WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

TITLE: Afro-Latinxs in the U.S.

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR; FC-GLOBAL or FC-POWER

COURSE DESCRIPTION

What does it mean to be both racially Black and ethnically Latino in the U.S.? This discussion-based course will look at the history, culture, experiences, political struggles, and social dilemmas of ¿Afro-Latina/o/xs¿: African-descended peoples from Latin America and the Spanish-speaking Caribbean who reside in the U.S. The erasure of these communities, along with their struggles for well-being, prosperity, belonging, and visibility, will be explored. The class provides an opportunity for a deeper understanding of the legacies of the transatlantic slave trade, ethno-nationalism, and U.S. foreign-policy, and their connection to contemporary issues of migration, sexism, inequality, and anti-blackness. In-depth conversations about the politics of ¿race¿ and ¿ethnicity¿

TITLE: Women of the Black Atlantic

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR; FC-GLOBAL

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course examines constructions of gender and individual and collective responses to developing systems of inequality in the Atlantic world shaped by sex, race, and class. Students analyze and compare how African, European, and American societies constructed the category of ¿woman¿ and the constraints and liberties these constructions imposed.

Course participants document and examine how concepts of race and processes of racialization impacted experience for African and African descent women

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

This class is cross-listed with NUTRI 715 / ANTH 175

This course introduces students to a wide range of topics covering food studies taught by faculty across the UNC campus as well as from Duke, NC State and outside of an academic setting. The overall objective of this course is to provide an overview of how individuals, communities, and societies produce, distribute, and eat food. This inter-disciplinary course will examine cultural, political, economic, environmental, and geographic approaches to food within local, national, and global contexts. Topics include food politics, food in the arts, land use, how we eat through time, culture and religious food values as well as a basic understanding of physiological concepts of nutrition. Students will explore:

In his memoir Black Boy, Richard Wright wrote that he left the south as a young man not to "forget the south, but so that some day [he] might understand it." In this course, students will engage the ways that thinkers across different genres and mediums-- novelists, visual artists, directors, activists, and others-- have reckoned with this challenge to "understand the south," both in the south and from elsewhere. In doing so, we will look at the ways that authors and artists invoke the south's varied natural landscapes in articulating regional and local identity in order to think more broadly about what we mean when we talk about "the south."

AMST 255: DIFFERENCE AND POWER IN AMERICAN CULTURE(S)

This course examines a broad range of topics (race, class, sexuality, gender, and/or disability for example) that focus on power in the United States. We will move across a range of interdisciplinary sources and historical moments to understand who and what we are to one another in our national landscape. Students in the course will pose problems and questions that require systematic thinking about evidence, argument and uncertainty. Students are to consider the content of the course in the context of human difference between and within societies, encountering the range of debate in the field.

This course is cross-listed with ASIA 691H

AMST 691H is a research and methods course designed to help senior American Studies and Asian Studies majors research and write an honors thesis. Our objectives are to review some major issues in Asian and American Studies and interdisciplinary area studies in general, investigate how each student's research topic fits into these larger debates, review the writing conventions of the appropriate discipline and field, and help students produce innovative, insightful, and articulate research essays. EE.

Students who complete and successfully defend an honors thesis will graduate with honors. American Studies and Asian Studies students will also participate in the senior colloquium in the spring, where each student will give a short presentation summarizing their thesis research. Completed theses will be entered into the Carolina Digital Repository.

Students writing an honors thesis will be enrolled in AMST 691H and ASIA 691H by the department once their thesis applications have been approved.

TOPIC: Environmental Humanities

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR

DESCRIPTION:

The contemporary moment in Earth's history is increasingly defined by environmental changes and threats, many of which lead to the loss and displacement of human, animal, and plant lives and fundamental alterations to the landscape. While scientific research and technological innovation are critical to addressing such ecological challenges, the environmental humanities can offer equally vital insights by examining how cultural values, artistic expressions, and ethical perspectives have formed and been formed by humans' relationships with the environment. Through discussions, activities, and projects, this course examines the relevance and power of the humanities in comprehending, researching, and responding to environmental issues. By consulting artists,

 ANTH 053H.001 | Darwin's Dangerous Idea
 TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Paul Leslie. Enrollment = 24.

Darwin's theory of evolution by natural selection is central to one of the most profound revolutions in the history of thought, generating stunning insights but also some misunderstanding and tragic abuse. This seminar aims to provide a clear understanding of how natural selection works, and how it doesn't. We will examine objections to the theory; how the environmental and health problems we face today reflect processes of natural selection in the past and now; and recent attempts to understand why we get sick, how we respond to disease, why we get old, when and why we fight or help one another, why we choose mates the way we do, and more. Class sessions will feature a mix of lecture and discussion of concepts and issues. Students will also engage in small group projects; cooperative explorations of problems raised in class or in the readings and/or designing mini research projects.

FIRST YEAR STUDENTS ONLY.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

TITLE: Walking in the World: The Anthropology of Moving, Knowing, and Creating

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR; FC-KNOWING

DESCRIPTION:

We learn about the world as we move through it. In moving, we change the world around us and we are transformed by our experiences. However, we are not free to move wherever we wish. We live with boundaries, some only dimly understood. And yet, sometimes we come together to challenge these boundaries and struggle to create something new.

In this class, students will learn how anthropologists create research projects to explore these questions. While our focus will be on cultural

This ANTH 490 course will familiarize upper-level undergraduates with systems thinking and directed change within the realms of research or problem-solving that anthropology degree holders might encounter in the public sector, private sector, or third sector. Systems thinking involves identifying and comprehending interconnections among individuals, groups, organizations, and locales. It requires identifying and remedying persistent obstacles hindering the attainment of efficacy, equity, or well-being within a given system. Systems thinking equips change agents to implement appropriate interventions.

TITLE: Tree, Timber, Totem
NOTE: This course has been listed as APPL 89.001 in the previous terms.

COURSE DESCRIPTION

Trees, through their biology, meaning and uses, create an arc of understanding that spans what it means to be human. Ultimately, we will explore the meaning of trees and wood and why we seek happiness in nature, cherish wood and the creation of objects of wood. Tree: What is a tree from a biological perspective? How do they represent a complex community and play a vital role in life on the planet? Timber: What is the economy of wood internationally and in the state of NC? What are biophysical and material properties of trees that allow them to grow so large and be so useful to human society? Totem: Why do we respond emotionally to wood and choose it as a material in our lives and surroundings? How do we design and create objects of meaning from wood? We will walk in the woods, meet wood people from across the state and country and learn woodworking with projects of the students; design and creation.

TITLE: Convergent Research: Solving the Grand Engineering Challenges of the Future

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR

DESCRIPTION

Convergence research focuses on addressing complex problems in science, engineering, and society. Today's and tomorrow's grand challenges will not be solved by one discipline, but by the integration of knowledge, methods, and expertise from across various disciplines.

This first-year seminar will introduce students to the new scientific language of convergence research. Through surveying the grand challenges of engineering, we will learn how through pursuing a common research challenge, experts from various fields intermix their knowledge, theories, methods, data, Engineers help to design and build solutions to the world's problems. This course will explore some of the fundamental skills and tools in engineering. You will get experience using engineering tools, and you will also develop a mindset so that you can "learn how to learn" because technology changes rapidly and the tools that you use today may be obsolete in 20 years. There will be an emphasis on developing strong professional skills, including work in a group setting and effectively communicating your efforts.

In addition, a goal of this class is to help you develop an entrepreneurial mindset so that you will understand the bigger picture. For example, while it may be easy to develop an engineering solution to a problem, what are the economic and ethical considerations of various solutions? These concepts are important to help engineers build a better world.

This will be an "active learning" class in which we spend much of our class time working. For example, we will write computer programs to model and simulate Seats in this class are reserved for each class year. When the registration window opens for your class year, a limited number of seats will become available on a first-come first-served basis. If these seats are already taken when you try to sign up, we encourage you to sign up for the waitlist. In past years, many students have been able to enroll from the waitlist.

Students work in flexible, interdisciplinary teams to assess opportunities, brainstorm, and prototype solutions. Design thinking and physical prototyping skills are developed through fast-paced, iterative exercises in a variety of contexts and environments.

What kind of material is Sponge Bob made of? What about the slime of his pet snail, Gary? We are taught that there are three states of matter: solid, gas, and liquid. However, in our daily lives we encounter materials that challenge this simple description such as foams, pastes, gels, soap, and rubber, as well as our skin, hair, nails, and cells. These are Soft Materials and in this course we will learn about their special properties and how to describe them mathematically. This class is an active one, everyone participates and everyone learns from and helps one another. We will use various in-class activities to make the class more engaging. We will discuss, take quizzes, and do presentations. We will also evaluate each other's homework. Be prepared to come to class and participate in these activities! The technical material that you will learn will provide you with a valuable skillset. In addition, a goal of this class is to help you develop an entrepreneurial mindset so that you will understand the bigger picture; draw connections between the material in this class and what you have learned in other classes; recognize opportunities; and learn from mistakes to create value for yourself and others.

An ideal research experience provides students with practical experience in a research lab, performing work that is relevant to their UNC education. The research internship should develop and enhance the students' professional skill sets and involve experiences that allow students to have responsibility for results that are of value to the research laboratory.

Research interns are mentored by a faculty member and other members of their lab. The implementation, and evaluation of the internship are a collaborative effort between the student and their research mentor. If the research mentor is not a member of the APS faculty, then the students should also have an APS faculty advisor. Oversight is also provided by the APS Research and Internship Coordinator and/or Director of Undergraduate Studies (the same person may be serving both of these roles). Internships are typically 150 hours in duration (10 hours per week during an academic semester). However, internship time frames can be flexible to match the needs and interest of the student with the opportunities offered by the research lab.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

Instructor(s): Carol Magee. Enrollment = 24. When and how do you encounter visual images? When and where do you look at art? Are you aware of your body when you do so? In what ways? How do you move? What sounds are you aware of? How do you sit, stand, hold your phone, look at your computer, flip through your social media accounts? How do you move through a museum to look at a work of art? How does that impact your experience of that artwork? Does the space of the museum itself impact your experience? How do you stand or sit when you arrive at what you want to see? How do, or should, you account for these things when you are interpreting the work? Conventionally, art historical interpretation is grounded in what we see in a work of art, and how what we see connects to what we know about the world. Indeed, the work of art history is the telling of stories about meaning in artworks. This work is built upon the interconnections of what is visually evident in the artwork, conversations (with artists, collectors, archivists), interpretation (of documents, records, historical accounts, etc.), analysis and synthesis of these materials, and revelation (of previously unknown or long forgotten facts, new insights, new artworks). Yet all of these activities

This course will explore the visual culture of England during the reigns of the Tudors and early Stuarts. King Henry VIII, Queen Elizabeth I, and King Charles I are some of the best known and most notorious monarchs in history and their representation in portraits, printed books, and sculptural monuments will be amongst the types of object under discussion here. We will also examine the palaces they constructed for their magnificent lifestyles. While in London we will have many opportunities to see these works of art and architecture in person with visits to the National Portrait Gallery, the National

ARTH 285H.001 | Art Since 1960

TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Cary Levine. Enrollment = 24.

This course will explore some of the major trends in American and European art since 1960. It will spotlight select artists whose work offers particularly intriguing, challenging, or problematic examples of contemporary art practice. We will focus on close readings of artworks and texts and consider how the questions and debates raised by them relate to various historical, social, cultural and political contexts. This course will present contemporary art and discourse as diverse, contradictory, contested, and unresolved.

Cary Levine specializes in contemporary art. He received his Ph.D. from the Graduate Center, City University of New York, and was a recipient of a J. Paul

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

ARTS 105H.001 | Basic Photography

TR, 8:00 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Martin Wannam. Enrollment = 16.

In ARTS 105H Basic Photography you will be introduced to the basic techniques of digital photography. Both technical and conceptual applications of image-making will be explored. This course seeks to develop an understanding of the mechanics, visual language, and history of the photographic medium. Specifically, we will work with digital photographic practices, learning the fundamentals of DSLR cameras, Adobe editing software such as Photoshop and Bridge, inkjet printing, and basic digital workflow and file management. In conjunction with your studio practice, you will also learn about the medium's rich history.

Assignments will be supplemented with readings, films, library, and museum visits. Over the course of the semester, you will be exposed to a variety of examples of historical and contemporary photography. In the classroom you will be exposed to technical demonstrations, lectures, discussions, critiques,

Print I is a media-based studio art foundation course. It is designed to introduce core concepts of 2-D image-making through concepts and techniques of printmaking. In other words, the course focuses on developing visual literacy with specific attention to image-making strategies afforded by print media such as layering, reversal, multiple (editions, variant and modular) that make this approach to art-making unique. Questions arising from this inquiry include:

- What does working with a matrix or set of matrices allow? What sorts of images and ideas does this make possible?
- Why make art in serial or multiple forms?
- How is thinking for print different than/same as other media?
- How can the tools and methods of printmaking shape the development of an idea, both visually and conceptually?

This class delves into the convergence of traditional drawing and technology by harnessing the capabilities of powerful drawing apps like Adobe Fresco and others, utilizing the graphic tablet as a primary tool to replicate natural mediums. Beyond technical proficiency, the course critically examines how new media perpetually influences traditional studio practices, providing valuable insights into contemporary methods of artistic production. Please note that the class exclusively covers iPad versions of drawing applications, excluding mobile apps like Procreate for iPad or Clip Studio for Android. Owning a personal iPad is not a prerequisite for enrollment.

