FIRST-YEAR LAUNCH SECTION

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-LAUNCH, FC-QUANT

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Only first-year students (and transfer students who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC) can enroll in this class. If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

MATH 231H.01F | Calculus of Functions of One Variable I
MWF, 11:15 am - 12:05 pm; Recitation: T, 3:30 pm - 4:20 pm. Instructor(s): Ivan Cherednik. Enrollment = 35.
Math 231 is designed to provide a detailed introduction to the fundamental ideas of calculus. It does not assume any prior calculus knowledge, but the student is expected to be proficient working with functions and their graphs as well as manipulating variable expressions and solving equations using algebra.
This is the Honors section of Math 231. It offers a more demanding and deeper treatment than the regular sections as well as more involved applications. There will be more emphasis on understanding theory than in other sections, and students will be expected to understand and reproduce proofs of theorems and formulas. In addition, this section will cover extra topics, including the epsilon-delta definition of limit. Applications will be more involved and will sometimes involve real data. Homework will be more challenging, with more emphasis on creative problem solving and less emphasis on drill. Students will be expected to complete a final project.

MATH 233H.001 | Calculus of Functions of Several Variables

MWF, 12:20 pm - 1:10 pm; Recitation: R, 3:30 pm - 4:20 pm. Instructor(s): Alexander Varchenko. Enrollment = 35.

Level: This is the Honors section of MATH 233. It offers a more demanding and deeper treatment than the regular sections. For example, there will be more emphasis on understanding theory than in other sections. Topics: Vectors in three dimensional space. Dot products and cross products and their applications. Functions of two and three variables. Polar and spherical coordinates. Graphs and contours. Multivariable calculus: partial derivatives, gradient. Curves in space. Surfaces: normal vector, tangent plane. Maxima and minima. Lagrange multipliers. Double and triple definite integrals, line integrals, Green's theorem.

PREREQUISITE: AT LEAST A B+ IN MATH 232 AT UNC OR A 5 ON THE BC CALCULUS EXAM.

To register for this course, you should let Professor Sawon know your name and PID at the first class session. Note that registering for MATH294 is entirely optional: you don't have to register for MATH294 to participate in these sessions and/or the competitions. In particular, if you don't anticipate attending every week, it would be better not to register. Please let me know by email (sawon@email.unc.edu) if you want to participate and are unable to attend the first session.
Math 294 will be held in Phillips 330, the Math Lounge, Fall 2023.

MATH 381H.001 | Discrete Math

MWF, 1:25 pm - 2:15 pm. Instructor(s): Mark McCombs. Enrollment = 35.

Logic and proofs, Sets and Functions, Number theory, Induction, Counting, Discrete probability, and Relations (Chapters 1,2,4,5,6,7 and 9 from Rosen's Discrete Mathematics text).

This is the honors section of math 381. The usual course topics will be treated in a deeper and more demanding manner than in the regular sections. In particular, we will go through strategies for proofs very carefully (Sections 1.7 and 1.8, plus other material from the instructor).

PREREQUISITE: MATH 232 OR 283.

Mark McCombs is a Teaching Professor of Mathematics. He earned his B.S., M.S., and M.A.T. degrees from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He

This is a required course for first-year MTSC graduate students. Students gain knowledge and learn key skillsets outside of their technical course work needed for success in their PhD program and beyond. MTSC711 follows on the topics learned in MTSC710 to broaden the professional development of materials science PhD students. Students work to develop an Individual Development Plan, to understand the variety of career paths available for PhD-holders, and to practice research presentations.

Grading status: H/P/L/F.

MTSC710 seminar series meets in the APS conference room, Murray Hall #1127

GR3

This is a required course for all Materials Science students in fall and spring semesters of years 2-5 of their doctoral program. The course tracks attendance at the required APS departmental seminars. Attending departmental seminars is an important component of training for MTSC doctoral students. Engaging in the seminars will help students gain a working knowledge of a variety of research areas important to their doctoral research.

Grading status: Pass/Fail.

