, social structures, and assumptions about themselves, others, and their places in the world? In this course, you will write a major research paper on one aspect of cultural interactions in colonial North America.

History 398-003: Leisure Time and the Making of Modern America, 1880-1945

Today Americans are deeply invested in leisure. It assumes an almost sacred significance in our personal lives and is widely acknowledged as an indicator of the economic health of the nation itself. Yet leisure has not always enjoyed such widespread consensus. In this course we will turn our attention to a moment when rancor about leisure permeated American communities, homes and especially the pages of newspapers and magazines.

This is a research seminar that uses leisure to explore American life between 1880 and 1945. It was precisely in this moment that working Americans began to enjoy increasing amounts of spare time. Leisure itself changed, too, in this period. Commercial forces overhauled the kinds of leisure activities that were available. By the early twentieth century new kinds of amusements such as movie theaters and dance halls enjoyed increasing appeal in towns and cities throughout the country. These spaces nurtured a set of outlooks, identities and modes of social interaction we have come to associate with modern life.

HIST 398-004: Global Cities and Boom Towns

"Global Cities and Boom Towns" is the capstone course for History majors, but it is open to other students, space permitting. The first part of the course entails a number of readings in modern urban history as well as methodological approaches to assessing primary sources. The remaining portion of the course is dedicated to guiding students toward the completion of a 20-25 page paper, of their own design, based on primary sources. At the end of the class, students will have the option of publishing their work on the class's website.

Past projects have focused on an American-American jazz club owner in Paris after World War I; the rise of an anti-Chinese political party in San Francisco in the mid-19th century; the cultural wonderings of a US diplomat in early 20th century Seoul; the racial politics of "slum" clearance that preceded the construction of New York's Central Park; and the local racial and class dynamics in Tuskegee, Alabama that informed white supremacist gerrymandering efforts

HIST 398-005: South Africa's Freedom Struggle

The end of apartheid in South Africa stands out as one of the most stunning events of the twentieth century. This class investigates how it happened. Potential research topics might include (but are not limited to) the experiences of South African liberation leaders in exile, the role of institutions such as the United Nations, the significance of international sports boycotts against South Africa, and the activism of US university students pushing for divestment from apartheid South Africa. A remarkable set of digital archives will make this research possible.

HIST 398-007: Travel Writing

Imagine you are a British gentleman of the 19th century. You have just settled into your comfy club chair at home with a pipe in hand, ready to digest the latest edition of travel reports from Borneo. Or perhaps you are a schoolchild in America in the 1950s. The latest National Geographic has just arrived in your mailbox, and you eagerly pore over its glossy pages. In either instance, you are probably reading travel writing in order to learn more about foreign lands and peoples, whether to be entertained, edified, informed, titillated or transported.

In this historical research seminar, we will be turning the tables on these scenarios. Instead of reading travel writing at its most obvious level to learn more about foreign lands and peoples, we will be analyzing these works to discover more about the concerns and preoccupations of their 19th and 20th century American and European authors and readers, by asking a series of questions: How, why and in what modes have Westerners written about foreign lands and

HIST 438H.001 | Medieval Masculinities, 500-1200

TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Marcus Bull. Enrollment = 24.

This course examines and assesses the multifaceted constructions of masculinity to be found in numerous sources for the history of western European society between the beginning of the Middle Ages and c.1200. Although 'masculinity' is a post-medieval coinage, it is an extremely useful tool for understanding fundamental aspects of medieval culture such as gender relations, male self-fashioning, homosocial bonding, family structures, and violence. The main emphasis will be on the aristocracy of medieval Europe because they dominate the surviving sources; but we will also be able to study other social groups such as monks, clerics, and the inhabitants of towns. The course will comprise a series of in-depth case-studies, mostly drawn from written sources of diverse types including chronicles, epic song, and romance. We will also consider aspects of the visual record, such as manuscript illumination and the Bayeux Tapestry. Students will be strongly encouraged to range across disciplinary boundaries and to be ambitious in the conceptual and methodological toolkit that they develop. Masculinity is an emerging important field in medieval studies; this course is therefore an opportunity to participate in and

This course is designed to supplement knowledge obtained through the traditional pre-medical curriculum in order to enhance students' development as health care providers. It has five objectives:

- 1) To introduce students to non-biological factors that affect the health of individuals and society. Understanding the social situation of your patient, including environmental, financial and familial factors, is important for the effective practice of medicine. Just to give one example of the importance of understanding these factors: studies have shown that patients do not take up to one third of medications that are prescribed and implement only a small portion of lifestyle changes (e.g. dietary changes or smoking cessation). Unfortunately, physicians tend to focus on what happens in their offices and on treating only the biological factors contributing to disease. A better understanding of a patient's social situation is necessary if the therapies that are discussed in the physician's office are to be implemented once the patient goes home.
- 2) To provide students with an overview of changes in the delivery of medical care. The traditional fee-based model in which physicians in private practice (generally either self-employed or part of a small group) get paid for performing specific services is being supplanted by systems in which

HNRS 390.001 | Current Challenges in Criminal Justice

M, 2:00 pm - 4:30 pm. Instructor(s): John Rubin. Enrollment = 20.

We will consider current challenges facing, and sometimes created, by the criminal justice system. We will look at criminal justice policies and practices in North Carolina and the U.S. generally and explore their effectiveness and impact, including their impact on people accused of a crime. Each class or sequence of classes will examine a different set of issues. Do poor people have equal access to justice? Is policing nondiscriminatory? How should we treat people who have mental health problems and commit crimes? How well can people resume their lives after their involvement with the criminal justice system? We will explore these topics through a combination of readings, class discussions, guest lectures, and extra credit opportunities. The course will culminate in student-led presentations on topics of the students' choosing.

HNRS 390.002 | Slavery and the University

T, 2:00 pm - 4:30 pm. Instructor(s): James Leloudis. Enrollment = 18.

Across the country, colleges and universities are wrestling with the legacies of slavery on their campuses. This is painful history that we must acknowledge and come to terms with, particularly if we are to fulfill the promise of a public university. I serve as a co-chair of the task force appointed by Chancellor Folt to research, document, and teach a full and inclusive account of Carolina's past. This course is designed to contribute to that work.

This course will be somewhat unconventional, in that we will spend most of our class sessions in the University Archives, the North Carolina Collection, and the Southern Historical Collection (all located in Wilson Library) working on research. University historian Cecelia Moore, History doctoral student Brian Fennessy, and I will be on hand to coach and assist you in developing fruitful lines of inquiry, identifying sources, discerning patterns of evidentiary significance, and framing historical insights.

HNRS 390.003 | Narrative and Medicine

M, 2:00 pm - 4:30 pm. Instructor(s): Terry Holt. Enrollment = 20.

This seminar explores the role of narrative in medicine from two sides: the patient's experience of illness, and the experience of caring for the sick. As a writing workshop, this course offers students a supportive environment in which to explore their own experiences and refine their writing skills.

Pandemic conditions permitting, it provides an opportunity for service work in a variety of clinical settings, in which students will have a chance to participate in medical care. Taught by a clinician-writer with years of experience in medical care, professional publication, and workshop instruction, this course offers a rare opportunity to learn from a highly skilled professional engaged in the central concerns of his work.

TITLE: "Says Who?" Climate Research and the Pursuit of Truth

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR; FC-KNOWING

COURSE DESCRIPTION

From battles in the courtroom to disputes in the comments section, scientific authority and its role in policy and practice are under increasing scrutiny. In 2021, more than 20% of adults in the United States were estimated to have little or no confidence in scientists and medical doctors. While distrust of research and academic institutions may seem like a uniquely modern issue, it is rooted in a broader history of anti-intellectualism, the generalized suspicion and mistrust of intellectuals and experts. In fact, debates over the nature of truth and whose truth is considered fact have persisted since antiquity. This course will introduce students to different theories of knowledge (e.g., positivism, constructivism, critical theory) and examine how each

LING 101H.001 | Introduction to Language
MWF, 11:15 am - 12:05 pm. Instructor(s): Jamillah Rodriguez. Enrollment = 24.

This course provides an introduction to the field of linguistics, which can be defined as the scientific study of language. Throughout the semester, we will examine a number of subfields which make up the core of contemporary linguistic research. These include syntax (the study of sentence structure), morphology (the study of word formation), phonetics and phonology (the study of speech sounds and sound systems), historical linguistics, sociolinguistics (the study of language in society), language acquisition, and language and the mind.

1. Prerequisite: Cumulative GPA of 3.000 or higher.
2. Registration for Honors Carolina students may be completed online according to each student's enrollment appointment date and continues through April 20, after which students should visit the Honors Carolina office (225 Graham Memorial) in person to register or wait list.