ARTS 409H.001 | Art & Science: Merging Printmaking and Biology

MW, 11:15 am - 2:00 pm. Instructor(s): Bob Goldstein / Beth Grabowski. Enrollment = 14.

ARTS409H and BIOL409L together form a course that brings art majors and science majors together to learn theory and practical skills in both art and science, and to make use of this learning to make artworks using a variety of printmaking techniques. Students in this course learn some specific biological concepts and practical lab skills, and then use these and their own interests to guide, gather and generate visual information (frequently photographic) and pose questions that arise from scientific looking. These images, processes and ideas then become the point of departure for printmaking projects.

In the print studio, work in the class includes both analog and digital skills. The course introduces several printmaking processes including relief (large-scale wood cut and/or letterpress) stencil printing (screen-printing and/or pochoir) and approaches to photo-printmaking (photogravure, cyanotype). Technically, students learn how to translate imagery by hand and digitally (especially using Photoshop), make printing matrices (block, plate, or screen),

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

 ASIA 283H.001 | Chairman Mao's China in World History
 MW, 3:35 pm - 4:50 pm. Instructor(s): Michael Tsin. Enrollment = 4.

In the last few years there have been many reports on how Maoism is making a comeback in China, an assertion that often draws on a rather crude comparison between the country's founding leader, Mao Zedong, and its current president, Xi Jinping. Yet, at the same time, commentators are also often quick to emphasize that in many ways the China of today is virtually unrecognizable from the country once ruled by Mao. Indeed, it is common to portray the early years of the People's Republic of China (PRC) from 1949 to the late 1970s as a period characterized by disastrous policies and China's isolation from the rest of the world. China only became a major player on the world stage, we are often told, when it rejoined the global order from the reform era of the 1980s onwards. From that perspective, then, contemporary China is a clear departure from its Maoist predecessor. How are we to reconcile these two seemingly contradictory portrayals of China nowadays?

CHIN 247H.001 | Indigenous Spiritualities in Literatures of China and Taiwan

TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am . Instructor(s): Robin Visser. Enrollment = 12.

This course examines spiritual motifs in literatures (in English translation) by Indigenous, ethnic minority writers in China and Taiwan. We will read fiction, essays, and poetry by Tibetan, Mongol, Uyghur, Kazakh, Bunun, Tao, Hui, Yi, and Wa writers. These works express spiritual principles from a wide variety of beliefs and cosmologies, including Tibetan and Mongolian Buddhism, Islam, Shamanism, Animism, and Christianity. Rapidly changing relations between humans and their environments due to climate change and green governance policies mean that communities which once flourished in coastal regions as fisher people, in grasslands as mobile nomads, in mountainous regions as foragers, are often resettled into state-owned pastures, farms, towns, and cities. As forced assimilation threatens native languages and cultural heritage, many Indigenous writers function as ʘpriests of culture,ʘ providing spiritual inspiration to their readers by lyrically evoking powers beyond the human.

TITLE: Behavior and the Brain

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR

DESCRIPTION

Neuroscience is a profoundly integrative field spanning electrical impulses, biochemicals, cells, organs, animals, and our complex behaviors. In this class, we will discuss neurons and how they are connected, the brain, sensory and motor systems, neural plasticity, and cognition. In short, you will learn how thinking works!

FIRST-YEAR LAUNCH SECTION

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for

The genome encodes the information necessary and sufficient for life. Understanding how genomes encodes life requires decoding. Similarly, being a successful biologist requires decoding knowledge for various audiences via science communication. Students will take part in bioinformatics research through a collaborative genome annotation project. Using these results as a foundation, students will fulfill a CommBeyond requirement by learning and practicing science communication skills to share their work. Students will hone their science literacy and practice science writing, figure design, and crafting messages for broad audiences.

BIOL 290H.001 | Intro to Programming for Biogeography
TR, 3:30 pm - 4:45 pm. Instructor(s): Xiao Feng. Enrollment = 24 (limit to 12 initially). 3 credit hours
Biogeography is a discipline that studies the geographic distribution of living organisms across the globe. In the era of big data, biogeographic research is experiencing a surge in data volume and diversity, including vast datasets from citizen science initiatives and high-resolution environmental data from satellites. Conventional tools with graphical interfaces often struggle to manage this influx of data efficiently. Consequently, there is a growing need for data literacy, particularly in programming, to effectively analyze biogeographic big data.

This course offers an introduction to fundamental computational concepts using Python, a versatile object-oriented scripting language. Students will learn to process and analyze biological and environmental data commonly utilized in biogeographic research. Emphasizing an open-source environment, the course equips students with essential tools for conducting reproducible research. By cultivating data literacy skills highly sought after in biology and various

BIOL 395H - Honors Research in Biology

The purpose of BIOL 395H is to provide honors students with independent research experience, while working in a research lab on a question of current biological interest. Under the supervision of a faculty member, and with contribution of research postdoctoral fellows, students will learn more than just basic research techniques. They will learn how to start to think as scientists, raising hypotheses and finding ways to test them in an empirical manner. In addition to the research performed in the lab, honors students will meet with each other on a weekly basis, discuss their research and develop their scientific thinking through reading and discussing primary scientific literature.

FOR BIOLOGY MAJORS ONLY. PREVIOUS ENROLLMENT IN BIOL 201 OR 202 REQUIRED. DEPARTMENT OF BIOLOGY PERMISSION REQUIRED

BIOL 395H may be taken for no more than six graded academic credits. Three to five credit hours of research may be counted as one lecture course toward Students who take 395H meet for an hour and a half each week (in addition to the research that they do in their own labs) and work on research-related skills. We run workshops on literature search, you will discuss and analyze primary scientific literature, you will practice in scientific writing, and the icing on the cake- you will learn how to present your own research.

You do not have to be an honors student to enroll in 395H (you do have to have a GPA of 3.00 or higher).

BIOL 409L.401 | Art & Science: Merging Printmaking and Biology

M, 11:15 am - 2:00 pm. Instructor(s): Bob Goldstein / Beth Grabowski. Enrollment = 14.

ARTS409H and BIOL409L together form a course that brings art majors and science majors together to learn theory and practical skills in both art and science, and to make use of this learning to make artworks using a variety of printmaking techniques. Students in this course learn some specific biological concepts and practical lab skills, and then use these and their own interests to guide, gather and generate visual information (frequently photographic) and pose questions that arise from scientific looking. These images, processes and ideas then become the point of departure for printmaking projects.

In the print studio, work in the class includes both analog and digital skills. The course introduces several printmaking processes including relief (large-scale wood cut and/or letterpress), stencil printing (screen-printing and/or pochoir), intaglio (photogravure, drypoint, collagraph) and other alternative photo-printmaking (cyanotype). Technically, students learn how to translate imagery by hand and digitally (especially using Photoshop), make

Email professors Dr Goldstein (bobg@unc.edu) and Dr Grabowski (beth.grabowski@unc.edu) with your PID number, major and why you want to take this exciting class/lab combo.

In the Advanced Topics in Biology-Neural Engineering course, we will delve into modern engineering methods for mapping brain structures, measuring, interpreting, and manipulating neural activities to understand brain functions and behaviors. The course will cover cutting-edge neural engineering technologies, including various microscopy techniques, neural activity sensors, fundamental concepts of computational neuroscience, and tools for neural manipulation. Prerequisites for enrollment include completion of college-level mathematics courses. Prospective students should demonstrate a keen interest in using engineering approaches to understand the complexities of brain functions.

BIOL 514H.001 | Ecological and Evolutionary Developmental Biology.

MW, 3:35 pm - 4:50 pm. Instructor(s): David Pfennig. Enrollment = 24.
A quiet revolution has transformed biology, a revolution triggered by new empirical and theoretical breakthroughs that have called into question our longstanding assumptions about the mechanisms of development, inheritance, and evolution. These unexpected breakthroughs have spawned a new field that seeks to understand how environments interact with developing organisms (including humans!) to shape their features, affect their health, and impact their evolution. In this combined lecture and discussion course, you will learn how this new field is transforming biology, gain experience interpreting the scientific literature, plan scientific research, and integrate ideas from across diverse disciplines of biology, from genetics to ecology.

PREREQUISITES: BIOL 201, BIOL 202, AND BIOL 205 (or consent of the instructor).

BIOL 543H.001 | Cardiovascular Biology

TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Victoria Bautch. Enrollment = 24.

An experimental approach to understanding cardiovascular development, function, and disease. This class will cover development of the cardiovascular system (heart and blood vasculature), and cardiovascular function as linked to selected diseases. We will cover the molecular, genetic, cell biological, and biochemical techniques used to study the cardiovascular system, with an emphasis on the genes and signaling pathways involved in cardiovascular development and disease. It is assumed that students will have some familiarity with animal development and cell and molecular biology. This course will focus deeply on selected aspects of cardiovascular development, function and disease rather than taking a superficial approach to the subject. To facilitate a deeper understanding of the scientific method, some topics will be paired with a research paper from the primary literature.

Pre-Requisite: BIOL 205 or BIOL 103, BIOL 104, BIOL 220, and BIOL 240; or instructor permission for students lacking a prerequisite.

This course will survey and delve into the modern experimental and conceptual approaches of using the zebrafish as a model organism to investigate a wide range of important vertebrate biology for advancement of scientific knowledge, technology, and possible biomedical applications. The focus will be on the use of genetic and imaging approaches in a living vertebrate animal to study human-relevant biology and diseases.

We are currently amid a revolution in biology and medicine that centers on the ability to alter and probe transcriptomes and genomes at will using new molecular genome editing techniques and other biotech approaches. This revolution has spread across all model systems and has even begun to change the definition of what a model system is. In addition, these technologies are changing the way we treat disease, alter agriculturally important species, influence populations of organisms in our environment, and even ourselves.

The goal of this course is to familiarize students with genome editing technology and look at recent advances and applications for genome editing and associated biotechnology. This course is intended for advanced undergraduates and graduate students with an interest in biotechnology. The course will meet weekly in an interactive seminar format at the time above. Each week, we will discuss the background, methods, and results of a paper from the recent scientific literature regarding genome editing and associated technologies and interpret these in the light of current knowledge. Students will practice reading and interpreting scientific papers, and present information to the group. Each week, one participant will have primary responsibility for presenting Meets in Coker 119

TITLE: Medicinal Plants - Bridging Chemistry, Medicine, and Native American Culture

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR; FC-POWER

COURSE DESCRIPTION

There is an increased interest in medicinal plants as alternatives to modern medicine are sought. Native Americans have been using herbal medicine for centuries. Through readings, interactive lectures, guest speakers and field trips, we will explore the chemistry and biological effects of some medicinal plants and their role in Native American culture. This course will begin with an overview of chemical structures and molecular properties. Then we will focus on medicinal plants, herbal medicine and Native American culture. Student teams will prepare final papers and presentations that focus on medicinal plants used by Native Americans.

Use Waitlists on Connect Carolina until the registration period is complete.

- Only waitlist one section! (If you add to the waitlist for multiple sections, the registration system will see a conflict (enrolling in the same course twice) and you will not be enrolled if a seat becomes available. The person behind you on the waitlist will claim the seat.

- Check to see if other sections at the same day and time have a waitlist. Some sections have no waitlist, while others are 4 deep. If there is another section at the day and time you need, it is better to be first on the waitlist.

- Be persistent, seats do open up.

If you are not enrolled in a lab section by the first week of classes: The chemistry undergraduate lab courses use an electronic waitlist to fill any empty seats that open during the week of check-in Three midterm exams will be given in class on the following Wednesdays at 6:00pm - 8:30pm (Eastern Time) on the following Wednesdays: 9/18/24, 10/9/24, 11/13/24. Course expectations are that you will take all midterms.

EXAM MAKE-UP REQUESTS & ALTERNATIVE EXAM POLICY:

Course expectations are that you will be in attendance for every exam, and that you work your schedule around these exam times. However, in the case of serious illness, family emergency, religious holiday, class conflict, or varsity athletic travel there is an alternative exam time provided at 6:30 am (Eastern Time) on the Thursday morning following the scheduled exam.

You cannot show up to the alternative exam time unless you have received approval from your instructor prior to the official make-up exam date. The following provides guidelines for requesting the alternative exam time.

FIRST-YEAR LAUNCH SECTION

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for

CHEM 102H.001 | Advanced General Descriptive Chemistry

TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Todd Austell. Enrollment = 24.

CHEM 102H is recommended by the Chemistry Department for STEM majors who have excelled in their pre-college chemistry classwork and who have an interest in pursuing chemistry or another STEM field as an academic major at UNC. The topics covered have been identified by the Department of Chemistry faculty as essential for success in and a good foundation for more advanced study in chemistry and other areas of the basic and applied sciences. The textbook, lectures and course work require a willingness to accept rigorous academic challenges and a solid high school background in algebra, coordinate geometry, and trigonometry. Differential and integral calculus will be used only where necessary in derivations and with explanation. In addition to reviewing important general chemistry concepts necessary for success at the next course level, students in CHEM 102H will receive training in scientific literature queries, will give short oral presentations of class topics, will attend scientific seminars both inside and outside of class time and will carry out one or two faculty interviews..