GR3

This course covers the physical fundamentals of material science with an in-depth discussion of structure formation in soft and hard materials and how structure determines material mechanical, electrical, thermal, and optical properties. Topics include amorphous and crystal structures, defects, dislocation theory, thermodynamics and phase diagrams, diffusion, interfaces and microstructures, solidification, and theory of phase transformation.

Please see email communication from the professor about which classroom to report to. This class is partially taught in both Phillips 335 & Hill Hall 107. WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Only first-year students (and transfer students who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC) can enroll in this class. If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

TITLE: Music and Women's Rights

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR; FC-POWER; RESEARCH

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This seminar is about the protest songs and history of the First and Second Waves of American feminism, from the Seneca Falls Convention in 1848 where women declared their equality with men and called for women's right to vote to the passage of Roe v. Wade and the Equal Rights Amendment in the 1970s. Issues for discussion include the intersectionality of women's rights and civil rights movements.

In this course we consider the relationship between two concepts; music and politics; broadly, in search of ways in which they elucidate each other as well as resist pairing. The class provides an overview of the major theoretical issues the pairing raises as well as diverse case studies that underscore the range of historical and geographical contexts in which professional musicians, activists, politicians, and civilians have engaged these concerns.

 PHIL 101H.001 | Introduction to Main Problems in Philosophy
 MW, 3:35 pm - 4:50 pm. Instructor(s): James Pryor. Enrollment = 24.

This course will be an introduction to philosophy in the analytic tradition, by focusing on a few representative issues:

1. How can we tell whether animals and future computers have "minds" --- that is, their own thoughts, experiences, ambitions, self-awareness, and so on --- or whether they're instead just mindless automata?
2. Relations between minds, brains, and machines: Are your mind and body made of different stuffs? If a machine duplicates the neural structure of your brain, would it have the same thoughts and other mental states that you have?

PHIL 220H.001 | 17th and 18th Century Western Philosophy

TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Markus Kohl. Enrollment = 24.

This course is an introduction to major themes and figures in early modern (17th and 18th century) Western philosophy. At the same time, it is an introduction to topics and debates that have proved to be of lasting interests, which still pose central challenges for our attempts to understand who we are, what the external (corporeal) world is, and what connection there is between the human mind and the outside world.

We will study the doctrines of five or (time permitting) six philosophers whose thought has had a great lasting impact on subsequent philosophy and on subsequent intellectual developments more generally: Descartes, Locke, Berkeley, Hume, Kant, and (time permitting) Spinoza. We will focus our attention mostly on the answers that these philosophers gave to crucial questions in theoretical philosophy (metaphysics and epistemology) such as the following: Can we prove that there is a real world outside the mind, or could we always be dreaming (or be living in the Matrix) for all that we can tell? Is the mind identical to the brain, or are mind and body two different substances? Can we prove that God exists? How can we know mathematical truths about numbers or

PHIL 230H.001 | Mind, Matter, and Metaphysics: the Philosophy of Experience and Reality

TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Carla Merino-Rajme. Enrollment = 24.

This course covers several topics in metaphysics. These include: Can we be certain that there is an external world? How is your conscious mind related to your brain? Can we change the past? What is the nature of time? Can we travel in time? What is a person? How do persons persist? Could you be teletransported? Do people have free will? In this course, students will be introduced to the methods of contemporary philosophy.

Carla Merino-Rajme joined the Philosophy Department in the summer of 2015. She completed her PhD in Philosophy in Princeton University, where she wrote a dissertation on the experience of time. She has research interests in philosophy of mind and metaphysics.

Only first-year students (and transfer students who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC) can enroll in this class. If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

FIRST-YEAR LAUNCH SECTION

This Lecture will be combined with other PHYS 118 sections, and it will be taught as a large survey class. PHYS 118-401, the Lab associated with this class, is the FY-Launch section. Please be sure to enroll in this class, PHYS 118-02F, and the corresponding lab, PHYS 118-401, to fulfill the FY-LAUNCH requirement.