· Only waitlist one section! (If you add to the waitlist for multiple sections, the registration system will see a conflict (enrolling in the same course twice) and you will not be enrolled if a seat becomes available. The person behind you on the waitlist will claim the seat.

· Check to see if other sections at the same day and time have a waitlist. Some sections have no waitlist, while others are 4 deep. If there is another section at the day and time you need, it is better to be first on the waitlist.

· Be persistent, seats do open up.

If you are not enrolled in a lab section by the first week of classes: The chemistry undergraduate lab courses use an electronic waitlist to fill any empty seats that open during the week of check-in

CHEM 241H.001 | Modern Analytical Methods for Separation and Characterization

TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Erin Baker. Enrollment = 24.

Analytical separations, chromatographic methods, acid-base equilibria and titrations, fundamentals of electrochemistry, bioinformatics

To gain an understanding of the fundamental principles and modern techniques of chemical analyses including spectrochemical, electrochemical, volumetric and chromatographic methods. Additionally, explore modern chemical instrumentation and evaluate different methods for data interpretation.

If you would like to be considered for a seat in 241H, please send Dr. Baker a request by email to erinmsb@unc.edu. Please include your overall GPA, grades in Chemistry courses at UNC, and a brief statement regarding your interest/motivation in taking the Honors version of this course.

- Only waitlist one section! (If you add to the waitlist for multiple sections, the registration system will see a conflict (enrolling in the same course twice) and you will not be enrolled if a seat becomes available. The person behind you on the waitlist will claim the seat.
- Check to see if other sections at the same day and time have a waitlist. Some sections have no waitlist, while others are 4 deep. If there is another section at the day and time you need, it is better to be first on the waitlist.
- Be persistent, seats do open up.

If you are not enrolled in a lab section by the first week of classes: The chemistry undergraduate lab courses use an electronic waitlist to fill any empty seats that open during the week of check-in

CHEM 261H.001 | Honors Organic Chemistry I

TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Marcey Waters. Enrollment = 25.

Molecular structure and its determination by modern physical methods, correlation between structure and reactivity and the theoretical basis for these relationships; classification of "reaction types" exhibited by organic molecules using as examples molecules of biological importance. This course will be similar to CHEM 261 with a greater emphasis on class discussion and some use of computer modeling techniques.

PREREQUISITES: CHEM 102 OR CHEM 102H. GPA OF 3.600 OR HIGHER.
DEPARTMENT OF CHEMISTRY CONSENT REQUIRED. EMAIL chemus@unc.edu.

Professor Waters's research interests are at the interface of organic chemistry and biochemistry. The overarching goal of her research is to design CHEM 261H.001 | Honors Organic Chemistry I

TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Sidney Malik Wilkerson-Hill. Enrollment = 24.

Molecular structure of organic compounds, and the correlation between structure and reactivity including the theoretical basis for these relationships; classification of "reaction types" exhibited by organic molecules using as examples molecules of biological importance. This course will be similar to CHEM 261 with a greater emphasis on class discussion, problem-solving, and the investigation of organic chemistry research at UNC.

PREREQUISITES: CHEM 102 OR CHEM 102H. GPA OF 3.600 OR HIGHER.

Use Waitlists on Connect Carolina until the registration period is complete.

- Only waitlist one section! (If you add to the waitlist for multiple sections, the registration system will see a conflict (enrolling in the same course twice) and you will not be enrolled if a seat becomes available. The person behind you on the waitlist will claim the seat.
- Check to see if other sections at the same day and time have a waitlist. Some sections have no waitlist, while others are 4 deep. If there is another section at the day and time you need, it is better to be first on the waitlist.
- Be persistent, seats do open up.

If you are not enrolled in a lab section by the first week of classes: The chemistry undergraduate lab courses use an electronic waitlist to fill any empty seats that open during the week of check-in

 CLAS 051H.001 | Greek Drama on Page & Stage
 MWF, 9:05 am - 9:55 am. Instructor(s): Alexander Duncan. Enrollment = 24.

Taking a participatory approach to ancient Greek drama, this course pairs readings from three Athenian playwrights (Aeschylus, Euripides, and Aristophanes) with performance-oriented activities and scholarship.

At its most traditional, this course surveys the historical and cultural context of the so-called 'classical' Athens of the fifth-century BCE, emphasizing the political, religious, and aesthetic forces that gave rise to humankind's first recorded theater. More innovatively, this course probes the dual nature of theater, its distinct but intertwined existences as codified script and socially-embedded performance, through sustained investigations of some of its most influential texts and their modern reception in a global context with case studies focused on post-Apartheid South African and 21st-century Chicano

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

CCLAS 131H.001 | Classical Mythology

MWF, 2:30 pm - 3:20 pm ; Recitation: W, 12:20 pm - 1:10 pm. Instructor(s): Suzanne Lye. Enrollment = 24.

The purpose of this course is to introduce students to the myths of the ancient Greeks and Romans, the stories about gods, goddesses, and heroes that were told and retold over a period of centuries. The emphasis will be not simply on learning these stories, but on studying them in their historical context. How were they transmitted? What roles did they play in Greek and Roman culture? What can we learn from them about the way that the ancient Greeks and Romans understood the world around them? In our explorations we will concentrate on literary texts, especially epic and tragedy, but will also consider visual sources, especially vase painting and sculpture. As another way of exploring the significance of myth in ancient Greek and Roman society, we will also examine analogous phenomena in our own society.

Suzanne Lye is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Classics at the University of

CLAS 263H.001 | Athletics in the Greek and Roman World

MWF, 12:20 pm - 1:10 pm; Recitation: W, 2:30 pm - 3:20 pm. Instructor(s): Alexander Duncan. Enrollment = 24.

To talk about sport is to talk about society, both today and in antiquity. This course will inspect the cultures of ancient Greece and Rome, from the age of Homer to the end of the (Western) Roman Empire, through the lens of athletics. We will scrutinize the mechanics and logistics of ancient athletic events and take up larger questions of interpretation, considering sport within its religious, cultural, and political contexts. Adopting and adapting an extensive battery of theoretical approaches; economic, anthropological, poetic, political, sociological, etc. we will address such questions as the following: How do the ideals embodied in Greek and Roman sport relate to the myths and cultural practices of these societies? How were competitors, whether amateur or professional, rewarded and regarded by their societies? What ethical dilemmas did athletes face? Why were animals, slaves, and religious minorities subjected to blood-sport in Roman amphitheaters? Why did others volunteer to face the same fate? What legacies and lessons have ancient athletics left for the modern world?

CLAS 363H.001 | Latin and Greek Lyric Poetry in Translation

TR, 12:30 pm - 1:45 pm. Instructor(s): Patricia Rosenmeyer. Enrollment = 24.

This class will introduce you to the lyric poetry of ancient Greece and Rome, with an additional unit on the Song of Songs from the Hebrew Bible. Our focus will be on love poetry. Ideas of love and desire are culturally determined, reflecting assumptions often very different from our own. We will read a variety of poems in the context of their socio-historical settings, and address a range of issues including physical vs. spiritual love, cultural ideals of beauty, literary representations of gender roles and sexual preferences, and the dynamics of reception in literature. This course will be taught as a seminar, allowing for discussion and in-depth analysis of the primary sources (in translation). Students will write a total of 20 pages during the semester, including a creative group project for oral presentation and a final research paper. There are no prerequisites, but students may find that a basic knowledge of ancient Greek and Roman civilizations will be helpful to them in the class.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

TITLE: Paying Attention: The Art of Documentary

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR; FC-CREATE

COURSE DESCRIPTION

Paying attention to the world around us is foundational to our understanding of the people, behaviors, environments, and living species that co-exist alongside us. Attention fuels our curiosity, deepens our empathy, and invites us to step outside of ourselves. Representing what we pay attention to what we see and hear is the art and practice of documentary. At its essence, documentary is a document of what we observe and what we record. In this course, we will use video and sound recording along with the written word to document and then re-present what we are paying attention to. Throughout the course, students will strengthen their attention-paying capacities and learn how to refine their chosen methods of documentation. Class discussion, readings, film

Environmental Advocacy

This seminar introduces students to the foundations of environmental communication and environmental advocacy from both a theoretical and practical perspective. We'll learn about the history of environmental thinking and activism, explore the social construction of nature through discourse and the media, as well as gain an understanding of the role of environmental sciences in public discourse, law, and politics.

This course is OPEN TO ALL STUDENTS: Non- Majors and COMM Majors

This course examines the role of symbolic action, persuasion, and public speaking in the social construction/production of race and the perpetuation of racism as a system of domination. The course focuses on the voices of racially marginalized communities and anti-racist speech, representations of race that contribute to and challenge racism, and racialized public discourse regarding borders, national security, citizenship, and immigration.

Course descriptions:

This course will provide an introduction to the history and development of "Theory" as the foundation for much of the most interesting thinking and research in the humanities and social sciences. In the contemporary intellectual universe, "theory" provides a common language of concepts and methods that enable intellectuals and scholars investigating human social and everyday life to speak to one another-- across disciplines and geographies, comparable to the way statistics and experimentation function in the more traditional models of science (including some social science work).

"Theory" includes many of the major schools of modern and contemporary philosophy (that stand in opposition to what is often referred to as "analytic philosophy, " which often dominates Anglo-American philosophy departments); but it also includes other-- less traditionally "philosophical"--positions. At the same time, "theory" differs from "philosophy" in so far as it is interested in providing the foundation for more empirically oriented understandings of concrete instances of human relations, practices, etc. What philosophy and theory have in common is that they provide a set of tools--concepts, filters,

The overarching objective of COMM 702 is to introduce graduate teaching assistants to the practice and theory of teaching undergraduate students at UNC. The course will provide practical advice and tips about teaching. The beginning and middle of the course will focus on practical elements of teaching, such as people management (ie. navigating classroom relationships, classroom climate, and disruptive students), classroom management (ie. fostering class discussion, classroom activities, and lectures), and document management (ie. preparing syllabus, choosing reading assignments and grading). The final few weeks of the course encourages contemplation about the theory of teaching and the role of the professoriate in academe. Course content and class discussions are designed to encourage intellectually rigorous and personally meaningful conversations about our teaching and how our personal perspectives of teaching and learning influence our practices as teachers. We will read about and discuss different approaches to teaching, the enactment of communication instruction, and growing as a teacher. You will leave this course with materials designed to help you as a new teacher, such as a course syllabus, a lesson plan, and a draft of your statement of teaching philosophy.

Seminar: Media & Consumer Culture

This seminar looks to explore the historical shifts in how consumers are imagined and addressed by key stakeholders, from the nineteenth century through the twenty-first, with a particular focus on how entertainment, leisure, and advertising industries have redefined the consumer in relation to new technologies and platforms and changing sensibilities about what types of consumers have value and what makes acts of consumption valuable. Consumer culture is oft maligned as apolitical, inauthentic, passive, and a means of manipulating and distracting people from challenging systems of oppression and engaging in more meaningful cultural practices. While such critiques may have some merit, they are also deeply classist, exclusionary, treat people like dupes, and most importantly, ignore the complex ways in which the "consumer" is constructed and reconstituted within shifting political, economic, educational, industrial and cultural contexts, or how the structuring logics of consumer culture also afford consumers agency through which individual, social, and systemic constraints can be challenged (or, at least, acknowledged). The seminar will pay close attention to the ways consumer culture has been leveraged in the

 COMP 283H.001 | Discrete Structures

TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Jack Snoeyink. Enrollment = 24.

Underlying the many applications of computers in our daily life are discrete structures like Boolean logics, relations, finite state machines, graphs, and networks that have mathematical specifications. You can tell your parents that the primary purpose of this class is to introduce these discrete structures and the formal proof techniques that support the production, verification, and maintenance of correct software. In fact, many of these are familiar from puzzles and games: already in 1990 Super Mario World expects kids to immediately understand a finite state machine diagram. This is a language class: you will learn vocabulary and idioms of a language that is more precise and less ambiguous than the languages that we usually speak or write. With any new language, you may at first struggle to make yourself understood, but by frequent immersion and fearless practice you can become comfortable thinking and expressing yourself creatively in the language. Students pick up languages at different rates, so work to teach each other. All can gain fluency with effort and a willingness to make mistakes. And fluency will help all your computer science endeavors ; precise and unambiguous

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

DRAM 081H.001 | Staging America: The American Drama
TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Greg Kable. Enrollment = 24.

This seminar examines our national drama from its colonial origins to the present. Participants read plays and criticism, screen videos, engage in critical writing, and consider performance as related means of exploring the visions and revisions constituting American dramatic history. We will approach American drama as both a literary and commercial art form, and look to its history to provide a context for current American theater practice. Readings are chosen for their intrinsic merit and historical importance, but also for their treatment of key issues and events in American life. Our focus throughout will be on the forces that shaped the American drama as well as, in turn, that drama's ability to shed light on the national experience.

FIRST YEAR STUDENTS ONLY.

This course seeks to bridge the mind/body split so prevalent in Western European/North American theatrical practice. Come ready to move, to play, and to think about what it means to move and to play as part of an artistic practice.

Each week throughout the semester we will move between practice and theory. The two-hour Monday sessions will be an introduction to the basics of Okinawan Uechi-Ryu Karate, with Wednesday sessions dedicated to theoretical writings, plays, and films on the martial arts, mime, theatrical performance, movement for the theatre, and theatrical design drawing upon writers from across the globe.