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-LAUNCH; FC-NATSCI or FC-QUANT

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Only first-year students (and transfer students who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC) can enroll in this class. If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog

PHYS 118H.02F Introductory Calculus-based Mechanics and Relativity MWF, 9:05 am - 9:55 am. Instructor(s): . Enrollment = 35. PHYS118 is a calculus-based introduction to Classical Mechanics. The course covers motion and kinematics in one and two dimensions, forces and Newton's laws of motion, work-energy and conservation laws, frames of reference and Einstein's theory of special relativity, rigid-body rotations, rolling, static equilibrium, and oscillations and waves. The honors version of this course is differentiated by requiring a final project and presentation. Early in the semester, each honors student will identify a project of interest and submit the idea to the instructor, who will evaluate and discuss changes or other details with the student to finalize the curriculum for the semester. Suitable project choices will integrate multiple topics covered in the course and will require a detailed description and a brief literature review of relevant papers. A computational aspect is highly encouraged.

PLCY 076H.001 | Global Health Policy

TR, 3:30 pm - 4:45 pm. Instructor(s): Benjamin Meier. Enrollment = 24.

Global health policy impacts the health and well being of individuals and peoples throughout the world. Many determinants of health operate at a global level, and many national policies, social practices, and individual health behaviors are structured by global forces. Concern for the spread of infectious diseases, increasing rates of chronic diseases and the effectiveness of health systems to provide quality care are among the daunting challenges to health policy makers.

With profound social, political and economic changes rapidly challenging global health, the aim of this course in Global Health Policy is to provide students with a variety of opportunities to understand the epidemiologic trends in world health, the institutions of global health governance, and the effects of globalization on global and national health policy.

This course provides an introduction to the relationship between international relations, global health policy and public health outcomes. The focus of

TITLE: Ethics and Food Policy

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR; FC-VALUES

COURSE DESCRIPTION

If you eat, you are impacted by federal, state, and local food policies. These policies are, in turn, shaped by values. Over the course of the semester, we examine the values that underpin different approaches to food policy, including food labeling, nutrition assistance, agricultural subsidies, and responses to food deserts.

PLCY 101H.001 | Making American Public Policy

MWF, 10:10 am - 11:00 am. Instructor(s): William Goldsmith. Enrollment = 24.

This course provides a general overview of the role of history in public policy, the policymaking process, and the substance of major domestic and global public policy challenges. It exposes students to the conceptual and analytical perspectives necessary for understanding and playing a direct role in policy making. This course will illuminate policy and political challenges in areas such as tax policy, social policy, education policy, health policy, foreign policy, and homeland security. We will explore the inherent tensions that emerge between good politics and good policy in a number of these substantive policy areas. Honors students will pay particular attention to the role of politicians (elected officials) and experts (policy researchers) in the making of public policy. Students will work to develop their skills in effective oral and written communication, including making oral arguments, presenting research findings, and writing for policy audiences.

PLCY 210H.001 | Policy Innovation and Analysis

MW, 9:05 am - 10:20 am. Instructor(s): Fenaba Addo. Enrollment = 24.

This course will introduce students to public policy as a discipline and the policy analysis process. The process involves defining a public problem and understanding stakeholders and their perspectives; describing public problems with quantitative data; understanding market failures and other rationales for government involvement; selecting criteria relevant for decision-making; constructing policy alternatives; evaluating the different alternatives against the stated policy criteria; and making and communicating a recommendation. This is a research-based and communication-intensive course, which requires the completion of a policy brief in several, iterative steps. The course incorporates current events and relevant case studies to motivate and explain the policy analysis process.

POLI 100H.001 | Introduction to Government in the United States

TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Jason Roberts. Enrollment = 24.

This course is an introduction to American political institutions, political behavior, and the policy process. In this course we will discuss the origins of the current governmental system in America, the structure of the U.S. government, and how theories of American government apply to current events and problems the government and citizens face today. At the end of the course students should have a greater understanding of government, political differences, and how to be an engaged citizen in our democracy.

Jason M. Roberts is a Professor of Political Science and a member of the Orange Co., NC Board of Elections. His research centers on American Political

POLI 150H.001 | International Relations and World Politics
TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Mark Crescenzi. Enrollment = 28.

This course introduces you to world politics from an analytical, social scientific perspective. The goal is to understand why and how political actors in the international arena make decisions that affect us all. Why do nations fight? Why do they cooperate, both economically and politically? Why do we have such a hard time solving the puzzle of global warming, or poverty? How can we understand the mechanisms that encourage cooperation over conflict in world politics? This course goes beyond learning how others have studied problems in world politics. Our goal is to demonstrate how theories of world politics can be constructed and applied, and, in turn, to have you engage in this process of application using cases drawn from recent and current events.

POLI 233H.001 | Comparative Politics of the Middle East

MW, 3:35 pm - 4:50 pm. Instructor(s): Ashley Anderson. Enrollment = 24.

This course is designed as an introduction to contemporary Middle Eastern politics for advanced undergraduates. The goal is to provide students with the historical background and theoretical tools to address key questions about the region: 1) How has Western colonialism shaped contemporary state development? 2) How do patterns of authoritarian rule differ in the region and why do they persist? 3) Why do some Middle Eastern countries suffer from sectarian and political violence while others do not? 4) What accounts for the region's current economic underdevelopment? 5) Why have Islamist parties emerged as prominent opposition forces within some countries? And finally, 6) Why have citizens across the region risen up to try to overthrow dictators and authoritarian regimes?

To explore these questions, the course combines systematic analytical approaches to big questions with concrete knowledge of events and developments in

POLI 252H.01S | International Organizations and Global Issues
TBA, TBA. Instructor(s): Robert Jenkins. Enrollment = 15.
Program: Burch Field Research Seminar on Transatlantic Security in Brussels & London
Title: International Organizations & Global Issues
Dates: August 13 - December 9, 2023

This course explores the institutional makeup, political processes, and impact of international organizations on global politics. International organizations (IOs) have become increasingly important in resolving a wide range of global problems and are key players in the current system of global governance. IOs reflect state efforts to bring more order to the anarchic world in which they operate. This course offers a historical perspective and explores a number of approaches to understanding IOs. The thread that ties the diverse themes together is the issue of state sovereignty and how

POLI 255H.001 | International Migration

W, 2:30 pm - 5:00 pm. Instructor(s): Niklaus Steiner. Enrollment = 21.

While the global movement of products, services, ideas, and information is increasingly free, the movement of people across borders remains tightly controlled by governments. This control over international migration is a highly contested issue, and it is complicated by the fact that never before have so many people had the ability to move from one country to another while at the same time governments have never had so much power to control this movement. This class explores the moral, economic, political, and cultural dimensions of this movement across international borders. The class is based on discussions (as opposed to lectures) and tackles thorny questions like: do we have an obligation to let poor people into our rich country? what constitutes persecution? how do foreigners affect national identity? how should citizenship be allocated? We will pay particular attention to the distinction between migrants who move voluntarily (immigrants) and those who are forced to flee (refugees) - is this an important distinction to make, and does one group deserve admission more than the other? No prior knowledge or experience is needed; instead, students need to be ready to dig deep into all sides of migration issues through

POLI 433H.001 | Politics of the European Union

TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Gary Marks. Enrollment = 24.

This course engages the European Union and the political causes and consequences of Brexit, nationalism, political polarization, and Trumpism. What kind of polity is emerging at the European level? How is European integration contested? Is European integration the beginning of the end of the national state in western Europe, or will states harness the process within their current institutional structures? In this class, students will have an opportunity to analyze the character and dynamics of European integration and the current economic crisis by reading speeches of contemporaries, evaluating alternative theories of European integration, and by using additional resources.

This course has a double purpose: to think critically about one of the world's most important experiments in governance--the European Union and to probe the future shape of politics in the West and the wider world.

The course will critically assess the emergence of the Europe Union, Brexit, the future of the EU, the rise of nationalism, political polarization, and the

POLI 490.001- Urban Politics in the United States

This course provides an introduction to the politics of American cities. Topics covered include the economics and history of urban agglomerations, local governments' place in the American federal system, the role of race and immigration in how parties and coalitions govern, whether local governments are responsive to voters, and the role cities play in shaping housing, education, climate, and criminal justice policy.