Are you an actor interested in investigating how to be in the moment? A director who wants to explore how play in performance? A designer eager to envision the various components of bodies moving in space? A dramaturg desiring a deeper understanding of how meaning is created in performance? An activist yearning for ideas that lead the creation of community? Someone searching for an active meditative practice? If so, this section of DRAM 284 is for you!

The course will be taught by Adam Versényi who first performed as a dancer when he was 4 years old, began to perform as an actor when he was 9, and started

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

TITLE: Human Rights and Literature

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR

COURSE DESCRIPTION

In this class we will investigate the history of human rights from the perspective of literature. We will explore how rights are represented and narrated in novels such as Mary Shelley's Frankenstein and how founding declarations, famously, the Declaration of Independence (1776), the Declaration of the Rights of Man and Citizen (1789), and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (1948), rely on fictional structures. While attending to some of the more politically contentious issues involved with human rights, such as the claim that universal rights lack political and legal enforcement, we will also consider the following questions: how does fiction help articulate and represent claims to human rights? Why might a political philosopher or legal scholar turn to a

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR; FC-AESTH or FC-VALUES

COURSE DESCRIPTION

In this course students will explore the relationship between American novels and free speech. Paying particular attention to the ideas of rational deliberation and civil discourse, pillars of free speech in First Amendment doctrine, we will read landmark legal as well as key philosophical texts exploring the role of free speech in democracy. Our literary readings will center on portrayals of key themes related to free speech, both in novels written during the era in which the First Amendment became doctrine and in contemporary novels examining civil discourse. Questions and themes to be considered include creativity, curiosity, equality, and judgment. Readings by Plato, John Locke, David Hume, Matthew Arnold, I.A. Richards, John Stuart Mill, Robert

.Coding, algorithms, data visualization,these technological words may seem completely unrelated to fields of study such as Literature, Philosophy, History, and Art, but they actually play a key role in shaping culture, society, and even human thought today ; issues at the heart of the Humanities.

As a result, a new interdisciplinary area of study, known as Digital Humanities, has emerged to both explore the impact of technology on society and use new digital methods to analyze traditional materials in the Humanities, such as texts, objects, and archives. In English 105i: Writing in the Digital Humanities, we will explore this new area of study by completing three unit projects, each dedicated to learning a key digital method in the field and the types of composition and writing that result from it. Our central theme will be maps and mapping, with the idea that maps;as a ubiquitous and historical tool and process;resonate with the tools and processes afforded by new computational technologies.

We will learn how to write within this discipline and along the way we will try to answer the question: how do the humanities work with computers?

ENGL 132H.001 | Honors: Intro to Fiction Writing
TR, 12:30 pm - 1:45 pm. Instructor(s): Matthew O'Wain. Enrollment = 15.
This course is a collective, collaborative exploration of the techniques of fiction, through close reading and discussion of classic short stories to the writing of short exercises dealing with the elements of fiction (setting, characterization, dialogue, point of view, etc.) and, later in the term, one short story (2,000-5,000 words). There is a midterm examination. The class is a seminar, a workshop with both written and oral critiques of student works required, and students can expect a lively and encouraging atmosphere as we investigate and practice the imaginative craft of fiction writing.

FIRST YEAR HONORS CAROLINA STUDENTS ONLY.

ENGL 133H.001 | Honors: Intro to Poetry Writing

TR , 11:00 am - 12:15 pm . Instructor(s): Tyree Daye. Enrollment = 15.

In this class we'll be thinking about every aspect of the poem. What inspires us to write them, how do we start? And, most importantly, how can a deep understanding of poetic craft help us to make rigorous and muscular poems from the raw material of our lives and vision? We will look at the work of established poets to help us increase the power of our own. We will think about traditional forms as an invitation to our own urgent, necessary and deeply contemporary work. More than anything poetry is a conversation that's been happening over millennia. We will endeavor to find where we fit in and where and how we are blazing our own path. This is an Honors class so students will be expected to be actively engaged in their own work and the work of their peers. As such, each student will be paired with another member of the class as a Primary Reader. Primary Readers will write letters to each other throughout the term as means of thinking about how we talk (even at the beginning of our poetic lives) about the arc of another writer's poems and poetic pursuits. It will rock. We're in it together!

ENGL 225H.001 | Shakespeare

TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Mary Floyd-Wilson. Enrollment = 24.

How did genre (tragedy, comedy, romance, or history) shape the concerns of Shakespeare's plays? This class will read a range of Shakespeare's works to help us investigate a series of questions about his culture and society. What, for example, do comedies reveal about controversies concerning marriage or the status of gender roles? What do tragedies say about religious and cultural perceptions of the origins of evil? What do they suggest about current theories of governance? We will situate the plays within their historical contexts by reading them alongside social histories and non-dramatic primary texts (such as handbooks, popular pamphlets, ballads, and diaries). For each play we will also review some of the current critical debates, sorting through the controversies to form interesting and relevant research questions.

ENGL 238H.001 | 19th-Century British Novel

TR, 3:30 pm - 4:45 pm. Instructor(s): Jeanne Moskal. Enrollment = 24.

For us, Jane Austen has outshone and obscured the other British novelists writing during her lifetime (1775-1817). Yet Austen saw herself among a coterie of novelists, mostly women, who were then striving to elevate the long-disparaged genre of the novel. Early in her career, Austen critiqued the Gothic excesses of her predecessor Ann Radcliffe, but with time Austen saw common ground between herself and her 'sister' novelists. Together, they displayed 'the greatest powers of the mind' and 'the most thorough knowledge of human nature' in 'the best-chosen language'; in short, they were discovering the genre's potential to take their society's measure and to expose its limitations. In this course, we will examine Austen's literary conversation with her 'sister' novelists of the Romantic period by reading Austen's Northanger Abbey and Pride & Prejudice alongside Mary Wollstonecraft's Maria; or, the Wrongs of Woman; Ann Radcliffe's The Mysteries of Udolpho; Sydney Owenson's The Wild Irish Girl; Mary Shelley's Frankenstein and Valperga; and the anonymously published The Woman of Color: a Tale. Our goal is to discern both Austen's uniqueness among her contemporaries and the concerns they share.

 ENGL 265H.001 | Literature and Race, Literature and Ethnicity

TR , 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Elyse Crystall. Enrollment = 24.

This course takes as its primary objects of analysis novels, poetry, and visual and filmic texts; historical and government documents; and personal memoir, music, journalism, and interviews, in order to examine how race and ethnicity, or maybe our perceptions of race and ethnicity, shape our current world. This, in turn, should enable us to imagine other ways of seeing and being. We will consider how race and ethnicity, among many other identity signifiers, are structured by institutions and social relations and informed by cultural beliefs. Once we understand how we participate in and interact with these structures, how we are defined by them, how we create them, we are positioned to critique and change them.

The sub-title (how does it feel to be a problem?) comes from W.E.B. Du Bois's 1903 foundational text The Souls of Black Folk where, among other important insights, critiques, and analyses, he predicted that the "color line" would be the issue of the twentieth century. Perhaps it is the question for the

ENGL 268H.001 | Medicine, Literature, and Culture

, ; Recitation: , OR , . Instructor(s): . Enrollment = 40.

This course provides an introduction to Health Humanities, an interdisciplinary field that combines methods and topics from literary studies, healthcare, and the human sciences. We'll read novels, screen films, learn about illnesses and treatments, and hear expert speakers as we investigate the importance of narrative in the time of high-tech medicine. We'll pay close attention to how ideas about sickness have changed over time and across cultures. Topics will include the clinician-patient relationship, medical detection, the rise of psychiatry, racism and social determinants of health, epidemics and the outbreak narrative, and the quest for immortality.

Prerequisites: This course welcomes students from all fields, especially humanities majors and those interested in careers in healthcare and health affairs.

ENGL 283H.001 | Life Writing

TR, 3:30 pm - 4:45 pm. Instructor(s): Michael Gutierrez. Enrollment = 24.

In Life Writing, we will begin by studying the genres and characteristics of life writing and its sibling creative nonfiction. You will use these readings as models for your own creative work. We will then narrow our focus to the basic components of nonfiction essays and memoirs before you begin your auto-ethnography. In the last unit, we will evaluate one piece by each student. In addition, you will be submitting several exercises, along with a peer evaluation for every student in the course.

This is not a class where you will write traditional academic essays. This is a creative writing class. Here you'll be seeking to entertain and emotionally move your reader. Whimsy, humor, and the raw truth are encouraged.

Spend this term in some exciting places. Plunge down the rabbit hole with Alice, get whirled to Oz with Dorothy or fly to Neverland with Peter and Wendy, go shopping on Diagon Alley with Harry and Hagrid.

In English 284 Reading Children's Fiction read (or reread) some of the most influential and lasting books written in English. Enjoy works hailed as classics alongside works recovered for their importance and vitality: get lost in the pictures and stories of the children's magazine, The Brownies Book, edited by W. E. B. Du Bois and a masterwork of the 1920s.

This course considers how to define children's literature (from 'nursery stories' through 'young adult').

What stories do these books tell? How do they tell them?

ECON 511H.001 | Advanced Game Theory

TR, 12:30 pm - 1:45 pm. Instructor(s): Peter Norman. Enrollment = 24.

The goal of this class is to provide tools for strategic thinking. The main part of the course deals with non-cooperative strategic models and their applications to industrial organization (e.g., oligopoly), political science (e.g., agenda setting), corporate finance (e.g., takeovers), biology (e.g., evolutionary equilibrium), behavioral economics (e.g., social preferences), etc... However, we will also study constrained optimization tools as well as many cooperative game theory applications (e.g., matching of hospitals and interns, kidney exchanges, etc...). Currently, ECON 411 (Game Theory) is not a pre-requisite. No advanced mathematics is used but some mathematical maturity (willingness to read mathematical proofs) is strongly recommended.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

EMES 072H.001 | Field Geology of Eastern California

TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Drew Coleman. Enrollment = 20.

Have you ever wanted to stand on a volcano, see a glacier, trace out an earthquake fault, or see the Earth's oldest living things? This seminar is designed around a one-week field trip to eastern California, where students will study geologic features including active volcanoes, earthquake-producing faults, and evidence for recent glaciation and extreme climate change. Before the field trip (which will take place the week of Fall Break and be based at a research station near Bishop, California), the class will meet twice a week to learn basic geologic principles and to work on developing field research topics. During the field trip students will work on field exercises (e.g., mapping, measuring, and describing an active fault; observing and recording glacial features) and collect data for the research projects. After the field trip, students will obtain laboratory data from samples collected during the trip and test research hypotheses using field and laboratory data. Grading will be based on presentation of group research projects, and on a variety of small projects during the trip (notebook descriptions, mapping projects, etc.). Students may be required to pay some of the costs of the trip (typically, about

TITLE: How Green are We? Examining Campus Sustainability at UNC

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR; FC-VALUES

COURSE DESCRIPTION

How sustainable is our university? Cities around the world face issues of environmental degradation, congested traffic, poor water supplies, sanitation concerns, poor energy delivery and waste management. A research university is analogous to a small city, where we can both investigate and more easily implement sustainable technologies and practices. In this class we will examine the sustainability concerns of the modern university, going back of the house; around UNC; how green is our energy? Our food? Our water? How do we handle waste across these inputs? We will examine how sustainability is measured and improved, comparing our institution's progress to other similar schools, and ask ourselves both where we can do better and how we can convince the

FIRST-YEAR LAUNCH SECTION

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for

EXSS 089H.001 | Brain Matters: The Human Computer

TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Jason Mihalik. Enrollment = 24.

Brain Matters: The Human Computer will explore one of the greatest anatomical and physiological mysteries known to us: the brain. The brain contains over 100 billion neurons allowing the human brain to serve as the hub for everything we do, say, or feel. It is by far the most complex and sophisticated `computer; in existence. Together, we will explore this vast unknown. We will discuss and explore topics ranging from anatomy, neurodevelopment, decision-making, maturation, disease, and other topics related to our cerebral computers. The seminar will use examples from research and mass media to complement the teaching materials in the seminar. You will have opportunities to work together, present your work, submit reaction papers, and participate in class discussion on these topics. The seminar is intended for all first-year students; regardless of intended major; interested in neuroscience.

Seats are reserved for EXSS majors during the Fall and Spring semesters. Non-majors will want to look at taking this course in one of the summer sessions which are self-enrolling.

Please join the waitlist for sections 401 or 402 in Connect Carolina during Wave 2 if you are interested in being enrolled in EXSS 275L.

YOUR SPOT ON THE WAIT LIST DOES NOT ASSOCIATE WITH YOU BEING GIVEN A SEAT IN THE COURSE.

The department will confirm that you are an EXSS major, and have completed EXSS 175 or EXSS 155 with a B or better. Ranking on the official waitlist is determined by the number of hours toward graduation (seniority), as well as terms here at UNC. You will be contacted sometime in late July or early August if you are given a seat in the course, and will be manually enrolled then.

Please contact Lacey Singletary with questions (lsingle@email.unc.edu).

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

FIRST-YEAR LAUNCH SECTION

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

TITLE: Movies and the Medieval Past

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR; FC-PAST or FC-KNOWING

COURSE DESCRIPTION

Depictions of the medieval past in movies reflect the interests, anxieties, politics, and values of those producing, directing, financing, and viewing them. In addition to portraying the medieval past, movies set in the Middle Ages can serve as a mirror for the values of those living in the present, reflecting their sense of history and their own moment in time. In this seminar, we will analyze a number of movies set in the eras of the Middle Ages, considering their merits and drawbacks not only as entertainment, but as a form of historical memory. By pairing historical evidence from the Middle Ages with cinematic representations of the medieval past, students in this class will become better historians, sharper viewers of historical films, and learn more about the

TITLE: Dogs, Past and Present

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR; FC-PAST

COURSE DESCRIPTION

As workers and companions, dogs have shared human history virtually from its origins. For dogs, the first domesticated animals, human society has always been their natural habitat. Understanding dogs therefore requires analyzing their relationships to and meaning for people. For what reasons, practical and emotional, have humans kept dogs? What roles have dogs played in their community life and culture? How have humans understood the nature of dogs as a species and the differences between animals and themselves? How have humans projected onto dogs their assumptions about humanity? What ethical obligations do they recognize toward their dogs? What problems result from the close proximity of people and dogs in daily life, and how have societies coped with them?

HIST 179H.001 | Queer Americans in the 20th Century

TR, 9:30 am - 10: 45 am. Instructor(s): Chris Parks. Enrollment = 24.

This honours course explores the history of LGBTQ+ people in the 20th century United States. It follows the course of the 20th and very early 21st century from the perspective of queer people themselves as they navigated the social, institutional, and political terrain of a country that was often hostile to their presence and existence. The course also explores the myriad ways LGBTQ+ people expressed their experiences through culture, activism, and the creation and innovation of family and community. Intersecting with themes of race, class, religion, nationalism, and gender, the histories and herstories of queer people will be unpacked through a variety of locations, communities, and historical contexts.

The course is structured in roughly chronological order. Beginning at the turn-of-the-century, the first weeks situate LGBTQ+ history in the wider historiographic context of (pseudo)scientific debates about sexology, vice, and urbanization. Here, students will be equipped with the basic terminological

HIST 179H.002 | Slavery and the US Civil War

TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am . Instructor(s): Antwain Hunter. Enrollment = 24.

The United States's historic relationship with slavery, particularly during the Civil War Era, is often misunderstood in the present day This loosely chronological course explores the country's ties to the institution during this important period in the American past. Course content features the institution's expansion into the United States; western territories, the political debates around slavery in the decades preceding the Civil War, the rise of the abolition movement and the proslavery response, slavery's role in the secession crisis, the wartime experiences of enslaved people on the Southern home front, the Lincoln administration's policies towards enslavers in the Confederacy and the slaveholding Union states, wartime emancipation and formerly enslaved peoples; military service, the struggle to pass the XIII Amendment, and freedpeople's fight to fully realize their freedom during Reconstruction. Students in this course will read a number of important secondary texts on the subject but will also engage with a wide array of sources produced during the Civil War Era, which will allow them to draw their own conclusions about this complex period. These primary sources will include slave narratives, period

HIST 283H.001 | Chairman Mao's China in World History

MW, 3:35 pm - 4:50 pm. Instructor(s): Michael Tsin. Enrollment = 20.

In the last few years there have been many reports on how Maoism is making a comeback in China, an assertion that often draws on a rather crude comparison between the country's founding leader, Mao Zedong, and its current president, Xi Jinping. Yet, at the same time, commentators are also often quick to emphasize that in many ways the China of today is virtually unrecognizable from the country once ruled by Mao. Indeed, it is common to portray the early years of the People's Republic of China (PRC) from 1949 to the late 1970s as a period characterized by disastrous policies and China's isolation from the rest of the world. China only became a major player on the world stage, we are often told, when it rejoined the global order from the reform era of the 1980s onwards. From that perspective, then, contemporary China is a clear departure from its Maoist predecessor. How are we to reconcile these two seemingly contradictory portrayals of China nowadays?

History 398-001: Leisure Time and Making of Modern America, 1880-1945

Today Americans are deeply invested in leisure. It assumes an almost sacred significance in our personal lives and is widely acknowledged as an indicator of the economic health of the nation itself. Yet leisure has not always enjoyed such widespread consensus. In this course we will turn our attention to a moment when rancor about leisure permeated American communities, homes and especially the pages of newspapers and magazines.

This is a research seminar that uses leisure to explore American life between 1880 and 1945. It was precisely in this moment that working Americans began to enjoy increasing amounts of spare time. Leisure itself changed, too, in this period. Commercial forces overhauled the kinds of leisure activities that were available. By the early twentieth century new kinds of amusements such as movie theaters and dance halls enjoyed increasing appeal in towns and cities throughout the country. These spaces nurtured a set of outlooks, identities and modes of social interaction we have come to associate with modern life.

History 398-002: Modern London: The Imperial Metropolis

We explore the making of London as a world city and imperial and postcolonial capital from 1890 through the present. At the heart of our investigations are the challenges of metropolitan political culture: a panoramic constellation of neighborhoods, social movements, demographic shifts, built environments, changing modes of economic life - and the language of varied artistic forms in which urban existence found expression. The nineteenth century West End luxury markets and the notorious rookeries of the Edwardian East End signaled the subsequent growth of new forms of social inequality at the heart of London's present dilemmas. The metropolitan twentieth century witnessed the catastrophe of the Great War, interwar economic crisis, the terrors of the Blitz, and the promulgation of an encompassing postwar welfare state. A rigid class hierarchy and royal and aristocratic privilege coexisted with increasing multireligious, multicultural and interracial patterns of living. Historical struggles over immigration, racism and racial difference, gender conflict and sexuality rights, and religious commitment, continue as central problems for London and the city's inhabitants in our time. The legacies of imperial

History 398-003: Shaping the World: The Emergence of New Global Orders in the 20th & 21st Centuries

This course deals with three transitions from old established but increasingly contested order systems to new global orders. The course will explore: 1. the transition to a new order that followed the end of World War I and the Versailles Peace Treaty; 2. the transition from the end of World War II to the Cold War (c. 1944-1949) and, 3. the gradual emergence of a new global order that our own times have been grappling with since the end of the Cold War and the early 21st century.

For their respective research projects students are expected to focus on one of the above transitional eras and chose a research topic in cooperation with the professor. There is abundance of published primary material available, especially for the first two transitional phases but also for the third one. This will be discussed during the first few weeks of the semester.

HIST 398-004: Travel Writing

Imagine you are a British gentleman of the 19th century. You have just settled into your comfy club chair at home with a pipe in hand, ready to digest the latest edition of travel reports from Borneo. Or perhaps you are a schoolchild in America in the 1950s. The latest National Geographic has just arrived in your mailbox, and you eagerly pore over its glossy pages. In either instance, you are probably reading travel writing in order to learn more about foreign lands and peoples, whether to be entertained, edified, informed, titillated or transported.

In this historical research seminar, we will be turning the tables on these scenarios. Instead of reading travel writing at its most obvious level to learn more about foreign lands and peoples, we will be analyzing these works to discover more about the concerns and preoccupations of their 19th and 20th century American and European authors and readers, by asking a series of questions: How, why and in what modes have Westerners written about foreign lands and

What was it like to live through (or die in) the Civil War? What difference did it make if one was a Federal or a Confederate, soldier or civilian, white or black, free or slave, male or female? How did the war fit into contemporary political and social beliefs? How do we get at the subjective experiences of the war?

HIST 516H.001 | Historical Time

TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am . Instructor(s): Jay Smith. Enrollment = 24.

This course explores some, though not all, of the many ways in which historians and other students of the past, particularly in the modern western world, have conceptualized historical time. The chief objective of the course is to increase awareness of, and enhance students' abilities to identify, the biases and hidden assumptions that underlie all historical narratives and accounts of change over time.

Most historians would agree that the underlying object of historical study is change; when changes occurred, why they occurred (or failed to occur), how they occurred, the speed with which they occurred, and the implications of those changes for individuals, communities, nations, or the globe. Anyone who has constructed a timeline understands, however, that any narrative of historical change omits some facts and highlights others. What logic(s) determine where such timelines begin and end? Why are some timelines linear while others are jagged, circular, or even motionless? What counts as an event? Does historical

HNRS 330.001 | Is Dinner "Sustainable" - A Human Dilemma (The Honors Carolina Global Food Program Seminar)
TR, 3:30 pm - 6:00 pm. Instructor(s): James Ferguson / Samantha Buckner Terhune. Enrollment = 15.

"Take a cooking class in college and get credit? Sign me up!¿ This used to begin a 5 minute- to 2- hour conversation on Honors 330.001, but no more. As an example, we cite a paper topic from last semester, ¿Can growing seaweed help the world? A deep dive into the underwater world of macroalgae¿. The paper was lavishly illustrated by undersea images taken by the author. When we first offered the class in 1997, it was a slightly naïve and timid enquiry into food and culture. Since 9/11/2001, the economic meltdown in 2008 and recovery since, and the latest Farm Bill, developing and sustaining a vital interest in the sourcing, preparation, consumption, sharing, and preservation of our daily bread has become an urgent concern for us. If one cannot eat sustainably there is no point in worrying about finance. Malthus will be proven correct. Then came COVID 19 and the armed conflicts in Gaza and the Ukraine. The concerns they have fostered will nuance but not overshadow our course direction for fall 2024.

We begin our trajectory by introducing scientific method and health affairs through the complex food studies prism by considering nutrition, eating

HNRS 350.001 | Learning the Art of Medicine

T, 3:30 pm - 4:30 pm. Instructor(s): Rick Stouffer. Enrollment = 16.

This course is designed to supplement knowledge obtained through the traditional pre-medical curriculum in order to enhance students' development as health care providers. It has five objectives:

- 1) To introduce students to non-biological factors that affect the health of individuals and society. Understanding the social situation of your patient, including environmental, financial and familial factors, is important for the effective practice of medicine. Just to give one example of the importance of understanding these factors: studies have shown that patients do not take up to one third of medications that are prescribed and implement only a small portion of lifestyle changes (e.g. dietary changes or smoking cessation). Unfortunately, physicians tend to focus on what happens in their offices and on treating only the biological factors contributing to disease. A better understanding of a patient's social situation is necessary if the therapies that are discussed in the physician's office are to be implemented once the patient goes home.

HNRS 390.001 | Narrative and Medicine

W, 2:30 pm - 5:00 pm. Instructor(s): Terry Holt. Enrollment = 20.

This seminar explores the role of narrative in medicine from two sides: the patient's experience of illness, and the caregiver's experience of providing for the sick. As a writing workshop, this course offers students a supportive environment in which to explore their own experiences and refine their writing skills. Pandemic conditions permitting, it provides an opportunity for service work in a variety of clinical settings, in which students will have a chance to participate in medical care. (Please note that each student will be responsible for arranging to perform volunteer work at UNC Hospitals, and that these arrangements must be completed on line over the summer, usually in June; deadline will be communicated to registered students as soon as course registration is set.) Taught by a clinician-writer with years of experience in medical care, professional publication, and workshop instruction, this course offers a rare opportunity to learn from a highly skilled professional engaged in the central concerns of his work.

TITLE: Relational Leadership

COREQUISITE: IDST 190L-401: Data Literacy Lab

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course is designed to expose to students to the principles of relational leadership; a human-centered approach to working better together that prioritizes the quality of our relationships as a driving force that increases collaboration, equity, and impact across health systems and communities. Students will apply the relational leadership framework to develop tangible skills for advancing teamwork, communication, collaborative decision making, psychological safety, and trust. Students will have interactions with multiple leaders in healthcare, community, and academic spaces, building a network of community while also focusing on their individual growth in leadership. Both professors will share their application of relational leadership as they have

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

FIRST-YEAR LAUNCH SECTION

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for

MATH 231H.001 | Calculus of Functions of One Variable I

MWF, 11:15 am - 12:05 pm; Recitation: T, 3:30 pm - 4:20 pm. Instructor(s): Ivan Cherednik. Enrollment = 35.

Math 231 is designed to provide a detailed introduction to the fundamental ideas of calculus. It does not assume any prior calculus knowledge, but the student is expected to be proficient working with functions and their graphs as well as manipulating variable expressions and solving equations using algebra.

This is the Honors section of Math 231. It offers a more demanding and deeper treatment than the regular sections as well as more involved applications. There will be more emphasis on understanding theory than in other sections, and students will be expected to understand and reproduce proofs of theorems and formulas. In addition, this section will cover extra topics, including the epsilon-delta definition of limit. Applications will be more involved and will sometimes involve real data. Homework will be more challenging, with more emphasis on creative problem solving and less emphasis on drill. Students will be expected to complete a final project.

FIRST-YEAR LAUNCH SECTION

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for

MATH 233H.001 | Calculus of Functions of Several Variables

MWF, 12:20 pm - 1:10 pm; Recitation: R, 3:30 pm - 4:20 pm. Instructor(s): Emily Burkhead. Enrollment = 35.

Level: This is the Honors section of MATH 233. It offers a more demanding and deeper treatment than the regular sections. For example, there will be more emphasis on understanding theory than in other sections. Topics: Vectors in three dimensional space. Dot products and cross products and their applications. Functions of two and three variables. Polar and spherical coordinates. Graphs and contours. Multivariable calculus: partial derivatives, gradient. Curves in space. Surfaces: normal vector, tangent plane. Maxima and minima. Lagrange multipliers. Double and triple definite integrals, line integrals, Green's theorem.

PREREQUISITE: AT LEAST A B+ IN MATH 232 AT UNC OR A 5 ON THE BC CALCULUS EXAM.