To be taught by Alexander Sahn.

Seats in 400 level POLI courses are reserved for majors only during Wave I of the registration period (Mar 27-Apr 7). There is no Waitlist option during Wave I.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Only first-year students (and transfer students who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC) can enroll in this class. If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

PSYC 058H.001 | The Psychology of Mental States and Language Use
 TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Jennifer Arnold. Enrollment = 24.
 As adults we constantly make judgments about other people's beliefs, desires, goals, knowledge, and intentions from evidence like eye gaze and inferences from their words and actions. These judgments together can be called mindreading, or theory of mind (where 'theory' refers to the theory someone might hold about another's mental state, not a scientific theory). This information is known to guide some aspects of language use -- for example, you wouldn't ask someone to hand you 'that book' if they don't know it exists. But sometimes you might ignore what someone else does or does not know -- for instance asking someone for 'the red book' when that person is sitting in front of two red books. This course examines how children, adults, and individuals with autism infer other people's mental states, and how they use it to guide decisions during speaking and understanding. This seminar will follow a discussion format.

PPSYC 245H.001 | Psychopathology

MWF, 12:20 pm - 1:10 pm. Instructor(s): Charlie Wiss. Enrollment = 24.

: This course will focus on providing an overview of many of the major psychological disorders, with a focus on adult disorders. The major objectives of this course will be for the students to:

- Gain mastery of the diagnostic criteria and identifying features that are associated with each disorder
- Identify and distinguish the disorders
- Have a thorough understanding of the etiologic theories associated with each disorder.
- Understand the major treatment approaches associated with each disorder.

The course will utilize a variety of formats including lectures, discussions, videos, and group presentations. We will attempt to move beyond the definitions of the disorders toward a more nuanced understanding of how they manifest in real life and how modern social, cultural, and biological forces

Course Title: PSYC 490 Quantitative Methods for Making Causal Inferences

Course Description:

Understanding cause-effect relationships is at the heart of all sciences including psychology. More broadly, we encounter causal claims in news stories, advertisements, and everyday conversations. However, numerous challenges face us when we attempt causal inferences and there are good reasons to carefully examine these claims. Confounding variables, sample selection bias, measurement error, and internal and external validity are among the issues. The goal of this course is to introduce the threats to causal inference as well as proposed solutions. Contemporary approaches to causal inferences such as potential outcomes, directed acyclic graphs (DAGs), and structural equation models (SEMs) will be introduced. The course will consider experimental, quasiexperimental, and nonexperimental designs and analyze empirical data.

Instructor(s): Dan Bauer. Enrollment = 24. Goals of the course: Evaluating hypotheses through the statistical analysis of empirical data is one of the cornerstones of modern science. In this course, we examine how the General Linear Model (GLM), including the multiple regression model, is used in psychological science. Goals of the course are for you to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> -Gain an understanding of how to specify GLMs that are both appropriate for your data and that provide direct tests of theoretically motivated hypotheses. -Become competent in fitting GLMs within the statistical program R. -Become a thoughtful and critical consumer of psychological research using the GLM

TITLE: September 11: Origins, Consequences, and Where Do We Go from Here

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This first-year seminar will reflect upon the September 11 terrorist attacks in the United States, exploring how the terrorist attacks occurred and why the U.S. intelligence community and policymakers failed to anticipate and prevent them as well as the subsequent effects on the United States, the Middle East, and the world. The instructor, a former intelligence analyst, will lead students in discussions and in-class exercises to encourage critical analysis of the implications of terrorism, particularly on United States national security. A variety of assignments will require students to assess the causes and results of American national security decisions and alternative decisions that might have been made, supported with research and evidence.

PWAD 101H.001 | Making American Public Policy

MWF, 10:10 am - 11:00 am. Instructor(s): William Goldsmith. Enrollment = 2.