To register for this course, you should let Professor Sawon know your name and PID at the first class session. Note that registering for MATH294 is entirely optional: you don't have to register for MATH294 to participate in these sessions and/or the competitions. In particular, if you don't anticipate attending every week, it would be better not to register. Please let me know by email (sawon@email.unc.edu) if you want to participate and are unable to attend the first session.

Math 294 will be held in Phillips 330, the Math Lounge, Fall 2023.

MATH 381H.001 | Discrete Math

MWF, 11:15 am - 12:05 pm. Instructor(s): Mark McCombs. Enrollment = 35.

Logic and proofs, Sets and Functions, Number theory, Induction, Counting, Discrete probability, and Relations (Chapters 1,2,4,5,6,7 and 9 from Rosen's Discrete Mathematics text).

This is the honors section of math 381. The usual course topics will be treated in a deeper and more demanding manner than in the regular sections. In particular, we will go through strategies for proofs very carefully (Sections 1.7 and 1.8, plus other material from the instructor).

 PREREQUISITE: MATH 232 OR 283.

Mark McCombs is a Teaching Professor of Mathematics. He earned his B.S., M.S., and M.A.T. degrees from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He

Algebraic Curves and Riemann Surfaces
Pre-requisites: Math 523 and Math 550
Recommended pre-requisites: Math 577 and Math 578
This is a topic course that will introduce theory of Algebraic curves and Riemann surfarces at undergraduate level. We will be primarily working with "Algebraic Curves and Riemann Surfaces" of Rick Miranda and "Algebraic Curves" of William Fulton. Fundamental notions of Complex Analysis and Topology are required and the theory of Linear algebra recommended. Algebraic curves are best encountered for the first time over the complex numbers, so we will introduce the theory of Riemann Surfaces centered around complex charts and meromorphic functions. Later we introduce the basic language of algebraic geometry ie rational functions, divisors, sheaves, cohomolohy, Zarisky topology. We will state main theorems for algebraic curves such as Riemann Roch for

This is a required course for first-year MTSC graduate students. Students gain knowledge and learn key skillsets outside of their technical course work needed for success in their PhD program and beyond. MTSC711 follows on the topics learned in MTSC710 to broaden the professional development of materials science PhD students. Students work to develop an Individual Development Plan, to understand the variety of career paths available for PhD-holders, and to practice research presentations.

Grading status: H/P/L/F.

This is a required course for all Materials Science students in fall and spring semesters of years 2-5 of their doctoral program. The course tracks attendance at the required APS departmental seminars. Attending departmental seminars is an important component of training for MTSC doctoral students. Engaging in the seminars will help students gain a working knowledge of a variety of research areas important to their doctoral research.

Grading status: Pass/Fail.

MTSC765 Electronic Materials and Devices - Organic and Inorganic

The course introduces the electronic and optical processes in organic molecules and polymers that govern the behavior of practical organic optoelectronic devices. The course begins with an overview of fundamental science of electronic materials and devices. We then discuss their optoelectronic properties of organic molecules, including topics from photophysics, charge transport and injection. Emphasis will be equally placed on the use of both inorganic and organic electronic materials in organic electronic devices.

This course covers the physical fundamentals of material science with an in-depth discussion of structure formation in soft and hard materials and how structure determines material mechanical, electrical, thermal, and optical properties. Topics include amorphous and crystal structures, defects, dislocation theory, thermodynamics and phase diagrams, diffusion, interfaces and microstructures, solidification, and theory of phase transformation.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

TITLE: Music and Women's Rights

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR; FC-POWER; RESEARCH

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This seminar is about the protest songs and history of the First and Second Waves of American feminism, from the Seneca Falls Convention in 1848 where women declared their equality with men and called for women's right to vote to the passage of Roe v. Wade and the Equal Rights Amendment in the 1970s. Issues for discussion include the intersectionality of women's rights and civil rights movements.

Focusing on the period following the 9/11 terrorist attacks, this course explores the U.S. government's use of hip hop as a form of people-to-people diplomacy, the interaction of citizens of different countries meant to establish dialogue, shape public opinion, and influence policy. At heart, this course is about the intersection of music and power. We will explore the power of music to bridge cultural divides, facilitate understanding, and build community. We will also seek to understand the fraught power relationships between art and the state and between the United States and the international community revealed in the practice of hip hop diplomacy.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

PHIL 155H.001 | Truth and Proof: Introduction to Mathematical Logic
TR, 3:30 pm - 4:45 pm. Instructor(s): Sarah Stroud. Enrollment = 24.

Deductive logic, our subject, is the study of one type or species of good argument. We will use formal tools to more precisely characterize and investigate that species, in which the conclusion of an argument follows from certain premises simply in virtue of the form of the various statements involved. We will progressively uncover and study several distinct aspects of form that are relevant to such patterns, starting with what is called truth-functional logic and moving on to quantificational logic. One concern throughout the course will be whether and how we can rigorously prove that a conclusion follows (or doesn't follow) from a group of premises.

Assessment will be via frequent problem sets, which we will prepare for by using significant class time to work together on sample problems. The required textbook is Deductive Logic by Warren Goldfarb (Hackett Publishing).

This course requires a recitation section.

ALL 200 seats are reserved for incoming first-year students, who'll be registering this summer, until 11:59pm on Sunday, August 4, 2024.

To provide a fair and equitable registration experience for all incoming first-year students, all seats are currently managed by the Registrar. On the morning of Monday, August 5th, any remaining reserved seats will be released to the general undergraduate student population. That means that, on Monday, August 5th (and beyond), any undergraduate student--incoming first-year or not--may enroll in any open seat without restriction.

PHIL 273H.001 | Justice, Rights, and the Common Good: Philosophical Perspectives on Social and Economic Issues
 MW, 3:35 pm - 4:50 pm. Instructor(s): Luc Bovens. Enrollment = 24.

Following Michael Sandel's lectures in the web-based course "Justice - What is the Right Thing to Do?" we will develop a basic understanding of the theoretical issues that underlie questions of justice. After each lecture, we will devote a session to a contemporary social issue that hinges on these theoretical insights. We will cover issues such as criminal justice, public health and pandemics, paternalism and nudge, taxation; child labor laws; freedom of press; poverty and inequality; affirmative action, and same-sex marriage.

Luc Bovens graduated from the Department of Philosophy in the University of Minnesota in 1990. He taught in CU at Boulder from 1990 until 2003 and in the

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

FIRST-YEAR LAUNCH SECTION

This Lecture will be combined with other PHYS 118 sections, and it will be taught as a large survey class. PHYS 118-401, the Lab associated with this class, is the FY-Launch section. Please be sure to enroll in this class, PHYS 118-02F, and the corresponding lab, PHYS 118-401, to fulfill the FY-LAUNCH requirement.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

VERY IMPORTANT: HONORS STUDENTS WHO INTEND TO REGISTER FOR A FALL 2024 HONORS COURSE, SHOULD DO SO DURING WAVE 1 OR WAVE 2. WHEN OPEN ENROLLMENT BEGINS ON APRIL 22, HONORS COURSE REGISTRATION WILL BE SUSPENDED IN ORDER TO RESERVE ALL REMAINING SEATS FOR INCOMING FIRST-YEAR HONORS STUDENTS. CONTINUING STUDENTS WILL NOT REGAIN REGISTRATION ACCESS FOR HONORS COURSES UNTIL AUGUST 5. For more information, please visit <https://honorscarolina.unc.edu/academics/courses/#register>

PHYS 118H.01F | Introductory Calculus-based Mechanics and Relativity

MWF, 9:05 am - 9:55 am. Instructor(s): Amy Oldenburg. Enrollment = 24.

PHYS118 is a calculus-based introduction to Classical Mechanics. The course covers motion and kinematics in one and two dimensions, forces and Newton's laws of motion, work-energy and conservation laws, frames of reference and Einstein's theory of special relativity, rigid-body rotations, rolling, static equilibrium, and oscillations and waves.

The honors version of this course is differentiated by requiring a final project and presentation. Early in the semester, each honors student will identify a project of interest and submit the idea to the instructor, who will evaluate and discuss changes or other details with the student to finalize the curriculum for the semester. Suitable project choices will integrate multiple topics covered in the course and will require a detailed description and a brief literature review of relevant papers. A computational aspect is highly encouraged.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

TITLE: Planning the Night

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: RESEARCH

COURSE DESCRIPTION

As societies have urbanized and globalized, daytime activities have increasingly encroached on the night. These changes hold significant ramifications for public health, social equity, and urban ecology, among other things. Yet many of the activities that take place overnight have long been essential to the functioning of daytime societies: truckers, cleaners, snow removers and sidewalk-salters work the nights to ensure our cities are stocked, cleaned, and greased by day. At the same time, urban night-life has incubated cultural transformations and localized `culture wars. This course will introduce students to foundational urban planning concepts through the lens of `nightology, examining the ways in which everything from environmental regulations and zoning

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

PLCY 061H.001 | Policy Entrepreneurship and Public/Private/Non-Profit Partnerships

MW, 1:25 pm - 2:40 pm. Instructor(s): Daniel Gitterman. Enrollment = 24.

This seminar will define a policy entrepreneur and examine strategies used by policy entrepreneurs to achieve policy change or innovation in the policy making process. This course also aims to explore ways that public, private, and non-profit sectors collaborate to address problems that cannot be solved by one sector alone. There is growing recognition that sustainable solutions to some of the most complex challenges confronting our communities can benefit from these collaborative or intersectoral approaches.

FIRST YEAR STUDENTS ONLY.

PLCY 101H.001 | Making American Public Policy

MWF, 10:10 am - 11:00 am. Instructor(s): William Goldsmith. Enrollment = 22.

This course provides a general overview of the role of history in public policy, the policymaking process, and the substance of major domestic and global public policy challenges. It exposes students to the conceptual and analytical perspectives necessary for understanding and playing a direct role in policy making. This course will illuminate policy and political challenges in areas such as tax policy, social policy, education policy, health policy, foreign policy, and homeland security. We will explore the inherent tensions that emerge between good politics and good policy in a number of these substantive policy areas. Honors students will pay particular attention to the role of politicians (elected officials) and experts (policy researchers) in the making of public policy. Students will work to develop their skills in effective oral and written communication, including making oral arguments, presenting research findings, and writing for policy audiences.

Public Interest Technology refers to a set of practices to design, deploy and govern technology in ways that advance the public interest, is the definition chosen by the PIT-University Network website to describe an interdisciplinary approach that sees technology as a force for good whenever it is centered around a core of equity and individual dignity in its design, deployment, and monitoring. In doing so, the PIT movement gives us a vocabulary for thinking about how technology can erode essential rights via surveillance, hyper nudging, bias, etc. and explores some essential trade-offs for the use of technology in the public sector.

We often think of technological development, and innovation in general, as the work of a lone genius; the Leonardos or the Einsteins, the Steve Jobs or the Elon Musks. But innovation takes much more than that: an innovation ecosystem fueled by policies that reward, protect, and support new ideas.

This course provides a broad overview of theories of technological change, innovation, and knowledge. It examines the social and policy conditions for innovation to emerge and its social impact. In the first part of the course, we will lay the foundation of what technology and innovation are and review an evolutionary approach to technical change based on the notions of competencies, dynamic capabilities, and networks. In the second part of the course, we will analyze the rationale for policies that support innovation; such as intellectual property rights, funding for basic science, or regional clusters. We will also overview policies that limit the use of new technologies; such as GDPR or the EU AI Act; and show how they can positively contribute to that innovation ecosystem. Finally, we will explore the geopolitical implications of science and technology policy in the form of international cooperation or competition for technological dominance.

TITLE: Global Politics of Climate Change

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR; FC-GLOBAL

DESCRIPTION

This course is designed to provide an introduction to the politics of climate change at multiple levels of policy making, from global efforts down to local communities. Throughout the course, climate policy is investigated as a result of the interplay of science and politics. At each level of politics, global, regional (EU), country (US), sub-national (US states), and local (regional and city), students will have the opportunity to review existing policy approaches, explore official inter-governmental and governmental policies, and read social science analyses. In addition, at each level, a scientific expert and/or activist will visit class to interact on climate issues. Student participation is required, with the format for class meetings combining a mixture of

 POLI 100H.001 | Introduction to Government in the United States
 TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Timothy Ryan. Enrollment = 24.

This course is an introduction to American political institutions, political behavior, and the policy process. In this course we will discuss the origins of the current governmental system in America, the structure of the U.S. government, and how theories of American government apply to current events and problems the government and citizens face today. At the end of the course students should have a greater understanding of government, political differences, and how to be an engaged citizen in our democracy.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

POLI 238H.001 | Contemporary Latin American Politics
 TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Evelyne Huber. Enrollment = 24.

This course provides an overview of major topics in the study of Latin American politics. It is aimed at students with a desire to understand how Latin American societies and governments are organized, what the major problems are that these societies are facing, and what accounts for different outcomes from the point of view of the welfare of citizens. We shall examine both common traits in the region's history, culture, and economic, political, and social structures, and important differences between countries in these dimensions. We shall gain an understanding of the diversity of national experiences and a somewhat deeper knowledge of a few select cases: Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Uruguay, and Costa Rica.