This course provides a general overview of the role of history in public policy, the policymaking process, and the substance of major domestic and global public policy challenges. It exposes students to the conceptual and analytical perspectives necessary for understanding and playing a direct role in policy making. This course will illuminate policy and political challenges in areas such as tax policy, social policy, education policy, health policy, foreign policy, and homeland security. We will explore the inherent tensions that emerge between good politics and good policy in a number of these substantive policy areas. Honors students will pay particular attention to the role of politicians (elected officials) and experts (policy researchers) in the making of public policy. Students will work to develop their skills in effective oral and written communication, including making oral arguments, presenting research findings, and writing for policy audiences.

PWAD 150H.001 | International Relations and World Politics

TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Mark Crescenzi. Enrollment = 2.

This course introduces you to world politics from an analytical, social scientific perspective. The goal is to understand why and how political actors in the international arena make decisions that affect us all. Why do nations fight? Why do they cooperate, both economically and politically? Why do we have such a hard time solving the puzzle of global warming, or poverty? How can we understand the mechanisms that encourage cooperation over conflict in world politics? This course goes beyond learning how others have studied problems in world politics. Our goal is to demonstrate how theories of world politics can be constructed and applied, and, in turn, to have you engage in this process of application using cases drawn from recent and current events.

TITLE: Jewish Spain: History and Culture Across the Hispanic World

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR; FC-AESTH

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This seminar explores the history and culture of Jews in the Golden Age of medieval Spain, as well as how modern Hispanic cultures have interpreted and reimagined this historical past. We will explore how this fascination with Hispanic Jews overlaps with a variety of topics such as national identity, anti-Semitism, liberal democracy, colonialism, exile, and Holocaust memory, among others. Throughout this journey across time and space, we will think about the relevance of Jewish Spain, to our present by working with a diverse group of cultural products that includes poetry, paintings, film, memoirs, and novels. The texts we will study come from numerous Hispanic cultures: Spain, Argentina, Mexico, Puerto Rico, Guatemala, and Cuba. No knowledge of Spanish or

ROML 055H.001 | Writing with an Accent: Latino Literature and Culture

TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Oswaldo Estrada. Enrollment = 24.

This seminar focuses on the literary production of Latinos living in the U.S. Using a variety of materials (essays, documentaries, films, music) and English-language texts (novels, short stories, plays, poetry) we will examine works by Chicano, Peruvian-American, Nuyoricano, Central-American-American, Dominican, and Cuban-American writers. Topics to be discussed include: Latino or Hispanic? What's in a Name?; The Politics of Bilingualism; The Search for Home in Migrant, Rural, and Urban Environments; The Many Faces of Machismo; Religion and Spirituality in Latino Communities; Forms of Prejudice and Discrimination; Music as a Cultural Bridge. All readings will be in English, though knowledge of Spanish is desirable.

TITLE: Iberian Identities

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR

COURSE DESCRIPTION

Throughout the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, numerous Iberian intellectuals promoted the idea that Portugal and Spain could combine efforts to overcome the crises that plagued the Peninsula. The Iberian intelligentsia came up with theories whose aim was to bring Portugal, Spain, and their ex-colonies closer together. In this course, students will become familiar with the contemporary histories of Portugal and Spain and with Iberian literature. Students will study culture from perspectives that may inspire them to reflect upon concepts such as decadence and identity. Furthermore, we

SPAN 261H.001 | Advanced Spanish in Context
MWF, 11:15 am - 12:05 pm. Instructor(s): Helene M de Fays. Enrollment = 11.
Spanish 261H is a fifth semester course that uses a variety of texts (literature, movies, newspaper articles, speeches, and essays) as a basis for reviewing grammatical concepts, developing writing competency, refining analytical skills, and improving overall communication abilities in Spanish. Through work on authentic and original texts, this course continues to focus on refining the students' language skills, as well as further their developing critical analytical capacities. With the readings and films, students will explore their socio-historical context and analyze the application of different linguistic structures as tools employed to create meaning and convey a message. Students will be expected to do a significant amount of reading and writing in Spanish 261H.

Note: This course is the prerequisite for all the Spanish minors and majors at UNC. Students may not receive credit for both SPAN 261 and SPAN 267. This

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Only first-year students (and transfer students who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC) can enroll in this class. If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

WGST 101H.001 | Introduction to Women's and Gender Studies

TR, 12:30 pm - 1:45 pm. Instructor(s): Karen Booth. Enrollment = 15.