Evelyne Huber, Morehead Alumni Distinguished Professor in Political Science, works on problems of development, democratization, and welfare states in Latin America and Europe. Her most recent books, co-authored with John D. Stephens and published by the University of Chicago Press, are entitled Development and

POLI 255H.001 | International Migration and Citizenship

W, 2:30 pm - 5:00 pm. Instructor(s): Niklaus Steiner. Enrollment = 24.

While the global movement of products, services, ideas, and information is increasingly free, the movement of people across borders remains tightly controlled by governments. This control over international migration is a highly contested issue, and it is complicated by the fact that never before have so many people had the ability to move from one country to another while at the same time governments have never had so much power to control this movement. This class explores the moral, economic, political, and cultural dimensions of this movement across international borders. The class is based on discussions (as opposed to lectures) and tackles thorny questions like: do we have an obligation to let poor people into our rich country? what constitutes persecution? how do foreigners affect national identity? how should citizenship be allocated? We will pay particular attention to the distinction between migrants who move voluntarily (immigrants) and those who are forced to flee (refugees) - is this an important distinction to make, and does one group deserve admission more than the other? No prior knowledge or experience is needed; instead, students need to be ready to dig deep into all sides of migration issues through

POLI 405.001 Local Politics in the United States

This course provides an introduction to the politics of local governments in the United States. Topics covered include the economics and history of urban agglomerations, local governments' place in the American federal system, the role of race and immigration in how parties and coalitions govern, whether local governments are responsive to voters, and the role cities play in shaping housing, education, climate, and criminal justice policy. The course will take students outside of the classroom to engage with current election campaigns and policymaking in Chapel Hill, Carrboro, and Durham.

POLI 435H.001 | Government and Politics of Latin America

TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am . Instructor(s): Jonathan Hartlyn. Enrollment = 24.

This course explores several issues central to democracy and development in Latin America. With a wave of democratization that began in 1978 and peaked in the mid-1990s, Latin America is experiencing the most prolonged and extensive period of democratic politics in its history, though along with other world areas, it is currently also experiencing both democratic erosion and outright authoritarian regression. We will engage with topics such as analyzing the implications of different types of transitions to electoral democracy, the search for justice following human rights violations during previous military regimes or due to civil conflicts, why sustained reductions in poverty in one of the world's most unequal regions has been so difficult, and how problems with democratic representation and challenges of corruption, accountability and citizen insecurity have led to different types of populist regimes in the region. The course will combine theory and evidence from comparative studies as well as drawing on case studies of selected countries, examining their similarities and differences. It is aimed at students with some prior knowledge of the region or the study of comparative politics.

Transatlantic Politics of Climate Change

This course is reserved for TAM (Transatlantic Masters) students. TAM students please contact tam@unc.edu for enrollment. All other students require Instructor Consent.

The course focuses on comparative approaches to climate policy in the European Union (EU) and the United States (US). Initial attention is given to the science underlying climate change and global climate change policies. The course then addresses the evolution of environmental, energy, and climate policy in the EU and US. EU member state and US state-level policies are also addressed. In addition to examining concrete policy outputs, analysis of the underlying political processes producing policies will be a key component.

POLI 890: Directed Readings in Political Science
Race, Geography, and Capital Punishment
1.5 credits per semester; Fall 2024 and Spring 2025
(Note: Enrollment in both semesters is required.)

This research seminar will focus on the generation of publishable research relating to the US death penalty system since 1972. The professor will supply two unique databases, one on homicides in the US from 1976 to 2021 and one on death sentences imposed from 1972 to present. The professor will also supply a template for a set of analyses relating to patterns of use of the death penalty per 100 homicides previously accomplished for certain states. The class will work together and in small groups to revise these analyses into chapters of a book for publication and into a series of reports for publication focused on individual states. We will begin with a review of the relevant literature and by getting familiar with the relevant data sources. We will then break into

NSCI 222H.001 | Learning

TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): . Enrollment = 24.

This course is designed to introduce the student to the topic of animal learning and behavior. We will consider Pavlovian or ¿Classical¿ learning, operant learning, and the role of learning in drug abuse and dependence. Students will acquire knowledge of the procedures used to study learning, the ways that learned behaviors are expressed, and theories that have been proposed to explain how learning is represented in memory. Because neuroscience has had such a tremendous impact on our understanding of learning, memory, and behavior, we will also consider new findings from neuroscience that have allowed an understanding of the underlying brain substrates.

PREREQUISITE: NSCI 175 or PSYC 101.

PSYC 058H.001 | The Psychology of Mental States and Language Use
 TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Jennifer Arnold. Enrollment = 24.
 As adults we constantly make judgments about other people's beliefs, desires, goals, knowledge, and intentions from evidence like eye gaze and inferences from their words and actions. These judgments together can be called mindreading, or theory of mind (where 'theory' refers to the theory someone might hold about another's mental state, not a scientific theory). This information is known to guide some aspects of language use -- for example, you wouldn't ask someone to hand you 'that book' if they don't know it exists. But sometimes you might ignore what someone else does or does not know ' for instance asking someone for 'the red book' when that person is sitting in front of two red books. This course examines how children, adults, and individuals with autism infer other people's mental states, and how they use it to guide decisions during speaking and understanding. This seminar will follow a discussion format.

Title: Quantitative Methods for Making Causal Inferences

Instructor: Dr. Kenneth Bollen (001)

Prerequisites: Prior introduction to statistics, including multiple regression.

Description: Understanding cause-effect relationships is at the heart of all sciences including psychology. More broadly, we encounter causal claims in news stories, advertisements, and everyday conversations. However, numerous challenges face us when we attempt causal inferences and there are good reasons to carefully examine these claims. Confounding variables, sample selection bias, measurement error, and internal and external validity are among the issues. The goal of this course is to introduce the threats to causal inference as well as proposed solutions. Contemporary approaches to causal inferences such as

Prerequisites: PSYC 101, 210 or 215, and 250 or 260

Description: An examination of research and theory pertaining to the intersections of culture, ethnicity-race, and development. Specifically, this course focuses on identifying limitations and advances in psychological and developmental sciences toward our understanding of ethnic-racial minoritized and immigrant youth development in culturally bounded contexts (e.g., families, schools, and neighborhoods). The course is recommended for students interested in engaging in rich dialogue and self-reflection.

Title: Gender and Development

Instructor: Dr. Annie Maheux (003)

Prerequisites: PSYC 101 and PSYC 210 or PSYC 270

This course examines the role of gender in child and adolescent psychosocial development. Topics include socializing agents of gender development (e.g., parents, peers, media); conceptions of gender, masculinity, and femininity; experiences of youth at different intersections of gender and other identities (e.g., race/ethnicity, sexual identity); and the influence of gendered social roles in developmental outcomes (e.g., preferences and traits, academic outcomes, sexual behavior, violence).

PSYC 518H. | Creating Digital Tools for Positive Youth Development

TR, 8:00 am - 9:15 am. Instructor(s): Andrea Hussong. Enrollment = 24.

In this upper-level course, students will learn about the interdisciplinary field of Positive Youth Development and create a digital tool to improve health, well-being, or developmental outcomes for youth through an intensive semester-long project. This course is designed so that by the end of the semester you will be able to: apply Positive Youth Development and Prevention Science frameworks to identifying points of intervention that promote youth thriving; understand design-based processes and universal design practices as key tools in creating technology-based interventions for youth; learn and apply technical skills in a single digital medium to support development of a program prototype; create a prototype tool that meets a clearly defined intervention goal for a given community-based collaborator; and present the science-based rationale behind the program created to community-based partners. This class is part of the IDEAS in Action curriculum and requires students to explore creative processes that underlie the creation of empirically-informed content and digital intervention platforms. Finally, this course aims to provide you will experiences and tools that are valued in the marketplace such as using

TITLE: September 11: Origins, Consequences, and Where Do We Go from Here

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This first-year seminar will reflect upon the September 11 terrorist attacks in the United States, exploring how the terrorist attacks occurred and why the U.S. intelligence community and policymakers failed to anticipate and prevent them as well as the subsequent effects on the United States, the Middle East, and the world. The instructor, a former intelligence analyst, will lead students in discussions and in-class exercises to encourage critical analysis of the implications of terrorism, particularly on United States national security. A variety of assignments will require students to assess the causes and results of American national security decisions and alternative decisions that might have been made, supported with research and evidence.

PWAD 101H.001 | Making American Public Policy

MWF, 10:10 am - 11:00 am. Instructor(s): William Goldsmith. Enrollment = 2.

This course provides a general overview of the role of history in public policy, the policymaking process, and the substance of major domestic and global public policy challenges. It exposes students to the conceptual and analytical perspectives necessary for understanding and playing a direct role in policy making. This course will illuminate policy and political challenges in areas such as tax policy, social policy, education policy, health policy, foreign policy, and homeland security. We will explore the inherent tensions that emerge between good politics and good policy in a number of these substantive policy areas. Honors students will pay particular attention to the role of politicians (elected officials) and experts (policy researchers) in the making of public policy. Students will work to develop their skills in effective oral and written communication, including making oral arguments, presenting research findings, and writing for policy audiences.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

Course Title: Navigating State Fragility: Development and Governance in the West African Sahel.

Background

According to the World Bank, about two billion people now live in conditions of extreme fragility, conflict and violence (FCV), also known as fragile and conflict-affected states (FCAS). By 2030, the Bank projects that about 59% of the world's extremely poor people will live in FCAS such as the West African Sahelian countries. Most countries in Sahel have experienced international military interventions, within United Nations or other frameworks. None of Sahelian countries attained most of the MDGs by 2015 but all aspire to attain the SDGs by 2030. The FCAS have generated intense policy and scholarly debates in recent years.

¿ What are the historical roots of fragility, conflict and violence in Sahel? How changing international approaches to aid and peacebuilding have helped in Sahel? How do democratic governance, socioeconomic inclusion, justice and security have evolved in the region? What insights do current social and economic

This is a course about American policies and actions in Asia from the beginning of the country through the present. In order to help students understand the American role, the course will cover major developments in Asia itself during the period. The first third of the course will cover the period from roughly 1800 through the Second World War, ending in 1945. The middle third of the course will cover the Cold War period from 1945 through about 1990, and the final third will cover the past 30 years. Professor Blair is a former senior leader in the U.S. intelligence community and armed forces with extensive experience in Asia. Classes will include lectures, presentations by students, class discussions and guest speakers. The objective of the course is for students to understand the aspects of American policies in Asia that have endured over the decades, and the aspects that have changed; successes in American policies and actions and mistakes; the roles of national interests, domestic imperatives, and individual leaders in the formation and execution of policy.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?
Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.
ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES
Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

RELI 073H.001 | From Dragons to Pokemon: Animals in Japanese Myth, Folklore and Religion
TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Barbara Ambros. Enrollment = 24.

This seminar examines the cultural construction of animals in Japanese myth, folklore, and religion. We will discuss various kinds of animals: those that occur in the natural world, those that are found in myths and folklore, and those that have appeared in popular media such as animation. We will explore how images of various animals were culturally constructed as tricksters, gods, monsters, or anthropomorphic companions; how animals were ritualized as divine, demonic, or sentient beings in Buddhism, Shinto, and folk religion; and how animals could serve as metaphors that embodied collective ideals or anxieties. Most of our readings will focus on primary and secondary texts from the Japanese tradition (in English), but we will also read theoretical texts on human-animal relationships and historical studies on animals in the larger Asian context. We will also view and analyze Japanese films, both anime and documentaries, that deal with animals and environmental issues.

RELI 185H.001 | Women/Gender/Islam

TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Juliane Hammer. Enrollment = 24.

This course explores norms, discourses and practices related to gender and sexuality in Muslim societies and communities in their historical dimensions and contemporary expressions. We focus on the link between religion and gender through exploration and analysis of foundational religious texts, legal interpretations, and religious practices in diverse Muslim contexts and consider the definitions of and challenges to gender and sexual norms. The course emphasizes the interplay of historical developments and contemporary expressions and foregrounds the agency of Muslim women in assessing, challenging, changing and/or preserving their roles in Muslim societies. It relates the study of women and gender in Islam to the larger fields of women in religion(s) and women and gender studies.

Dr. Juliane Hammer is a professor in the Department of Religious Studies at UNC. Hammer previously taught at Elon University, the University of North

In this seminar, we will examine a range of literature related to the history of the self, from more theoretical works to specific texts in the history of Judaism and Christianity that shed light on changing conceptions of the individual, agency, emotion, and cognition. The goal will be to move beyond common dichotomies between flesh and spirit, body and mind, to arrive at more embodied, situated, and interactive modes of describing the functioning of the self in ancient literature. The focus will be on biblical and ancient Jewish texts, but students from a variety of different fields are welcome to join, bring their expertise to bear on the topic, and focus on research in their respective areas.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar OR (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. Most seats in this section are reserved for incoming first-year students. The remaining seats are made available during Waves 1 and 2 and new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

TITLE: What Language Do Forests Speak?