In this survey course, we will explore some of the questions and topics at the heart of the study of and the struggle to end gender-based oppression (sexism or patriarchy). We will consider how it is that social or cultural constructions such as ¿masculinity,¿ ¿femininity,¿ ¿heterosexuality,¿ and ¿homosexuality¿ come to seem natural, biological, or innate and how and why feminists have challenged and continue to challenge these constructs.

Some of the main themes or ideas we will emphasize through lectures, readings, discussions, films, assignments, and the inevitable final exam are:

1. gender is a collective, institutionalized social construction or ideology, not a biological fact or an individual free choice;

W: 3:30 PM - 6:20 PM (McColl 2550)

This is a year-long course that begins in the Fall semester. The emphasis of this course will be on the decisions that must be made by, and/or for, the ultimate investor, and the analytic tools and empirical evidence that can help inform such decisions. The objective of this course is two-fold: first, to provide financial analysts with the analytical skills needed to aid such investors; and second, to help individual investors utilize and evaluate the services offered by analysts. Students will apply the principles and techniques of Investment Management by operating as financial planners (analysts) for the Kenan-Flagler Financial Planners. This course will engage students in managing a real portfolio student managed fund.

ENROLLMENT REQUIRES APPLICATION AND PERMISSION OF KFBS.

We are looking forward to an exciting semester in the Fall 2023 Current Issues in Law & Medicine course, but we need to address some logistical issues:

- As indicated on the course schedule, this class will meet on Tuesdays from 10:15 to 11:55 a.m. at the Medical School. Allow 20-30 minutes each way for transportation. There is no student parking available.
- Due to the differences between the Law School and Medical School schedules, it may be necessary for Law students to attend at least one additional class session (date/time still to be worked out) to ensure we meet requirements for class time.
- Because this course is cross-listed with the Medical School, our normal drop/add rules do not apply. The Medical School does not permit MD students to drop the course; for fairness reasons, we are adopting the same rule for JD students. After August 15 you will not be permitted to drop this course. WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Only first-year students (and transfer students who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC) can enroll in this class. If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

Non-SILS students are allowed to register for INLS 151, 201 and 161. However, seats are prioritized according to year (freshman, sophomore, and junior). If you receive a `reserve capacity not met; error message for an open course (green dot), it means that all seats reserved for your year are currently filled. You must add yourself to the waitlist in Connect Carolina, as we will not be keeping an internal waitlist. We will enroll from the waitlist as seats become

Non-SILS students are allowed to register for INLS 151, 201 and 161. However, seats are prioritized according to year (freshman, sophomore, and junior). If you receive a `reserve capacity not met; error message for an open course (green dot), it means that all seats reserved for your year are currently filled. You must add yourself to the waitlist in Connect Carolina, as we will not be keeping an internal waitlist. We will enroll from the waitlist as seats become available. Seniors are not allowed to enroll in these 3 courses.

*Undergraduates can only be on one waitlist at a time and 17 hours is the max during early registration.

We will begin to fill available seats from the waitlist in early August. If you are not waitlisted, you will not be allowed to enroll.

Our online course is hosted through Canvas. I will teach 2 lecture sections this semester: section 001 - lectures will be online, asynchronous; section 002 - lectures will be online asynchronous AND we will meet 1x per week for optional discussion in person. Discussion work is ungraded, optional, and interactive (gain additional practice working on problems together or discussing topics introduced during the recorded videos...and I'll get to address your questions face-to-face). Location may vary, in the past we've met in Carrington Hall or Genome Sciences Building. For both sections: all exams, quizzes and assignments remain online.

I will teach 2 lab sections this semester. Register for either lab section, they are equivalent. Both lab sections will be taught online, asynchronous. The lab is required; you will receive 1 combined grade for lab + lecture (same as this semester).

Our online course is hosted through Canvas. I will teach 2 lecture sections this semester: section 001 - lectures will be online, asynchronous; section 002 - lectures will be online asynchronous AND we will meet 1x per week for optional discussion in person. Discussion work is ungraded, optional, and interactive (gain additional practice working on problems together or discussing topics introduced during the recorded videos...and I'll get to address your questions face-to-face). Location may vary, in the past we've met in Carrington Hall or Genome Sciences Building. For both sections: all exams, quizzes and assignments remain online.

I will teach 2 lab sections this semester. Register for either lab section, they are equivalent. Both lab sections will be taught online, asynchronous. The lab is required; you will receive 1 combined grade for lab + lecture (same as this semester).

Bios 500H is an introductory course in probability and statistical inference designed for the background and needs of BSPH Biostatistics students.

Topics include survey sampling, descriptive statistics, design of experiments, correlation, probability, confidence intervals, tests of hypotheses, 2-way tables, chi-square distribution, power, ANOVA, non-parametric tests, and linear regression. A small class size will allow opportunity for more in-depth treatment of biostatistics topics.

In addition to traditional introductory statistical concepts, students explore current controversies, ethical questions, and common errors in the medical literature through a variety of readings and a project. Students will be able to produce straight-forward statistical graphs and conduct commonly used analyses using SAS software. Emphasis will be placed on understanding the underlying mathematical concepts in biostatistics, developing SAS programming skills and interpreting results clearly for a non-statistical audience in writing.

During early registration, only BIOS students will be allowed to register. If you are a NON-BIOS student interested in this course, please add yourself to the waitlist in Connect Carolina - you do not need to contact the instructor. Because this is a required course for some incoming biostatistics students who register in the summer, we will not have any information about the availability of seats until just before classes start. We may not be able to take students off this waitlist until mid-August, even though there appear to be open seats in Connect Carolina. We enroll students with this priority: biostatistics students, students in the SPH, students outside the SPH, so the waitlist priority may not reflect the order that students are removed off the waitlist. While we do our best to accommodate interested students, in past semesters, students with lower priority were not able to enroll in the course. *Undergraduates can only be on one waitlist at a time.

During early registration, only BIOS students will be allowed to register. If you are a NON-BIOS student interested in this course, please add yourself to the waitlist in Connect Carolina - you do not need to contact the instructor. Because this is a required course for some incoming biostatistics students who register in the summer, we will not have any information about the availability of seats until just before classes start. We may not be able to take students off this waitlist until mid-August, even though there appear to be open seats in Connect Carolina. We enroll students with this priority: biostatistics students, students in the SPH, students outside the SPH, so the waitlist priority may not reflect the order that students are removed off the waitlist. While we do our best to accommodate interested students, in past semesters, students with lower priority were not able to enroll in the course. *Undergraduates can only be on one waitlist at a time.

TITLE: Environment-ECUIPP Lab: Connecting with Communities through Environmental Research for Public Health

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR

DESCRIPTION

This course is an entry into an undergraduate learning community organized by the Gillings School of Global Public Health, Department of Environmental Science and Engineering. The ECUIPP Lab (Environmentally-Engaged Communities and Undergraduate students Investigating for Public health Protection) is a creative community of students, faculty members and practice partners. Students in ENVR 89-001 will become members of the Environment-ECUIPP Lab. Over the course of the semester they will design and conduct research that addresses a pressing environmental health issue in a local community. Students will work with the local community partner to develop a research question and use the resources of the ECUIPP Lab and the Department of Environmental Sciences and Course Description: This course provides an introduction to the field of computational toxicology and exposure science. Students will be equipped to understand databases and tools that can more efficiently evaluate chemical-biological and chemical-disease relationships. Students will be expected to use excel and R/Rstudio, and run script as either a gentle `welcome` to the coding environment, or advanced script to further their baseline knowledge. The course is designed for students in public health, toxicology, exposure science, chemistry, epidemiology, and related disciplines.

Prerequisites: Basic knowledge of environmental science, chemistry, and biology is required, familiarity with excel and basic data software, and students are required to have some level of experience with R/Rstudio. Students must be willing to run R/Rstudio and other example coding packages, with start-up script provided for, and build upon their baseline skillset in computational analyses. We are welcoming to both wet and dry lab students, and will accommodate varying levels of familiarity with coding.