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR; FC-AESTH or FC-KNOING

COURSE DESCRIPTION

You may already have read that trees communicate with each other, or that forests are complex networks of resource exchange. But have you ever considered the place of language in plant life? While forests may not exactly think in a language like English (or Portuguese), in this course, we will ask how different cultures have tried to relate to forests through language. By focusing specifically on forests in Portugal, Brazil, and Angola, we will study how poets, novelists, filmmakers, and activists in the Portuguese-speaking world have created different (but interrelated) literatures of the forest, and what we can learn about their cultures, their history, and their entanglements with vegetable worlds through these texts and images. Each week a short essay on

TITLE: French Coastal Ecologies

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR; RESEARCH

COURSE DESCRIPTION

In this course, we will examine how French topography, in particular coastal topography, has had an impact on French cultural production. A central feature of France, the coastline extends for 5834 kilometers and faces four marine basins, each with their distinctive coastal and offshore characteristics: the Southern edge of the North Sea, the English Chanel, The Atlantic, and the Mediterranean. I propose that we approach the French coast using various lenses: mapping the coastline will be our first focus. From there, we will study selected historical events such as invasions and conquests, as well as contemporary migrations. This will lead us into examining how the coast is represented in French visual culture, mainly paintings and films, as well as in literature. A

SPAN 261H.001 | Advanced Spanish in Context

MWF, 11:15 am - 12:05 pm. Instructor(s): Helene M de Fays. Enrollment = 10.

Spanish 261H is a fifth semester course that uses a variety of texts (literature, movies, newspaper articles, speeches, and essays) as a basis for reviewing grammatical concepts, developing writing competency, refining analytical skills, and improving overall communication abilities in Spanish. Through work on authentic and original texts, this course continues to focus on refining the students' language skills, as well as further their developing critical analytical capacities. With the readings and films, students will explore their socio-historical context and analyze the application of different linguistic structures as tools employed to create meaning and convey a message. Students will be expected to do a significant amount of reading and writing in Spanish 261H.

Note: This course is the prerequisite for all the Spanish minors and majors at UNC. Students may not receive credit for both SPAN 261 and SPAN 267. This Enrollment = 24. This course serves as a gateway to the SCiLL minor. This interdisciplinary course provides a foundation for understanding the origins of and the big questions surrounding civic life and leadership. Part I of the course uses classic texts in politics, philosophy, and literature to examine the role of the state in society and the tensions that exist between individual freedom and the power of the state to keep order. Part II focuses on the founding of the United States of America, including primary documents, in order to understand the unique elements of the United States experiment in democracy. Part III applies the lessons of Parts I and II to a set of controversies and tensions in modern civic life such as reproductive rights, free speech, religious freedom, and crime and punishment. The assignments in this course include weekly responses to the readings in advance of classroom meetings, scheduled in-class debates, and a variety of writing assignments. Participation in class discussion and debates, including the ability to provide evidence for opinions that students both agree and disagree with, are all crucial to this course, as indeed they are crucial to civic life in a democracy. WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT PROCEDURES

TR, 12:30 pm - 1:45 pm. Instructor(s): Lauren Valentino. Enrollment = 24.

Although women now attend and graduate from college at a higher rate than men in the US, they remain underrepresented in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM). This course explores the causes and consequences of why women and other gender minority individuals are less likely to pursue education and careers in the STEM fields. To do so, we will draw on sociological insights from the study of gender, education, work and occupations, and science and technology studies. Throughout the course, students will engage with social science research as well as contemporary news articles, films, and podcasts on these topics. They will also have the opportunity to meet experts who actively work on promoting diversity in STEM as well as established women and other gender minority individuals who have pursued STEM careers. This course is open to students of all backgrounds, majors, and genders.

FIRST-YEAR LAUNCH SECTION

This class will use Python. It is suitable for those with no Python experience.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?

Seats are restricted to first-year students (and transfer students in their first year at UNC who completed <24 hours of post-high school college coursework at another institution before their first semester at UNC). If you are a transfer student, refer to the UNC Catalog (<https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext>) for additional information. Honors first-year students may not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

Description: This course will introduce advanced undergraduate and MS students to probability. The topics to be covered include combinatorics (counting and pigeon-hole principles, derangement problems, integer solution counting, reflection principle for random walks, Stirling's formula), moment generating functions and basic concentration inequalities, finite space Markov chains, mean ergodic theorem, martingales, branching processes.

BUSI 500H.001 | Entrepreneurship and Business Planning

MW, 9:30 am - 10: 45 am. Instructor(s): Jim Kitchen. Enrollment = 50.

The goals of this course are to give the students a broad understanding of the field of entrepreneurship and to introduce the important tools and skills necessary to create and grow a successful new venture. The course is designed to simulate the real life activities of entrepreneurs in the start-up stage of a new venture. Students, in teams, will develop a new venture concept and determine if a demand exists for their product or service. Importantly, the course facilitates networking with entrepreneurs and other students who are considering becoming entrepreneurs.

As an undergraduate at UNC, Jim learned how to create and grow companies. After successfully selling his tour operation business that he started in college he built a successful commercial real estate investment firm and is an active consultant and investor in numerous early startup ventures. Jim has an MBA 35 seats reserved for Business Students; 15 Seats for Non-Business Students (course not available for First year students). This course WILL NOT be available for request via the Non-Business Student Request form in August. All Non-Business Students interested in taking the course must register themselves, or enroll on the waitlist.

BUSI 507H.001 | Sustainable Business and Social Enterprise

Students will learn how to apply full triple bottom line sustainability in business to drive simultaneous improvement of impacts on people, the environment and our economy. They will explore how business fits into the greater sustainability landscape and the importance of cross-sector collaboration and partnership. This course concentrates on sustainability in established businesses of all sizes (multinational, regional, local, family, etc.), rather than starting new entrepreneurial ventures. Students will learn how to evaluate existing businesses and industries using ESG metrics (environment, social and governance), the triple bottom line framework (TBL = simultaneously improving impact on people, planet, and profit), lifecycle assessment, stakeholder understanding and other timely standards/frameworks. Work will compare how established businesses address sustainability incrementally versus using it to innovate, and how those companies market sustainability and are viewed within existing indices and rating systems. Learning will emphasize driving profitability through addressing current global social and environmental challenges highlighted by the United Nations Sustainable Development goals;

BUSI 533H.001 | Supply Chain Management

TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Michael Beeler. Enrollment = 30.

A supply chain is comprised of all the parties involved in fulfilling a customer request. The integrated management of this network is a critical determinant of success in today's competitive environment. Companies like Amazon, Zara, and Dell are proof that excellence in supply chain management is a must for financial strength and industry leadership. With increasing competition around the globe, supply chain management is both a challenge and an opportunity for companies. Hence a strong understanding of supply-chain management concepts and the ability to recommend improvements should be in the toolbox of all managers.

This course is designed to be of interest not only to students wishing to pursue careers in operations and supply chain management but also to those interested in careers in marketing (especially brand and channel management) and consulting. The course is also useful to those students who would like to pursue careers where they will be providing external evaluations of supply chains (e.g. in investment, financial analysis) and those with entrepreneurial Upper-level BUSI courses are not available for FYS.

BUSI 583H.001 | Applied Investment Management

W, 3:30 pm - 6:20 pm. Instructor(s): . Enrollment = 15.

Application/Permission Required for this Course (see below)*

Prerequisites: 408, core-requisite: 407

This is a UBP/MBA cross-listed course that follows the second year MBA calendar. It is a course with minimal instruction, where students apply what they have learned to manage a real money portfolio, with feedback on their work from instructors.

Two consecutive terms, earning 6 credit hours OR one term, earning 3 credit hours.

Eligibility:

· Prereqs: BUSI 407 (financial accounting) and 408 (corporate finance)

W: 3:30 PM - 6:20 PM (McColl 2550)

This is a year-long course that begins in the Fall semester. The emphasis of this course will be on the decisions that must be made by, and/or for, the ultimate investor, and the analytic tools and empirical evidence that can help inform such decisions. The objective of this course is two-fold: first, to provide financial analysts with the analytical skills needed to aid such investors; and second, to help individual investors utilize and evaluate the services offered by analysts. Students will apply the principles and techniques of Investment Management by operating as financial planners (analysts) for the Kenan-Flagler Financial Planners. This course will engage students in managing a real portfolio student managed fund.

ENROLLMENT REQUIRES APPLICATION AND PERMISSION OF KFBS.

Non-SILS students are allowed to register for INLS 151, 201 and 161. However, seats are prioritized according to year (freshman, sophomore, and junior). If you receive a `reserve capacity not met, error message for an open course (green dot), it means that all seats reserved for your year are currently filled. You must add yourself to the waitlist in Connect Carolina, as we will not be keeping an internal waitlist. We will enroll from the waitlist as seats become available. Seniors are not allowed to enroll in these 3 courses.

*Undergraduates can only be on one waitlist at a time and 17 hours is the max during early registration.

We will begin to fill available seats from the waitlist in early August. If you are not waitlisted, you will not be allowed to enroll.

Non- SILS students are not allowed to register for all other INLS courses as they are restricted to INLS major, minors and graduate students during early registration. NON-SILS students will need to add yourself to the waitlist in Connect Carolina for the course you are interested in, as we will not be keeping an internal waitlist. We will enroll from the waitlist as seats become available.

*Undergraduates can only be on one waitlist at a time and 17 hours is the max during early registration.

This course explores the critical role of governance for effective nonprofit organizations. In a 21st century context of rapid social and economic change, nonprofit organizations require leaders that can adapt quickly and be accountable to multiple stakeholder groups. Board roles and responsibilities, governance structure, relationships between the board and CEO and board effectiveness are topics that will be explored. The course will include readings, lectures, case studies, discussions, individual and group projects and guest presentations. By the conclusion of the course, students will have a thorough understanding of the challenges and responsibilities of nonprofit board leaders and their unique role as boundary spanners in contemporary American life.

Course Format: Hyflex Oncampus (both formats eligible to enroll, instructor and all participant in person)

Our online course is hosted through Canvas. All required coursework is completed online, asynchronously (pre-recorded lectures). During the semester office hours will be announced, with the option to meet weekly with Dr. Pittman either in-person (Genetic Medicine Building) or online. I will teach 3 sections this semester: Section 001 ; Lecture (Online): everyone taking the course must be enrolled. Sections 401 and 402 ; Lab (online) you must enroll in 1 lab section. For all class sections: exams, quizzes and assignments remain online. I will teach 2 lab sections this semester. Register for either lab section, they are equivalent. Both lab sections will be taught online, asynchronous. The lab is required; you will receive 1 combined grade for lab + lecture (same as this semester).

TITLE: Navigating and Advocating for Your Wellness

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN ED: FY-SEMINAR

DESCRIPTION

Healthcare systems are responsible for fostering the competence and safety of practitioners. Patients and families are integral members of the healthcare team. Therefore, it is essential to ensure that individuals possess the necessary knowledge and skills to navigate the complex healthcare system and advocate for high-quality and safe healthcare to ensure their optimal well-being.

Navigating and Advocating for your Wellness is a dynamic and interactive freshman seminar course designed to empower students with the knowledge and skills

Bios 500H is an introductory course in probability and statistical inference designed for the background and needs of BSPH Biostatistics students.

Topics include survey sampling, descriptive statistics, design of experiments, correlation, probability, confidence intervals, tests of hypotheses, 2-way tables, chi-square distribution, power, ANOVA, non-parametric tests, and linear regression. A small class size will allow opportunity for more in-depth treatment of biostatistics topics.

In addition to traditional introductory statistical concepts, students explore current controversies, ethical questions, and common errors in the medical literature through a variety of readings and a project. Students will be able to produce straight-forward statistical graphs and conduct commonly used analyses using SAS software. Emphasis will be placed on understanding the underlying mathematical concepts in biostatistics, developing SAS programming skills and interpreting results clearly for a non-statistical audience in writing.

During early registration, only BIOS students will be allowed to register. If you are a NON-BIOS student interested in this course, please add yourself to the waitlist in Connect Carolina - you do not need to contact the instructor. Because this is a required course for some incoming biostatistics students who register in the summer, we will not have any information about the availability of seats until just before classes start. We may not be able to take students off this waitlist until mid-August, even though there appear to be open seats in Connect Carolina. We enroll students with this priority: biostatistics students, students in the SPH, students outside the SPH, so the waitlist priority may not reflect the order that students are removed off the waitlist. While we do our best to accommodate interested students, in past semesters, students with lower priority were not able to enroll in the course. *Undergraduates can only be on one waitlist at a time.

TITLE: Environment-ECUIPP Lab: Connecting with Communities through Environmental Research for Public Health

IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FY-SEMINAR

DESCRIPTION

This course is an entry into an undergraduate learning community organized by the Gillings School of Global Public Health, Department of Environmental Science and Engineering. The ECUIPP Lab (Environmentally-Engaged Communities and Undergraduate students Investigating for Public health Protection) is a creative community of students, faculty members and practice partners. Students in ENVR 89-001 will become members of the Environment-ECUIPP Lab. Over the course of the semester they will design and conduct research that addresses a pressing environmental health issue in a local community. Students will work with the local community partner to develop a research question and use the resources of the ECUIPP Lab and the Department of Environmental Sciences and

This course is a 1/2 credit hour class. Students will need to select 1/2 hours when registering.

The course provides a structured opportunity for students to learn and participate in Gillings-wide guest lectures and special events for academic credit and aims to foster an environment of active learning and discussion, encouraging students to engage with the material and with each other. As part of the course requirements, students must attend the following events: (a) 1, 60-minute, synchronous, online orientation session; (b) 1 instructor-designated lecture, and; (c) 3 additional events/lectures from a pre-approved list of online and residential options. This course will include the following graded assignments that contribute to your final grade in the course (1) a final reflection paper; (2) attendance. This course is open to all Gillings students including undergrads and grads/residential, MPH@UNC, and Asheville.
